CARL SIGMUND'S WIFE.

The cloud were massed in crimson glory in the west, and on them were fixed the large, beautiful eyes of the young Countess Hester, who stood looking from one of the many windows of her new home.

It was the eve of her wedding-day. Scarce eight hours previously she had sworn to love, honor and obey Carl Sigmund, until death did them part.

He it was who now occupied her thoughts and shut out the splendid landscape, glinted with the glory of the dying day. Natural enough for the husband to fill heart and mind alike of the bride, yet a frown contracts the low, white brow, an ominous glitter shines in the wonderful gray eyes, and a scornful smile plays about the exquisitely-curved lips, while the little hand, grasping the curtain, is tightly clinched.

A sound breaks her reverie. She quickly turns, as the door of the room is softly opened, and the figure of a tall, powerful man darkens the threshold.

"You find all to your liking, Florence?" he asks, and voice and eyes alike are tender as he puts the question.

"A moment ago—yes," she replies. "I was alone."

A shade darkened his face.

"Alone, Florence? Is my presence really so distasteful to you?"

She shrugged her shoulders and turned her face once more toward the open window.

With one stride he had reached her side, and laid his hand upon her arm.

"Answer me!" he said; and his tone now was a command. "To-day, you swore to make my happiness. I know our marriage was one of convenience; I knew that the Countess Hester would not have stooped to the plebian hand of the rich manufacturer's son, had it not been that the fortunes of her house had sadly fallen; I knew she was no hypocrite, to feign a love she did not feel. But I did not know she gave scorn for love, or hatred for courtesy. She was a woman, I a man. She bridged the social gulf between us when she became my wife. Florence, do you already repent the step?"

"Bitterly! madly," she replied, raising her eyes to his and letting him see the scorn and anger in their depths. "You say I was no hypocrite. I was; but I will be so no longer. You need not talk alone of my ambition. What of yours? You had money—not rank, not social position. These latter I gave you in exchange for your wealth. The bargain is an even one—let us cry quits; but let us have no talk of love, or heart, or sentiment. Let us bury these in a marital grave, and on it uprear a monument of distant courtesy. Do not make me hate you by forcing upon the rights you have assumed. Leave me my solitude, unless when the world demands it otherwise. I will not intrude upon yours."

The young man's face was of an almost ghastly pallor as she finished speaking. His hand dropped from her arm.

"Though I may boast no title, Countess," he said, very slowly, "I claim nobility's truest rank—the rank of a gentleman, to whom the wishes of the woman he has made his wife are law. You have not spared me in expressing yours. Allow me to offer you my deepest sympathy for the cruel fate which tempted you to make the sacrifice on which the church this morning set its seal, and which I for the first time appreciated. Happily, madame, the home to which I have brought you is not a cottage. When you wish for me, command me. Otherwise I beg that you will consider your apartments your castle, at whose gates Carl Sigmund will never knock, either as supplicant or intruder."

He bowed low as he ceased speaking, and slowly recrossed the room. On its threshold he paused.

Did he expect her to call him back, or at least to soften her cruel words? If so, he was wrong. His hesitation was scarcely perceptible. The door closed behind him—the young and beautiful woman was again alone.

An expression of surprise, of almost admiration, swept over her face, then the old scorn blazoned there.

"At least, he understands me now," she murmured; "but for a plebian, he did it well."

Rank for money. It had been a fair exchange, the world decreed; and many a house, hitherto an unknown land to the young inheritor to his father's fortune and the great workshops which covered acres of space in the very heart of the great city, now welcomed him to its fetes and its tables. Fair women smiled upon him, and men who would have once turned their backs, listened to his opinions with attention, which grew into respect.

If the young Countess had expected to be ashamed of her husband, the expectation was destined to disappointment. On every side she heard his praise, and the frown vanished from her brow and the scorn from her lip.

Never did he fail in courtesy toward her; never did she express a wish left unfulfilled. A cheque-book, with blank cheques signature, to be filled up as she wished, lay upon her toilet-table.

Hitherto her life had been one of almost penury, spite of her exalted rank. A marriage de convenance had been the sole resort left her, and she had unhesitatingly availed herself of it.

Her beauty, unrivaled even with its old shabby setting, was now enchanced by exquisite toilets and priceless jewels. She had all that her fondest dreams had pictured, yet day by day a restless, unsatisfied longing was gnawing at her heart, and she looked about in vain for the unknown something which should satisfy it.

Once, as she and her husband were driving home together from some brilliant fete, remembering some remarks concerning him which had reached her ear, she glanced toward him.

"A wonderfully handsome man," a woman high in rank had said, and his wife was compelled to confirm the verdict.

Wonderfully handsome, indeed but how white he looked, and a wan, weary expression was in his eyes and about his mouth.

"Carl, are you not well?" she said, and laid her gloved hand on his arm.

He shivered at her touch, and drew himself hastily away.

At that moment the carriage stopped, and the footman threw open the door. For the first time he permitted the man to assist his wife to alight, he following her up the stairs and disappearing within his rooms.

She mounted the steps slowly, and when within her own apartments, she stood still.

"He has learned to hate me," she said to herself—"to hate me! and I—"

The rest of the sentence was left unfinished.

There was great excitement in the town. The men belonging to Carl Sigmund's factories had struck for higher wages, and he had refused their demands.

It was a principle of right with him. He was both just and generous in the prices paid them, and he determined not to be coerced into a step his judgment told him was but the first toward proving his workmen, not himself, might hold the mastery.

The immense buildings were closed; the heavy looms were still; the drinking-places throughout the city were constantly filled with groups of sullen men, who had already lost what the advance would gain them in a year.

Days merged into weeks, and sullenness found voice, and voice merged into threats, and the threats directed themselves against one man, the master of the works.

"It's all very well for him to ride in a carriage while we starve," they said. "Let him look to himself. Hungry men are desperate."

At last these threats reach his ear. For the first time since that memorable day, almost a year before, he presented himself at his wife's apartments.

As a voice, in answer to his knock, bade him enter, he opened the door. By a strange coincidence, she was standing in the self-same spot, but a deep crimson flush mounted to her forehead, and betrayed her surprise at this most unlooked for visit.

She stepped forward to meet him, but paused. He was the calm, possessed one of the two.

"I would apologize for my intrusion," he said, "but that when I make known its object you will understand its necessity. I heard this morning that the men are banding themselves into rioters. My house will be the first point of attack. I deem it best that you should send your jewels and valuables to the bank, and seek some place of safety with any of your friends whom you may prefer."

"And you?"

"I shall remain here."

"But there is danger."

"True, but no man hitherto, I think, has suspected me of cowardice, and as my post is here, here I will remain. I shall take all measures for my safety, then meet whatever comes. In case of the worst—and doubtless at this juncture my life is threatened—I have left all my affairs in shape, and need only assure you, madame, that my wife's future has been my first concern!"

"Thanks!" she murmured, and bent her head.

He could not see the tear that glistened on the lashes sweeping the lovely cheek.

"I have thought of the Countess Hauptmann," he continued. "She, I am sure, will be delighted to welcome you. Will you choose her house?"

"No."

"Whose, then?"

"I shall remain here."

"Madame, it is impossible."

"And why? You stay; A wife's place is beside her husband."

He smiled bitterly.

"This is scarcely the time, madame, to remember your vows. Forget them, I pray you, in this as in all else. I must insist upon your choosing some other shelter."

She shook her head.

"I cannot," she murmured, in a voice so low that he could scarcely catch the word.

"You cannot? Is there some reason, then, I do not know?"

"Perhaps, but one I may not confess. Respect it, however, I beseech you, and let me remain."

"I could scarcely hope, madame, to be esteemed worthy of your confidence, neither can I use force in compelling you to leave this house but I must exercise a husband's rights in demanding your obedience. The danger is too obvious to permit you to share it."

"Be it so, then. Within an hour my apartments will be vacant."

"Shall I escort you to your friend's house?"

"No. I will go alone, Carl."

She hesitated a moment.

"You will promise me to run no unnecessary risk?"

"No man should trifle with his life. It is God's gift," he answered, and abruptly left her, standing with clasped hands and heaving bosom.

"What care he took to tell me why his life was precious," she murmured. "Yet I do not deserve it? Yes, but not that it should be taken from me. Oh, God spare him, spare him!" and she fell, in bitter weeping, on her knees.

It was midnight when the mob attacked the house. There were loud cries for the master.

"Let him speak, and we will listen," they shouted.

Within his barricaded windows, Carl Sigmund heard and understood. He advanced toward one of the windows and began unfastening the barriers. The foreman of the works seized his arm.

"You are mad," he said. "I have dispatched a messenger for assistance. Show yourself, and your life will not be worth a moment's ransom. It is a pretense to make you show yourself."

"The master! the master!" came the cry.

"They are right," said Sigmund. "They respect—they used to care for me. I will talk to them. If they kill me, a man can not die in a better cause than in his duty. My duty lies in proving my cause right. Let me go."

But at this instant a dress rustled at the door. Carl turned. His wife, pale and beautiful, stood upon the threshold of the room.

Ere his surprise could find words, she was kneeling at his feet, her arms clasped about him.

"My love! my husband!" she cried. "You shall not go! Despise, hate me, as you will. I deserve it all. But, oh, do not cast away the life without which mine could not exist."

He looked at her as if in a dream, then motioned for the others to withdraw, before he lifted her from where she knelt.

"How came you here?" he questioned. "Poor child! the terror has turned your brain."

"No, Carl—no? I could not leave you I said that I would go, only that I might stay. I stay because I love you—because I have loved you from the very day I became your wife, though I scorned and refused to acknowledge the passion which has mastered me. I know that I may never hope to win that which I might once have won; but let me know that you live—let me but see you, hear your voice, and even though you hate me, yet I may glean some happiness."

"Hate you?" he whispered. "My love, my wife! You have indeed made my life a precious boon. But listen, they are calling me. I must go."

"Then I will go with you!" she replied.

And as the fastenings fell at a touch of his hand, she stepped out on to the balcony by his side.

A long low murmur ran through the crowd below. No weapon no armor, could have protected Carl Sigmund as did the presence of that young, beautiful, woman, who stood with hands clasped about his arm.

Silence fell as he spoke a few earnest words. Ere he had finished, the tramp was heard of coming soldiers, but they were not needed. The strike was ended. Calm had taken the place of passion, and reason of anger. But far, far deeper than the external peace between master and men, was that which had stolen into Carl Sigmunds heart—the heart where lay pillowed the fair, haughty head, which like the restless dove sent from the ark, had found at last shelter and sweet rest.

A Wonder of the Yellowstone.

A GORGE WHERE THE ATMOSPHERE IS A NON-CONDUCTOR OF SOUND.

[From the Helena (Montana) Herald.]

James Carrol, a well-known citizen of Helena, recently made a remarkable discovery in the Yellowstone Park. He was alone, waiting for his fellow-excursionists to come up. But let him tell his own story:—"While waiting, I dismounted and sat down on a rock, with my Winchester laying across my knees. Around me was a scene of granduer. I was in a deep gorge which led down into the valley. On each side the gray cliffs towered into a magnificent height. Behind me was the steep path down which I had come through a thick growth of stunted pines, while in front of and below me was the gorge (a quarter of a mile wide) its bottom covered from the foot of one cliff to the other with a heavy growth of timber. After resting awhile I stood up and listened, expecting to hear my friends approaching. But not a sound met my ear. The stillness was so deep that a feeling of uneasiness came over me and I attempted to call out to my companions. But although I opened my mouth and went through all the details of a good lusty yell, not a sound could I make. I tried again and with the same result. I couldn't understand it. My horse, which had been standing quietly by me, noticed a movement of the bushes near by, and probably thinking her equine friends were near, attempted a whinner. It was a sad failure, for she could not make a sound. She was evidently as much astonished as I and became as uneasy. I was on the point of mounting when a fierce-looking wild animal of the panther tribe stepped out of the bushes within about thirty feet of where I was standing. It saw me instantly and stopped to spring at me. I hastily brought my gun to my shoulder and—fired, shall I say? No. I pulled the trigger, but there was no report, although the smoke puffed out of the end of the gun and the wild beast fell as if struck. It immediately jumped up and hobbled into the brush, but leaving a trail of blood behind it. I was now confirmed in my former suspicion that I was in a land of enchantment, and, although not at all superstitious under ordinary circumstance, I would not have been much surprised now to see the devil himself jump out from behind a rock. I immediately jumped on my horse and started back up the path. In about a hundred yards I met my companions, who were all standing close together trying to talk to each other, but although they seemed to be shouting at the top of their voices they were really as dumb as the dead. Although I had felt that Old Nick himself was just as likely as not to be on my trial I could not help laughing at their odd gestures, grimaces and sad faces from their efforts at making themselves heard. There were pretty badly frightened, too. I passed by them and beckoned them to follow me back the way we had come. No attempt was now made at conversation. After going a quarter of a mile in silence I lost my way. One of my comrades who seemed to think he knew the way back to the trail came up close to me and bending over so that his mouth was close to my ear, with a superhuman effort yelled 'Let me lead!' His yell nearly busted my tympanum We had got out of the charmed air."

AGRICULTURAL.

Purchase small trees with plenty of roots rather than large ones with few roots for fall setting.

If you have choice potatoes to keep for seed put them in a box of sand in the cellar. They will not sprout nor freeze.

Lima beans should be gathered as soon as the pods are nearly dry, shelled, and put away in paper bags for winter use.

Cows in milk require but little exercise to maintain good health. The quieter they remain, the richer their milk will be in butter.

Sunflower seed given to a horse at each morning, and night feed will keep him in good spirits and give his hair a sleek appearance.

To keep apples late pack them in tight barrels in plaster (gypsum.) This will keep the air away, and if the apples are originally sound they will not rot for months.

Now is the time to destroy all the fallen fruit which is infested with worms. The larva of the codling moth leaves the fruit, and ascends the tree, where it soon spins its cocoon.

When mildew appears on the lower side of grape leaves it should be checked at once by dusting with flower of sulphur applied with a pair of bellows. This is said to be effective.

It is better to set fruit trees in the Fall when the sap is comparatively at rest, and when the soil and atmosphere favor root growth rather than body growth. Cut in the roots well and take pains in transplanting.

It is a good idea to select potatoes that are to be planted next spring as they are dug this fall, and then give them good care in the winter. Choose tubers from vigorous growing plants, and those that are fully matured.

Frozen roots, or, frozen food of any kind, is very pernicious to swine and all other stock, as it apt to scour them badly, and in any event disturbs their digestion and renders the other food taken into the stomach less nutritious to the animals.

It is better to have all the ground in orchard occupied with vegetables that can be eaten than to allow any part of it to grow up with weeds. Edible plants do not injure the soil anymore than weeds do, and if the first are not planted the last will be sure to grow unless the hoe is frequently used. A better plan will be to use the plow and the hoe and let the orchard be the sole occupant.

"Yes," said the gentleman who wanted to join the crack volunteer regiment, "I went all through the war, and have the documents to show a first-class record. I'm six feet and one inch high, sound as a nut, know the manual of arms, and am well posted on military tactics." "Yes," said the commandant, "these qualifications are no objection, but what waltz step do you dance?"

WELL RID OF HIM.

Mars now vegetates in the little town of L——, S. C. Here he has engaged in the mercantile business and has a fine house and home of his own. Soon after setting up for himself Mars took great delight in gardening, devoting a good deal of attention to his English peas, a favorite vegetable with him. To his great delight they grew up finely, and Mars was in raptures; but, presto! change! something took to destroying them, and his exuberant spirits fizzled down to zero. Mars could not stand it. He put on his studying cap, and, sure that it was some animal, took the sifter, and setting it—with triggers well baited—near the peas, quietly waited the result. This he did in the evening—his enemy making nocturnal raids—and next morning, to his inexpressible delight, he had him securely sitting, reared back, under the sifter, being no less than an old field rabbit. Mars attended to him, and then hastily running into the house to report to his well beloved, with flushed countenance, exclaimed:

"Shane! Shane! I've cotched dat letul raskul dat has bin e'tin' our peas. It was von letul rabbit!"

"Oh! I'm so glad," said Jane, smacking her lips at the thoughts of pie for dinner. "What did you do with him, Mr. Mars?"

"Do mit him—mit the litul raskul? Vy, I takes him oop, and lookin' him in de byes, I smax his jaws an' tells him not to koom back, no mo', sometimes!"

ODDS AND ENDS.

The man who travels under an alias may boast that he has made a name for himself.

Which word would you rather write, "tweedledum" or "tweedledee?"—"Tweedledee," because it is written with more ease—e's.

"Telegraph blue" is a new color. It is the shade of a man's face when he gets a dispatch from his broker asking for more margin.

Thoughts must come naturally, like wild flowers: they cannot be forced in a hot-bed—even though aided by the leaf mould of your past.

You can't make good out of evil any more than you can skim the cream off the top of a pan of milk and then turn it over and skim it off the bottom.

An Illinois girl found that she must either give up her lover or her gum, and after a day's reflection she pressed his hand good-bye and said she would always be a sister to him.

A bridal couple from Washoe Valley at breakfast in a Reno hotel, conversed as follows: He—"Shall I skin you a pertater, honey?" She—"No, thank you deary. I have one already skun."

A contemporary assigns, among the most prominent reasons for revering the memory of Daniel Webster, the fact that he wrote but one short piece of poetry throughout his entire life.

An Austin teacher was calling the roll; just as he called out "Bob Smith," Bob pushed open the door, out of breath and answered: "Here sir." "Robert, next time you must not answer to your name unless you are here." "Yes sir, I'll try not to."

"We have plenty of fresh salt air here, even our lady-boarders wear sol'taires in their ears," said an enthusiastic seaside landlord. "Don't say so!" said the press guest. "Have you a salt rheum in the house?" "Yes, sir," said the landlord; "a humorous correspondent has it."

Available increment—Old Shoddyworth, who had retired from business: "What are you a-doin' of, 'Awkins?" His head gardener: "I was thinning the grapes, sir." Old Shoddyworth: "Oh, I dessay. That won't do wi' me, y' know. What I don't eat I can sell."

Conclusive evidence. "Yes," said Daisy, "I think Jack is in love with me. He hasn't told me so, but when Harry Birch escorted me home from the party last night Jack looked ugly; to-day he took an opportunity to throw an awful hard snowball at Harry's dog."

He bowed to her across the table, smirked, washed his hands in invisible soap and water, and said: "Oxcuse me I dink I het med you at Saratoga, dis summers—my name is Moses." "I cannot recall your face," she airly answered. "But your name is quite familiar to me."

When an old backwoodsman was about to take his first ride on a Mississippi steamer he was asked whether he would take a deck or cabin passage. "Well," he said, in a resigned sort of a way, "I've lived all my life in a cabin, and I guess cabin passage will be good enough for a rough chap like me."

Astonishing bargains: Mrs. Fogg visited a second-hand auction the other day and bought a job lot of kitchen furnishing goods. Fogg says that every article in the list has a hole in it excepting the pepper-box cover and that everything leaks but the cullender and the milk-strainer.

A Newark clergyman informed his people that he intended in a few days, to go on a mission to the heathen. A number of the members waited for the pastor, and expressed their astonishment at the new turn in his affairs, asking him where he was going, and how long they would be deprived of his ministrations. He said to them: "My good friends don't be alarmed; I'm not going out of town."

"Widder Jenkins," said an Ohio farmer, as he bustled into her house one morning, "I am a man of business. I'm worth ten thousand dollars, and want you for a wife. I give you three minutes in which to answer." "I don't want ten seconds, old man!" she replied as she shook out the dish cloth; "I'm a woman of business, worth sixteen thousand dollars, and wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth! I give you a minit and a half to git!" He got.

A very lovely but willful girl went to her father, a celebrated lawyer and said: "Father, I want to marry ——" (naming a handsome but utterly worthless suitor); "may I?" "Well, my dear," said her father with a sigh, "I can't say no, because I know you will have your own way, whether I give my consent or not; but please give me leave to make one remark. There are two things which the wisest and most learned man has never calculate upon—the verdict of a common jury, and the sort of a man a clever woman will marry."

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

It has pleased Almighty God, in the amplitude of His love and mercy, to grant to the people of this State a continuance of the blessings of bounteous harvests, renewed business prosperity, a peaceful submission to lawful authority, and the enlargement of the influences of education and religion. In humble recognition of our dependence upon and gratitude to Him,

I, GEORGE C. LUDLOW, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, inst., as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer throughout the State, and recommend that on that day the people do abstain from their accustomed avocations, and in their usual places of worship do give thanks unto the Lord for His manifold kindness and everlasting mercy, and offer up their prayers for His guidance, protection and blessing.

[L. S.] Given under my hand and privy seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, this tenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and seventh.

G. C. LUDLOW.

Attest: Jos. L. Naar, Private Secretary. 1t

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

The Democratic voters of the city of Plainfield, are requested to meet at the rooms of the Democratic Association, Front street, in the following order, viz:

First Ward—Tuesday, Nov. 21st 1882, at 8 p.m.
Second " —Wednesday, " 22d " " "
Third " —Thursday, " 23d " " "
Fourth " —Friday, " 24th " " "

Each ward will place in nomination two members of the Common Council, one Judge of Election, one Inspector of Election, one Clerk of Election, one constable and one Justice of the Peace, and will also elect delegates to the General City Convention to be held at the rooms of the Democratic Association, on Wednesday the 29th day of November, inst., at 8 o'clock p.m., to nominate candidates to be voted for at the next Charter election, viz: one Mayor, three members of the Common Council at large, one City Judge, two Chosen Freeholders, 1 Assessor, one Collector, one Treasurer, one School Trustee for full term and one School Trustee to fill vacancy, and three Commissioners of Appeal.

The representation of each ward in the City Convention is as follows:

First Ward, [illegible] delegates; Second Ward, [illegible] delegates; Third Ward, [illegible] delegates; Fourth Ward, [illegible] delegates.

By order of the Democratic Executive Com.

LOUIS F. WADSWORTH, Secretary. JAS. E. MARTINE, Chairman.

Dated Nov. 17, 1882.

A WORD IN ADVANCE.

At the coming Charter election of Tuesday, Dec. 5th, the term of office of NATHAN HARPER as a member of the Board of School Trustees, expires. The importance of filling the vacancy thus arising with a man so entirely competent and thoroughly capable as he whose time terminates, cannot be overestimated. In the whole city there is but one that stands on an equality as to ability and fitness; but one who is as perfectly acquainted with the best methods to promote the cause of education in Plainfield, and but one who is so determined that only such methods shall be adopted. The best men of our community will support him, those who have the city's interests at heart will join together in voting for him, and it is but just to credit the election that is sure to result, to the appreciation of both political parties for his many past years of honorable service in municipal affairs. This man is NATHAN HARPER—He only, is worthy to succeed himself.

Another duty that will call for the calm, unbiased judgment of the voter, is the election of a successor to ROWLAND M. STOVER, as a member of the Union County Board of Freeholders. Let us also persuade you to re-elect that gentleman who has been so faithful to your interests, so loyal in advancing all that was best for this community. Lay aside partisanship, forget political prejudice and return to his seat in the Board, Freeholder STOVER who has served you so much better than many and as well as any who preceded him.

VICTORY.

To particularize Democratic success achieved in the recent State elections is superfluous, because so overwhelming.

From Massachusetts Bay to the Golden Horn, and from the waters of Michigan and Erie to those of the Mexican Gulf, come the same tidings of sweeping Democratic majorities, many of them without precedent in the political history of our country.

Everywhere the banner of partisan opposition trails low. States heretofore deemed impregnably Republican have elected Democratic Governors, and as to Congress, the next House of Representatives will contain a Democratic majority of seventy or more.

It has been appropriately termed a Democratic tidal wave.

What caused the floods to rise and submerge, or more directly speaking, what prompted the people to assert their sovereign power so emphatically and topple over a party so long proudly in the ascendant?

It was to vindicate popular rights.

To rebuke the arrogant interference of Federal authority with State elections and affairs.

To teach unprincipled partisanship that there is a point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

To demand that excessive war taxation shall be repealed, and revenue justly raised only for the economical and legitimate wants of government.

That profligate appropriations and expenses shall terminate.

That Star Route and all other kinds of public robbery shall be forever stopped.

That Congress shall discharge its own responsible duties and not shirk them under cover of deceptive Commissions.

That honesty and ability shall be the official rule to the exclusion of all corruption and intrigue.

That the honor of the Republic and general welfare of the People shall outweigh every other consideration.

That gave us the VICTORY.

The People appeal to the Democratic party for protection.

Their imposed trust will be faithfully executed.

Public prosperity is Democratic ambition.

The people have decided that Star Route swindling shall cease.

* * *

The people decree that hereafter the Government at Washington shall attend to its own business.

* * *

Never since the dawn of time was such an animated corpse seen as that of the Democratic party on the morning of Wednesday, November 8th, A. D. 1882.

* * *

It is reported that the comet struck the Republican party in Central New York last week and smashed it—the party, not the comet—into kindling wood.

* * *

We were outspoken in favor of maintaining the sound old-fashioned custom of two terms in Congress. The people of New Jersey are of the same way of thinking.

* * *

The choosing of Representatives in Congress every two years shows the superior wisdom and safety of the American system of government. If a Congressman does wrong, either wilfully or negligently, the people can retire him as they have done and will.

* * *

The Democrats now have twenty-one of the thirty-eight Governors of the United States—either in office or just elected.

* * *

Congressmen-elect Fiedler, of Newark, is said to be the first person of German parentage ever elected to Congress from New Jersey.

* * *

In Nevada the full count of the State shows the election of Cassidy (Dem.) for Congress and Adams (Dem.) for Governor. The Legislature is a tie on joint ballot.

* * *

The Democrats of Piscataway township, Middlesex county, did well in sending back to the Assembly Manning Freeman, who is an able and honest legislator.

* * *

The New Jersey State Board of Canvassers will meet at Trenton on the 28th inst. to canvass the votes for Congressmen. Gov. Ludlow is ex-officio the presiding officer of the board.

* * *

When the people resolve upon vengeance, barrels of money and the best constructed partisan machines are as impotent to resist as Chinese lanterns are to silence well-shotted artillery.

* * *

Robeson hurried off to Washington on Wednesday to look after his $60,000 palace. The meeting between him and Keifer was solemn. Honest men smiled and thanked the Constitution for biennial elections.

* * *

The people declare that war taxes shall be reduced in time of peace, and not kept imposed for the purpose of creating millions of surplus revenue to be corruptly and uselessly expended. The people are honest, the people are right.

* * *

Had the county of Union been accorded her just right to the Congressional nomination, for which we so urgently contended, the Third District would have had Democratic representation in the next Congress instead of Republican.

* * *

When a man goes into the Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy or Treasury, or into Congress as Senator or Representative, poor as a church mouse, and after a few years comes out worth millions, there is a hole in the chest somewhere, Taxpayers!

* * *

Isaac Parker, a well known citizen of Unionville, Burlington county, died of apoplexy while on a gunning expedition with a number of friends. He had just shot a rabbit, when he staggered to a fence in an insensible condition and shortly after died.

* * *

The Warren county official vote is as follows: Congress—Harris, 3,365; Howey, 3,329. Harris over Howey, 36. For Assembly—1st District, Larrison, 1,600; Schoonover, 1,542. Larrison's majority, 58. 2d District, Wildrick 1,792; Bond, 1,769. Wildrick's majority, 23.

* * *

Ross and Harris were defeated by Democratic votes in strong Democratic districts, and Robeson by Republican votes in an equally strong Republican district. The fact cannot be ignored, that, when fully aroused, Vox Populi is the mightiest factor politics can know.

* * *

The re-election of Perry Belmont to Congress by an immense majority is a stunner for Mr. Blaine. The ex Secretary of State, of Peruvian Company notoriety, tried hard to prevent Mr. Belmont's return to Congress and the more he tried larger grew Belmont's support.

* * *

The election of Benjamin F. Butler Governor of Massachusetts by a decided majority knocked senseless the remainder of Federalism. The blue-blooded gentry of Beacon street are wondering "what will come next?" We can tell them—A fearless and efficient Chief Magistrate of the old Commonwealth of Hancock, Adams and Otis.

* * *

One of the boldest defenders of the River and Harbor divide in Congress was Mr. Page, of California, a gentleman of ability and great personal popularity. He represented a section thoroughly Republican and thought himself secure in his seat for all coming time. Alas! How futile are human expectations! The tidal wave struck Page and he too floats a wrecked political hulk.

* * *

The editor and his political friends who positively declared that the Democratic party was dead, now think an appropriation should have been made to deepen the channel of Salt River. The influx of passengers up that historic stream the present month is enormous, and fears are entertained that Robeson's gun-boats will wear their bottoms out endeavoring to escape pursuing wrath.

* * *

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, a patriot whose chief business appears to be the drawing of a large salary out of the public Treasury and the working of political machines over the country, was taken suddenly ill on a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad train the day after election. He had heard about Tuesday's result and the effect was terrible, almost equal to swallowing a drug store.

* * *

Estimates made at Albany give Cleveland 194,000 plurality and pluralities for the other Democratic nominees ranging from 73,000 to 190,000. The Democratic plurality in Pennsylvania is about 38,850. No changes are reported from other States, but the election of John S. Wise, the Readjuster candidate for Congressman-at-Large from Virginia, is confirmed. The Democratic plurality in Indiana is between 10,000 and 12,000.

* * *

The most thoroughly and justly defeated individual in the United States to-day is Chester A. Arthur, and thereat every right thinking citizen ought to rejoice. A man holding the high position of President, who is so utterly devoid of both official and personal propriety as to abandon duty at the National Capitol and lurk for two weeks in the City of New York hob-nobbing with scurvy ward-politicians, forfeits all claim to decent public respect.

* * *

Among the opinions rendered in the Supreme Courts at Trenton, on Thursday of last week, by Chief Justice Beasley, in the "Ring" suit of the Board of Freeholders of Somerset county against Daniel Cory, a member of the Board, for the recovery of alleged illegal expenditures made in the repairs of bridges, the Court granted a new trial upon the ground of the misdirection of the Jury on the part of the Circuit Court Judge, who charged that Cory was responsible for the alleged illegal expenditures notwithstanding the Board approved of the bills for the same. The Chief Justice held that the action of the Board was a ratification of Cory's acts.

The London correspondent of the World in his cable letter says that in England the belief is general that the Republicans of the United States have had as long a lease of power as is good for themselves or the country, and that under proper management the Democrats must succeed at the Presidential election in 1884.

* * *

Corrected returns from the counties of the First Virginia District, all official except one, show that Garrison, Dem., is elected over Mayo, Coalitionist, by 35 majority. It is reported that the official figures from the Seventh District will so change the result there that O'Ferrell's (Dem.) election over Paul, Coalitionist, is assured.

* * *

The election of John Carpenter, Jr., as Senator from Hunterdon County, is gratifying indeed, not only to his many friends in this section who appreciate his fitness for the position, but as an evidence that the foul insinuations cast against his character by partisan and other journals, failed to accomplish the object desired—his defeat.

* * *

Official majorities from 94 counties of the 102 in Illinois, and careful estimates of the other eight counties, give Smith, Rep., for State Treasurer, 7,575 majority, and his election is considered assured. The result on the Supt. of Public Instruction is still in doubt, with chances in favor of Raab, Dem. The State Legislature is Republican by 12 on joint ballot.

* * *

The overwhelming defeat of Judge Folger in New York imparts a lesson of worth. A citizen of untarnished private reputation and of admitted ability, he is notwithstanding rejected by a majority unprecedented in election annals, and why?—Because he was in bad company, the willing tool of political conspirators at Washington.

* * *

George W. Bennett, who was convicted in the Union County Courts at its last term, for purloining money from the drawer of the National State Bank of Elizabeth, by means of a waxed weight worked by a pulley, a full account of which has appeared in these columns, was on Saturday last sentenced by Judge McCormick, to five years imprisonment.

* * *

Judge Scudder of the Supreme Court, Wednesday, on the application of James Neilson, the defeated Democratic candidate for State Senator in Middlesex county, granted an order for a re-count of the votes to be made on the 27th inst. A. V. Schenck, the Republican candidate, was declared elected by the Board of County Canvassers, a few days after the election, by a majority of 40.

* * *

An utter collapse has befallen the Greenback movement. The New York Times thus summarizes it:

The usually accepted analysis of the membership of the present House of Representatives at the opening session was: Republicans, 147; Democrats, 137; Greenback-Republicans, 5; Greenback-Democrats, 2, and Greenbackers pure and simple, 8. Thus of all shades of Greenbackers there were nine, four of whom were from Missouri, two from Pennsylvania, two from Maine, and one from our own State. The next House will not contain a single member elected as a Greenbacker, or accepted by either party from a Greenback convention.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - City Editor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

OH for an Opera House!

CHRISTMAS five weeks from Monday.

CANDIDATES for the City offices are plenty.

THANKSGIVING, one week from next Thursday.

CHARTER election, two weeks from Tuesday next.

IT was an alarm but no fire that called out the Department last Friday evening.

WE publish on our second page the call for Democratic primaries and the City Convention.

OF the thousands of men who'd face death for a woman, only one would empty her swill pail.

THERE is no greater fool than he who thinks himself wise; no one wiser than he who suspects he is a fool.

WE might better have gas-light in our streets than police. The former is a protection when the latter is not.

ON Saturday last, Messrs Clifton & Corlell of this city delivered the last of their contract of 2,000 bushels of potatoes to the State Prison.

THE Ten Eyck House, at Somerville, has changed proprietors, Mr. C. Van Arsdale retiring, and Mr. I. R. Apgar becoming sole proprietor.

THOSE who attended the Meigs Sisters Concert are indebted to the Central Times of yesterday for its settlement of many discussions as to which part each sang.

IT is asserted on eminent medical authority that cigarette smoking produces a more marked depression of the pulse than either cigars or pipes.

VENNOR'S latest prophecy for March features the prediction that St. Patrick's day will come on the 17th. Shouldn't wonder if he hit it that time.

WARREN Hose Co., No. 3, and its friends will have a target excursion on Thanksgiving day, whereat two medals will be shot for. A collation will follow.

WE agree with an exchange that there is a disgusting amount of crime in the newspapers, but the man who has a pimple on his nose can't blame the looking-glass for showing it.

THE thanks of the community are due Councilmen Ginna, Newhall, Rushmore, J. Simpson and R. Simpson for the promised re-lighting of the streets at the beginning of next month.

THE young man who wants to look tony this Winter will have to get something different from an ulster. A red and white blanket, buttoned under the chin, would attract attention.

ONE of the bills introduced in the Vermont House makes the sale or gift of a cigar or cigarette to any one under fifteen years of age a punishable offence. Not a bad law for any State.

NEXT Sunday evening the Young Men's Christian Association will hold its anniversary at the First Baptist Church. The pastors and congregations of this city will unite in the meeting.

JUDGE VAN SYCKLE will receive tomorrow such additional indictments as have been found by the Grand Jury, and discharge that body if—as is expected—it has finished the matters in hand.

"YOUNG MRS. WINTHROP," the new play at the Madison Square Theatre, N. Y., has proven—if possible—a greater success than any of its predecessors. It is undoubtedly the social dramatic event of the season.

THE Fourth Annual Ball of Plainfield Hose Co., No. 2, to be given at Blatz's Hall, on Somerset street, during the evening of Wednesday the 29th inst., promises to be a most gratifying success in every particular.

AND now the statement is made, although from an unofficial source, that the coming Winter will have an unlimited number of snow-storms because there was such a prodigious crop of black-berries last Summer.

REV. Dr. French, of the New York Episcopal diocese, will hold service at the Netherwood Union Chapel, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Evening prayers at 4 o'clock. All are cordially invited to be present.

BACHMAN, at No. 27 West Front street, has just received the largest stock and finest assortment of gloves in the city. Gloves for men, women and children; for walking, driving and full dress, for every body and every thing, at all prices.

IN this week's issue of the Bound Brook Chronicle, its owner again offers for sale the entire establishment. It is well stocked with newspaper and jobbing material, and its purchase by a practical and enterprising printer would eventually bring him financial success.

ONE of Plainfield's ministers recently boasted of having voted for every Republican President since Lincoln and of being successful every time. The success of the fraudulent scheme that placed Hayes in the White House, is something that no man should boast of.

IN the Union Courts in the case of P. Sheridan, Collector of Union County, vs. Henry S. Langstaff, Treasurer of Rahway, mandamus, the jury, without leaving their seats, rendered a verdict for the county, and found the taxes due for 1880, with the interest to date, to amount to $26 315.74.

EVERYONE knows what "pleasant and enjoyable occasions are those evening entertainments and dances given by the Saengerbund during the Winter season, and all are anxious to secure invitations to the jolly affair that is to take place at the rooms of the Society, Thanksgiving Eve, the 29th inst.

SOME people display their ignorance in asserting the absence of cement in the stone foundation just constructed on the Plainfield side of Green Brook to sustain the proposed Grove street bridge. From a personal knowledge we can state that forty-five barrells of cement were used in that foundation alone.

AT last the Board of Education has awarded the contracts for erecting the new Grammar School building. Messrs. Sparks & Hill do the carpentering work and Mr. Isaac Pangborn the masonry. Lower bids for the same work having been rejected, Judge Harper voted "no" on granting the above.

SOME person unknown entered the bar-room of the City Hotel during the early morning of Sunday last, by a side window opening into the yard on Second street. About $65 was taken from the cash drawer, two boxes of cigars and a drink of liquor from the bar. No clue is possessed of the burglars.

WHITNEY, opposite the post office, is drawing large custom to his establishment by offering fine dress goods and trimmings, at low prices, besides presenting each purchaser of one dollar or more of his handsome stock with an elegantly painted palette or beautifully decorated dust-pan.

THE Proprietor of the Warren House, at Hackettstown, has had the following notice published in the Gazette:

"Wanted—One hundred old settlers, every night in the week, to talk about the drought of '49, the panic of '57, the frosty summer of '43 and the warm winter of '58. Cushioned chairs reserved for the biggest liars."

WE publish to-day the Official Canvass of Union County, and would herewith call the attention of our more or less "esteemed contemporary" the Elizabeth Journal to the fact that in its publication of the same the totals of Messrs Ross and Woodruff are incorrect—making a difference to the former of 440 votes less than he received.

TWO ladies, one evening recently, sought protection at the house of Mr. Ellis Potter, explaining that they had been chased by a man who had stepped out of the City Park and followed them. Unlighted streets are to blame for such occurrences, yet four members of the Council at its last meeting voted to keep the City in darkness.

THE entertainment this evening in the chapel of the Crescent avenue church, for the benefit of the Plainfield Mission Band, will consist of a programme unusually pleasing in which Miss Helen M. Phelps, pianist; Mrs. W. U. Moyer, soprano; Miss Julia A. Orum, elocutionist, and Mr. Theo. W. Troswodt, violinist, will take part. Refreshments will be served in the parlors at the close.

MESSRS. Ford & Stiles, the successors of David Lennon in this city, have laid in a most complete and handsome stock of Undertaker's goods of every description. Caskets and coffins of every style and price are shown, with a large assortment of inside and outside trimmings for finishing to the satisfaction of all tastes. A full line of robes, also, is kept on hand, which meets a demand and will prove a great convenience.

MESSRS Watson & Co., are taking the lead among Newark clothiers by reason of their liberal dealing. This firm is now displaying an unusually large stock of clothing for the present season, comprising suits and overcoats of both domestic and foreign woolens trimmed with the best material, and possessing the same correctness of cut and care in manufacture that is given the finest custom work that would cost five times as much.

The celebrated Sussex buckwheat flour is now for sale at J. M. Dunn's on Park opposite North avenue.

WEDNESDAY afternoon last a number of little lads were playing around a threshing-machine laid up for repairs in Kenyon's shop, when Willie Symons, aged nine years, had two of his fingers crushed between the cog-wheels.

THE interior of the Post Office has been closed in from floor to ceiling and is to be heated by steam under contract with the Gorton Steam Heating Co., of Dunellen, whose Generator has given satisfaction wherever used. Mr. John N. Schenck does the piping.

DURING a speech at the Fourth Ward Primary of Monday evening a prominent clergyman of this city stated that the Republican party is the party of temperance and reform. This statement is inconsistent with the fact that the only Prohibition member elected to the N. J. Legislature is a Democrat from Monmouth county.

ONE of our "City Fathers," last Sunday evening, was appealed to for protection by a woman who had become lost in the City's unlighted streets and terribly beaten by a brute emboldened by the darkness. We wonder what that Councilman then thought of himself for voting, on Monday evening of last week, against re-lighting the lamps.

JUST before eight o'clock of Thursday morning, a fire broke out in a small shed, back of Shaw's Pharmacy, filled with waste paper, empty boxes and other rubbish. The fire, which is supposed to be the result of "spontaneous combustion," burned fiercely but was kept confined to the building where it originated by the creditable work of No. 1 Engine Co., which was the first to get water. The loss was about $50 to R. J. Shaw, on which there was no insurance.

WHEN an editor makes a mistake in his paper all the world sees it, and calls him a liar. When a private citizen makes a mistake nobody knows except a few friends, and they come around and ask the editor to keep it out of the paper. When the private citizen dies the editor is asked to write of all his good qualities and leave out the bad. How often when the editor dies the private citizen says, "Now that old liar will get his deserts."

NEXT Sunday the pulpit of the Crescent avenue church will be occupied by the Rev. Sheldon Jackson, D. D., who has for years been identified with the work of Presbyterian Home Missions. Dr. Jackson is one of the practical men, having traversed hundreds of miles of the West on horseback, and often slept in the open air. He is an eloquent speaker and full of stirring facts and incidents. Having recently paid a visit to Alaska and Oregon, he will no doubt have something of interest to say about those regions.

Temperance.

Howell division Sons of Temperance will hold a public meeting in their room, White & Stelle's building, Front street and Park avenue, on Tuesday evening next, 21st., commencing at 7:30 o'clock. The exercises will be of a varied character. All who may desire to attend will be welcomed.

A Thanksgiving Appeal.

Killed on the Rail.

The morning Philadelphia express on Tuesday was running at a high rate of speed just after leaving this city, when its engineer noticed a man walking between the rails directly ahead of the locomotive. The whistle was blown its full force without receiving any attention from the pedestrian, who tramped on with his back to the coming danger. Expecting the man to step out of the way at the whistle's warning long before the engine reached him, its speed was not slackened, and the mighty force striking the heedless victim hurled him from its way. Stopping to pick up the body, the train carried it to Dunellen, from whence it was sent back to this city and placed in the morgue. Papers in the pockets of the man, who examination proved had been instantly killed, identified him as Byron Smith, formerly a member of Company B., 3d Reg't, N. Y. Artillery. These documents showed his honorable discharge after five year's service and his [illegible]

Knocked Down.

Just after midnight, during Saturday morning last, Collector Van Norstrand and Mr. L. B. Boice of North Plainfield were awakened by the report of a pistol shot. Hearing the groans of some person in the street outside their residences, they dressed and going out doors found Mr. John Goodwin lying insensible on his back at the crossing at the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets. The unfortunate man was conveyed to Hughes' hotel and Dr. M. B. Long summoned, who found that he had been struck a severe blow between the eyes with either a sling-shot, a loaded billy or other blunt weapon. The victims account of the affair is about as follows: By reason of sickness in the family, Goodwin was compelled to go to the office of Dr. H. H. Lowrie, and was returning home about two o'clock of Saturday morning when he met two strange men standing on the Chatham street crossing. Stepping by them he glanced up and just noticed that one of the pair was a tall, strapping fellow, when he heard an oath and suddenly received a terrible blow on the forehead. As Goodwin staggered a step or two—stunned and but dimly conscious—he managed to draw his pistol and fired it seemingly in the face of his assailant. The two turned and fled, while their victim sank senseless to the ground. The proprietor of Hughes' Hotel on being called up, opened his house and gave the victim every attention that could be desired. Although for the first few hours Goodwin's condition was serious, by the careful attention of Dr. Lowrie he is again able to be out, feeling as "well as could be expected."

A Hint to Advertisers.

About this time of the year advertising sharks begin to lay plans to gull and rob business men with holiday sheets and schemes. They are never half what they are represented, and many of them never circulate at all, and the only ones benefited are the sharks and schemers. Business men should be very careful not to throw away a large share of their holiday profits on these advertising frauds. The newspaper is the only sure, safe and legitimate medium of communication with the people.

Band of Hope Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Band of Hope, held during Tuesday the 7th inst., the following officers were re-elected: President—Mrs. A. Vanderbeek; Vice President—Mrs. Wade; Secretary—Miss Sarah D. Jones; Treasurer—Miss Clemmie Yates. An Advisory Board was chosen consisting of the following: Mrs. S. F. Dunn, Mrs. A. E. Roberts and Mrs. Haviland, re-elected, and Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. Chas Potter to fill the places of Mrs. Bliss and Mrs. Lamson, whose terms of office had expired.

The Fair for St. Joseph.

The close of the recent Fair at Van Deventer Hall, in aid of St. Joseph's (R. C.) church of North Plainfield, occurred on Thursday evening of last week, and so successful were the efforts of its managers that about one thousand dollars will be the amount cleared. The winner of the gold-headed cane to be voted the most popular merchant, was Mr. James Conneely of Park avenue who is entirely overcome with the compliment. The drawing of the lucky number that would gain the $100 in gold, was set down for Saturday, but as some person unknown had purloined five of the books containing the names of about 125 buyers of chances, the raffle was postponed. These books, although advertised, have not been recovered, yet most of the names in them are known, and if the few still unknown will send their names to Father O'Hanlon they will be registered and the drawing take place next Wednesday or Thursday in Laing's Hall.

Highway Assault.

A female domestic (recently landed) in the employ of J. B. Dumont, Esq., of Seventh street, was terribly assaulted on the streets during Sunday evening last. Not being acquainted with Plainfield's thoroughfares, the woman had been escorted to church by another servant and was returning alone when she lost her way. A man whom she met offered to direct her home, but instead lead the way to a vacant lot where the assault was committed. During a struggle that ensued the woman was thrown to the ground and severely handled, but the strength of her resistance and the scratches and kicks she liberally bestowed upon the person of the aggressor impelled him to leave her. She subsequently met a gallant member of the Common Council who directed her to the residence of her employer. The unfortunate woman's face the next day was one entire black-and-blue spot, and she was unable to open her eyes for some hours. She probably would be unable to identify her assailant should he ever be secured.

Knights of Pythias Reception.

Last Friday night Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P. of this city, was honored by a visit from their brethren of Henry Clay Lodge of Newark, who arrived in a special train of three cars. Woodland Lodge of Jersey City, Elizabethport Lodge, of the "Port," Somerset Lodge of Somerville and the Good Will of Scotch Plains were largely represented. The visiting brethren arrived about 8 o'clock p. m., and were met and taken charge of by a committee of Perseverancers and escorted to the rooms of the latter, corner of Front street and Park avenue. After the ordinary business of the evening had been concluded, speech-making was indulged in by brother Ward, (Newark's one armed post master) P. G. C. Rutan and others; after which the meeting was closed, or rather adjourned, and the visitors were directed to follow their entertainers, who led the way through the darkness, down Front street to the hall used as the Democratic headquarters, where was found a very substantial "lay-out" in the way of appetizing viands furnished largely by the wives and sisters and ——— of the members of "74." The visitors did full justice to themselves as well as to the hospitality of "Perseverance." After this exercise had been concluded, all, or nearly all, returned once more to the Lodge room, where a feast of oratory such as the visitors never dreamed of awaited them. After all had been seated and perfect quietness had been secured, brother Cadwallader "what's-his-name," arose. In an instant the attention of all present was riveted (and clinched) to the speaker. He stood for a moment or two in all the beauty of his perfect manhood and began his oration. He spoke about forty minutes. His attitude was striking. His "spread-eagleism" was grand beyond expression. His manner was most majestic; his gestures were inimitable; his arguments unanswerable and his pathetic appeals actually brought tears to (but, not out of) the eyes of all present. It was conceded by all that this was the grandest oratorical effort of his *life—in fact the speaker fairly out-Jones*ed himself and everybody else. Of course poor human nature began to wilt and sink down under the effects of this terrible oration which seemed to make as sad a havoc as a battery of Gatling guns. Eyes were seen to roll and chins to drop, in addition to other infallible signs of physical and mental exhaustion. It is not positively known, even at this writing, how many poor victims staggered, or crawled, or were dragged out to the anteroom for the purpose of being resuscitated, while no one present seemed to have presence of mind enough to "shoot him, (the orator) on the spot," *and he was al*lowed to orate on and on until he became utterly exhausted and sank into a seat. A few vacant stares by those who remained in the room was about the only applause that was given, or required. The writer being called upon, as usual, to say something, crawled out from under the table—whither he had taken refuge—and did so, after having taken a few minutes to breathe. Perfect order being finally restored, brother Eugene V. Lorton, G. K. of R. and S., arose and announced that he had a very pleasant duty to perform, viz: to present on behalf of the Lodge, seven Past Chancellors with jewels, in recognition of their past services to the Lodge in the days of its adversity. The presentation speeches were appropriately responded to amid much applause. Brother Jackson of "74" being called on, recited "Mary Stuart" in a very creditable manner. Other brethren followed with recitations, songs, etc., until about one o'clock in the morning, when this long-to-be-remembered entertainment came to an end—the result of which is that the bond of union existing between the brethren of these Lodges of Knights, will be even more closely cemented than before. The visiting brethren left for the depot, being guided thither by a squad of Perseverancers—the night being as "dark as a twenty acre field of black cats"—and boarded the cars a few minutes after one a. m., shouting many good Knight's to the "74's."

We entrusted the task of getting up an accurate report of this entertainment to a young Knight of Scotch Plains with instructions to spare neither time, expense nor trouble in doing so. If it shall transpire that he has used any indiscretion in his remarks, we beg his pardon.

Unlicensed Liquor Selling.

The prosecution of an offender against the liquor-license ordinance was begun on Monday, when Corporation Counsel Marsh filed the papers in the office of the City Judge, the affiant being Captain of Police C. W. Dodd. The charge was of an unlicensed sale of fermented liquor. Upon being arraigned, defendant pleaded guilty, and asked for clemency. The Corporation Counsel addressed the Court at length urging, that the full penalty of fine and imprisonment be imposed, as an example was needed, and he saw no extenuating circumstances in the case. The Court sentenced him to pay a fine of $50, or in default of payment, to imprisonment in the County Jail for twenty days.

The Official Returns.

The Board of Officers authorized by law to receive and canvass the county election returns, met on Friday last at 12 o'clock at the Court House, Elizabeth. Matthias L. Doty was chosen chairman, and John L. Crowell acted as Clerk. When the Board organized there was no representatives present from the First ward of Elizabeth, the Fourth ward of Plainfield, Fourth ward of Rahway, and from Westfield. A recess was then taken till 1.30 p. m. Another delay was caused on meeting after the recess, because there were no returns for Congress from the First district, First ward, Elizabeth. The canvass was proceeded with, the other districts being taken up. Next there was a discrepancy of 52 votes in the returns from Summit, Morgan being credited with 80 votes instead of 28. Mr. B. Terlinde protested that Mr. Morgan received 32 votes.

There were several errors in the returns, and the Board of Canvassers had them corrected. Several of the returns were made out in brief when they should have been in full, and the result was to make several hundred votes "scattering." The Board allowed all votes where the intention of the voter was evident, and the table elsewhere given includes all the scattering votes for each candidate. Mr. McMullen, Independent Democratic candidate for Congress, received eight votes *in Union county; one in the Second dis*trict Third ward of this city, two in the Third ward of Plainfield, three in the 4th ward of Plainfield, and two in Summit.

Concert and Readings.

At the Park avenue Baptist church during Thursday evening of last week, was given an entertainment for the benefit of that organization which attracted and delighted a large audience of Plainfield's best. The programme was a varied one that proved the taste and judgment of those who arranged it, and displayed to advantage the talents of the several artists. Miss Van Nameo, a graduate of the Seminary, opened the evening's diversion as well as part second of the programme, with classical compositions of Thalberg and Liszt. The pieces were showy if not pleasing, and their execution was—well, worthy of a better instrument. Miss Mary L. Runyon achieved as was assured, her usual success. This lady elocutionist is so special a favorite with our public, that neither her performances nor our estimation can raise or lower the height of the pinnacle of greatness upon which the citizens of Plainfield—and else where—have placed her. The bright particular luminary of the occasion was the Meigs Sisters Quartette, respectively the Misses Hattie, Jennie, Edith and Florence. That the singing of these young ladies proved their possession of good voices and evidenced experience and careful training, is undeniable. But neither the honor of being "The Only Female Quartette in America" nor even the credit of being unequalled, belongs to this four. We do not wish to detract from the general excellence of their vocal achievements, but one, at least, of their selections we have had the pleasure of hearing more agreeably given by the Myers Sisters Quartette in this same city. Each number of Thursday evening's programme as rendered by the vocalists was deservingly encored—except the last, which, by reason of the hurry of a Plainfield audience to turn its back on whoever the artist may be, is universally disregarded no matter how meritorious.

The colored ball under the management of Professor John W. Nelson, was largely attended on Thursday evening last at Lyceum Hall. There was a large number of persons from Newark, Plainfield and Elizabeth. The boys want to know who Doss was mashed with.

J. H. Manning, assisted by Mr. John J. Willis, one of the Game and Fish Protective Society men, drew Mr. Embree's pond with a net to get some carp for the purpose of re-stocking the ice pond which was carried away by the late freshet, but failed to find any of the finny tribe.

The concert given by the Irma Glee Club of Philadelphia, was slimly attended on Monday evening last owing to rain prevailing at the time. There were only 100 persons present. The programme was well rendered and well deserving of a crowded house, which they no doubt would have if repeated.

Complaint has been made by a number of our citizens who have promptly paid their monthly subscriptions towards lighting our town, on account of the neglect of the person employed to light the lamps on Monday evening last, it being very dark and stormy. Perhaps Townley was waiting for the moon to rise. Look at the almanac.

The plans for the construction of two cottage houses on the Jerusalem road by Chas. L. Hausaman, opposite the residence of E. Embree, Esq., are fine specimens of architecture. The cellars are already completed. The carpenter work is under the direction of John N. Wilcox. George Todd has the contract for the mason work. We are glad to note this improvement in that portion of our town.

On Saturday afternoon last, County Physician Terrill assisted by Drs. Fritts of Plainfield and F. A. Kinch, of Westfield, made a post-mortem examination upon the body of William Eustice, who was found lying between the tracks of the Central Railroad in Plainfield at an early hour of Thursday morning of last week, in an unconscious condition. He was brought to the residence of his parents at Westfield, where his death occurred on Thursday evening. The cause of death as certified by the Physicians at the post-mortem, was found to be a very severe fracture of the skull, on the right side of head above the ear, extending five inches in length. It seems that Eustice went to Cranford on Wednesday evening, in company of several young men, and stopped at Lamberding's Hotel. He left Cranford on the midnight train and sat on the steps between two express cars, when he arrived at Westfield he got off the train and before it started got on again, and was heard to make the remark that he was going to Plainfield. It is supposed that when he got back on the train he sat on the steps and fell asleep, and must have fallen off at the point where he was picked up by the Philadelphia train going East at 3:20 on Thursday morning. His funeral occurred on Sunday last; he was interred in the Catholic Cemetery at Plainfield.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

Don't be a Clam!
You shouldn't pattern after a Clam. They open their shells, take their food, but the moment anything new appears, they shut up, and will have nothing to do with it. Now, what's the use of being a CLAM! You are suffering with Malaria or Chills and Fever, "Titsworth's Sure Cure for Malaria," may be to you a new idea—within the hard shells of prejudice you say—"I know that nothing seems to help me, I've almost made a Quinine mine of myself, without avail—still ill—shake!"
Of course you will, If you will be a Clam! Now, don't be a Clam! Give us a chance to prove to you that "Titsworth's Sure Cure" will positively cure you of Malaria! 40 drops will arrest the disease in 12 hours. Day is no more certain to follow night, than a complete cure is to follow the taking of this Remedy. Don't be a Clam!

SPOOPENDYKE AS A FARMER.

"This," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he gazed around on his new acquisition of six acres—"this, my dear, is what I've always wanted. A farm and a farmer's life are the highways to success. Mrs. Spoopendyke don't you think so?"

"It's perfectly lovely," rejoined Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I was born on a farm and was always healthy, though I had to go a good ways for water."

"I'll fix that, my dear," returned Mr. Spoopendyke. "I'll bring the water. Now, where are my agricultural reports? I must plant right off if we are going to have crops, and when they are ripe we'll take them to market."

"I see the report says you must give your hen, chopped turnip once in a while," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, putting her thumb on the paragraph.

"Either that or cabbages," returned her husband. "I don't know whether we'll have cabbages enough," he continued, musingly.

"You might have less buckwheat," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I think, though, that two acres would be enough for one hen; and if it isn't, you can buy a load now and then from the neighbors."

"I'll think that over," replied Mr. Spoopendyke. "Here's one thing certain I don't understand. It says we should test a few seeds before planting, to be sure they will germinate; but it don't say how to do it."

"Maybe it means to boil them," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke; or perhaps you—"

"Oh! perhaps you think it means to crack 'em with an axe to see if they are hard! I s'pose you've got an idea you stick straws into 'em to see if they're done! Well, you don't; you put acid on them. I'll get some acid and drop them in, and if it discolors them they are no good, and if it don't they're all right. I think we ought to have some weevil for the pig."

"I don't know where you're going to plant it," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, "unless it will grow with buckwheat or onions. You can't put it in with the cabbage, because the pig and hen would fight."

"Don't you know what weevil is?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, glaring at his wife. "Got a notion it is some kind of weed for the pig to smoke, haven't you? Imagine it's gilt-edge note paper with a monogram for you to write on, don't you? Well, it isn't a swallow tail coat or a plug hat for him to go to church in, neither! You don't plant weevil, Mrs. Spoopendyke, any more than you do soap, clothes-pins or stair rods. You buy it in barrels and I'll order some."

"I think we ought to have some lace curtains for the front windows," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, anxious to change the conversation.

"Yes, and we want a folding bedstead for the cow, and we've got to have a new arm-chair for the pig, and I'm afraid those cabbages won't do without a wet nurse!" squealed Mr. Spoopendyke. "I suppose I've got to hire a man to see that the meadow don't go fishing on Sundays and upset your religious notions. Oh, you're a farmer's wife, you are! If I had time to write an index to you and get some dodgasted binder to fit you up and with a fly-leaf, you'd make a whole agricultural report."

And Mr. Spoopendyke shot into the house and to bed, while his wife, having put all the oil lamps into buckets of water so they couldn't explode during the night, fell asleep, dreaming that the cabbage patch had eloped with the onions, while the cow and the pig had died of weevil, and the windmills had abandoned agricultural pursuits and started off through Ohio preaching the gospel.—Brooklyn Eagle.

FROM "TALES FOR TODDLERS."

One evening Lucy's Young Man did not keep his engagement to come and help her Hold Down the Sofa and she was very angry, because the Young Man generally brought along a box of Candy and Lucy could make it Look Tired about as easily as any Girl in town.

So she sat down at the Piano and began to sing. After she had given the folks a Sample of "When the Roses Bloom Again," "Only a Pansy Flower," "Empty is the Cradle," and a few other Gems of Melody that would make a man feel like committing Murder, her Father said that perhaps she had better Quit, as he didn't care about having the Patrol Wagon making useless trips on such a cold night.

Lucy made no reply to this remark of her Father's, but only slammed the music down pretty Hard, probably to show what she could do in case she should ever Get Real Hot. Then she began to play the Piano, starting in with "The Battle of Prague." When she had finished the piece her Papa went across the Room to where his eldest son was sitting and handed him Fifty Dollars.

"Why, Papa," said Lucy, "what are you giving James all that money for?"

"Your brother bet me Fifty Dollars," he replied, "that you would knock out the Piano in the First Round, and I am given up the Boodle."

Then Lucy began to Cry, and said that her Father and Brother were Nasty Horrid Things. But they only laughed at her, and when she had gone up stairs her Papa said to James: "Let us open a Small Bottle."

Men are very Curious Creatures, children. They will frequently open a Small Bottle, and then go home and tell their Wives that times are too hard to buy a new Bonnet. But sometimes these men Lose Their Grip, and turn up about Thirteen or Fourteen o'clock at night, having had to hire a hack to get home in, and then somebody gets a Sealskin Sacque.

I think it serves them right. Don't you agree with me children?

ANECDOTE OF FRANK JAMES.

Among the anecdotes which the admirers of Frank James love to relate to the glory of their hero is one belonging to the period of the Columbia (Ky.) bank robbery. When the members of the band had decided upon that exploit they spent a week in exploring the surrounding country in the guise of cattle-buyers, Frank James being hospitably entertained for several days at the house of a well-to-do farmer. During that time he diligently cultivated the social amenities, frolicked with the children and made himself particularly agreeable to their grandmother. The old lady's chief delight in life was to peruse the Pilgrim's Progress. James professed to be deeply interested in that work, pored over it by the hour, and when, finally, he took his departure, begged her not to disturb the mark which he had placed at the point where he was to stop. A few days later, when the country was ringing with the story of the murder and robbery, the old lady refused to believe that her pious young friend was a desperate villain.

POETRY.

THE OLDER SHE GREW.

My grandchild sat upon my knee,
(A little blue-eyed girl was she),
I kissed the dimple in her cheek—
"Now, Bessie, darling, while I speak:
I hear you're growing wild each day,
Because with boys you like to play.
You're far too old for that, I fear,
Just ten years old to-day!"

The dimples fast in chin and cheek,
At my reproof played hide and seek.
"Why, grandma," my grand-child said,
And tossed her curly, golden head—
"Why, grandma—the boys—like me,
And so—I like the boys, you see,
And maybe—as I older grow
I'll like them better, don't you know?"

Ah, well! eight years have fled away;
My grandchild came to me to-day,
With orange blossoms in her hair,
And knelt beside the old armchair.
Through happy tears she looked at me
(My blue-eyed darling, fair to see);
And of the careless days gone by,
We talk a little, she and I;

Till on the stair a step was heard
Which all my child's soft blushes stirred.
'Twas he whom she had chosen alone
To love the best when older grown.
And when the hour had come at last,
And solemn vows had bound them fast,
Shyly my grandchild came to me.
"I'll play no more with boys," said she.

HEARTFELT THANKSGIVING.

It was the 26th of November, the day before Thanksgiving, and of all our pleasant old "Thanksgiving Days" at the farm, I remember this one as the most gratifying and delightful. Not that we had a merrier time, or a better dinner; but that day we had special cause to be thankful. We were thankful that we were alive to eat any sort of a dinner, so narrow had been our escape but a few hours before from a sudden and terrible death.

Up to the 26th the weather had been warm and bright almost every day. No snow had yet fallen, which was unusual at this season of the year in Northern Maine. November, it was said, had been all "Indian Summer."

But that day—the 26th—there came a change. The Indian-summer softness and brightness had disappeared. The air was very still, but a cold, dull-gray haze mounted into the sky and deepened and darkened. All warmth went out from beneath it. There was a kind of stone-cold chill in the air which made us shiver as we got out of the bed that morning.

"There's snow coming, boys," father said to us at breakfast. "I can feel it. Bank up the house this forenoon, warm and snug, so that the cellar won't freeze. And this afternoon you must go up to the back pasture and drive down the sheep."

The back pasture was on the northern side of the mountain, nearly a mile and a half from the farm. It contained two or three hundred acres, including several straggling clearings which extended over the adjoining hills and ridges.

So after dinner, we muffled ourselves in thick jackets and "comforters," and taking the salt-dish, set off across the now bare fields for the back pasture. Alvin Green, a boy about our own age, the son of a neighbor, went along with us.

It had grown colder than it was in the forenoon, and the sky was completely overcast. It seemed as if night was coming on, the air and the landscape looked so dim and drear.

We went round the mountain to the pasture and called the sheep; but they were not there, and were not in sight on the hills. It was then about three o'clock in the afternoon, and we spent at least an hour more going round the pasture looking in the little openings along the edges of the woods and calling the sheep.

"They're not in the pasture," said Al. "They've gone over into 'Dunham's open.' Had we better go after 'em?"

Dunham's open was a clearing about two and a half or three miles to the eastward of the back pasture, where a man named Dunham had cleared land for a farm six or eight years before, but afterward abandoned it. There were fifty or sixty acres of it; and the grass was good there.

We knew that the sheep used sometimes to go through the woods to this open when the "feed" was not good in the pasture; and following one behind another, they had made a path which it was easy to trace in the summer. But now all these paths were covered with dry leaves.

We stood for minutes on one of the hills in the pasture and looked down upon the wide extent of forest to the east.

"What say you? Shall we go?" Al asked?

Ben thought we might as well. "It is going to storm," said he. "It storms now, way over on the mountains. We shan't want to search for them to-morrow. The sheep ought to be got home. Let's go." And we set off on a run down through the pasture, and entered the woods for the shortest cut across the valley.

We had not gone more than a mile before snow began to fall, not in large flakes, but thick and fine as meal. It came with a sudden gush, which seemed, in a moment, to darken all the woods; and a strange sound accompanied it,—not like the roar of a shower, but as of a vast dreary sigh of all the mountains. The wind stirred the great bare tops of the trees overhead; and the snow, like powered ice, sifted down through them and rattled incessantly on the beds of leaves.

"It's going to be a tough one!" said Al., "a real no'theaster."

"Seems to me we ought to be near Dunham's brook!" Al. exclaimed, at length.

Ben stopped. "I'm afraid we've got to far down south," said he.

At this we took a tack to the north, as we thought, and then ran on again. It was snowing so thickly and everything looked so odd, that we had to guess as to the course. On we ran for ten minutes at least, and must have gone a mile, but we did not come to the brook. Then we stopped again; and by this time we were a little frightened.

"We've run off below the bend," Ben exclaimed; and they we tacked farther to the north.

I should think we hurried on for ten minute again, as fast as we could run, when we came suddenly on the brink of a deep gorge, which opened, up to the left, on a broad frozen pond.

For a minute or two we stood completely at a loss. "That can't be Stone Pond, can it?" Ben exclaimed.

"Well, it is!" said Al. "For there's the log dam; and look, right down here in the hollow's the camp where Adger lumbered winter before last. I know it by those three big pines, on the bank above it."

"Then we're seven miles from home!" said I.

"Yes; and four or five miles north of Dunham's open—instead of south of it!" exclaimed Al. "And here Ben thought we were south of it!"

"How could I tell?" muttered Ben.

"Well, we cannot get the sheep and get home to-night," I said.

"We can't even get home," Ben said. "It'll be pitch dark in half an hour."

Al. was already running and sliding down the steep side of the gorge. "Come on!" said he; "let's get into the old camp."

This camp stood on the bank of the brook, a little below the dam, and was built of fir logs, with a roof of split shingles. It was fourteen of fifteen feet square, and had sufficed to lodge ten men, winter's before. Since then it had been deserted.

There was no doubt that this was Adger camp; for I remembered the three big pines which stood on the bank, up fifteen or twenty feet above the camp. The reason the lumbermen had not cut them was because of the great "scalds" on the trunks, caused by forest fires years before. Either of the three trees was from four to five feet in diameter; and they were of great height. Besides these trees, there stood with them the great bare stub, forty or fifty feet tall, of another large pine.

Inside, the old shanty looked dark and cheerless; and it had an unsavory order. It did not have windows; a strong cleated door, on wooden hinges, shut closely enough to keep out the storm.

A rusty stove stood in one corner, with a still rustier funnel running up through the low roof. There was a great table, made of rough boards; and along the back side extended a bunk of old yellowed fire boughs, on which the men had slept.

But any sort of a shelter looked inviting to us that night, with the storm increasing and the wind rising. We entered, and then began searching to see what the former occupants had left behind them in the way of "supplies," eatables or otherwise.

There were a number of old axes; and in a salt box there was a nearly entire quarter-gross of matches. In another salt box there was a little salt; and in an old half cask there were two or three quarts of "yellow-eyed-beans." That was all; no flour, no pork.

"Well, then, we'll have boiled beans and salt!" Al. exclaimed.

Ben split up three old benches, got some branches outside, and built a fire; and Al. ran out to the brook and dipped up water in the stove kettle. We soon had beans cooking, but it took nearly two hours to boil them soft.

It was a plain supper, beans and salt; yet I have eaten far less savory dishes. By eight o'clock in the evening our appetites had grown sharp enough not to be squeamish.

It was rather cosey, too, round our hot stove. We were a little anxious because our folks at home would be alarmed at our not coming back; otherwise we should feel rather jolly; for in the morning we had only to follow the brook down to Dunham's clearing and could be at home by noon. We little knew of the peril we were in.

As there was no coverlet or blankets in the bunk, we decided that it would be more comfortable to keep a fire. So we gathered branches outside. Al. agreed to keep awake and tend the fire for three hours, as nearly as he could guess, then he was to call to me. After taking my turn, I was to call Ben.

It was growing cold fast; and the snow beat into the camp, under the door and through chinks betwixt the logs where the moss "stuffing" had fallen out.

When Al. waked me to take my turn at tending the stove, I was shivering in spite of the fire; and the first thing I noticed, on waking, was the fearful rate at which the wind was blowing. The woods roared; and now and then there came a gust which made even that little low camp shake and crack, and which sent the fine snow sifting in all over us.

"It's an awful night," said Al. "I've heard ever so many trees fall, off in the woods."

Suddenly, in the midst of a tremendous gust, there came with great distinctness a loud, startling crack! It was followed by a creaking, rushing sound.

Involuntarily I jumped to my feet, and Ben and Al both sprang up. "What's that?" they cried out together.

It had flashed to my mind in an instant that it was one of those great pines; and though the tree could have been but a second or two falling, I yet had time to realize and feel that it was coming down on us.

The next moment it struck—seemingly on both sides of us—with a tremendous crash and a shock, which made the ground jar beneath us.

The stone-funnel came rattling down, and the fire and smoke gushed out into the camp. We had lively work for the next ten minutes in putting it back into its place. It was not until daybreak that we saw and realized how near we had come to death.

One of those great pines had broken off a ta'w'g'if,"close down to the ground, and had fallen. In falling it had swept down with it the great dry stub.

Both had fallen on the camp from the high bank above. The huge pine trunk, with its great branches had broken off and driven deep down into the frozen earth, and lay within a foot of that side of the shanty in which the door was; while on the other side, lay the great dry stub, splintered and split by its fall.

There was just the width of the little camp between them! If either had fallen on it, the camp would have been crushed like an egg-shell! It was an escape the very sight of which made our hearts jump.

It blew furiously all the rest of the night, or rather morning, but slackened somewhat as the forenoon advanced. By ten o'clock we climbed out of our camp and set off down the brook. But it was slow walking. Fully two feet of snow had fallen since five o'clock the previous afternoon.

We were fully two hours getting down to Dunham's open. There we found the flock of eighty odd sheep in the shelter of a dense fir and hemlock thicket, on the east side of the clearing, and with the sheep were two deer—a doe and a half-grown fawn. They were not caribou, but common red deer, which had joined the sheep either during the storm or previously.

We attempted to start the sheep homeward; but the snow was so deep that we were obliged to leave them there for that day.

The deer did not run away, but kept huddled in with the sheep, moving as they moved, and we left them in the flock.

It was about two in the afternoon when we reached home. No furious had been the storm, out in the cleared land, that though a good deal concerned at our not returning, our folks had not deemed it prudent to start out in search of us till afternoon. Mr. Green had come in, and he and father were about setting off to look for us.

The Thanksgiving—"spare-rib," turkey and plum-pudding—was cooked; and we three boys, at least, were ready to eat our share. But all that day I recollect having a peculiar sense of release from danger, as when one draws a long breath of relief; and even now I never think of that night without a throb of thankfulness for the kind Providence that seems then to have watched over us.

GOATING THE OLD MAN.

THE BAD BOY PLAYS MASON, AND GIVES HIS PA THE ROYAL BUMPER DEGREE.

"Say, are you a Mason, or a nodfellow, or anything?" asked the bad boy of the grocery man, as he went to the cinnamon bag on the shelf and took out a long stick of cinnamon bark to chew.

"Why, yes, of course I am, but what set you to thinking of that?" asked the grocery man, as he went to the desk and charged the boy's father with half a pound of cinnamon.

"Well, do the goats bunt when you nishiate a fresh candidate?"

"No, of course not. The goats are cheap ones, that have no life, and we muzzle them, and put pillows over their heads, so they can't hurt anybody," says the grocery man, as he winked at a brother Odd Fellow who was seated on a sugar barrel, looking mysterious. "But why do you ask?"

"O, nuthin, only I wish me and my chum had muzzled our goat with a pillow. Pa would have enjoyed his becoming a member of our lodge better. You see, pa had been telling us how much good the Masons and Odd Fellers did, and said we ought to try and grow up good so we could jine the lodges when we got big, and I asked pa if it would do any hurt for us to have a play lodge in my room, and purtend to nishiate, and pa said it wouldn't do any hurt. He said it would improve our minds, and learn us to be men. So my chum and me borried a goat that lives in a livery stable and carried him up to my room when pa and ma was out riding, but the goat blatted so we had to tie a handkerchief around his nose, and his feet made such a noise on the floor that we put some baby's socks on his feet. Well, sir, my chum and me practiced with that goat until he could bunt a picture of a goat every time. We borried a back beer sign from a saloon man, and hung it on the back of a chair, and the goat would hit it every time. That night pa wanted to know what we were doing up in my room, and I told him we were playing lodge, and improving our minds, and pa said that was right, there was nothing that did boys of our age half so much good as to imitate men and store by useful nollidge. Then my chum asked pa if he didn't want to come up and take the grand bumper degree, and pa laffed and said he didn't care if he did, just to encourage us boys in innocent pastime, that was so improving to our intellex. We had shut the goat up in a closet in my room, and he had got over his blatting, so we took off the handkerchief, and he was eating some of my paper collars and skate straps.

"We went up stairs and told pa to come up pretty soon and give three distinct raps, and when we asked him who comes there he must say 'a pilgrim who wants to join your ancient order and ride the goat.' Ma wanted to come up, too, but we told her if she come in it would break up the lodge, cause a woman couldn't keep a secret, and we didn't have any side saddle for the goat. Say, if you never tried it, the next time you nitiate a man in your Mason's lodge, you sprinkle a little kyan pepper on the goat's beard just before you turn him loose. You can get three times as much to the square inch of goat. You wouldn't think it was the same goat. Well, we got all fixed and pa rapped, and we let him in and told him he must be blindfolded, and he got on his knees a laffing, and I tied a towel around his eyes, and then I turned him around and made him get down on his hands also, and then his back was right towards the closet door, and I put the back beer sign right aginst pa's clothes. He was a laffing all the time, and said we boys were full of fun as they made 'em, and we told him it was a solemn occasion, but we wouldn't permit no levity, and if he didn't stop laffing we couldn't give him the grand bumper degree. Then everything was ready, and my chum had his hand on the closet door, and some kyan pepper in his other hand, and I asked pa in low base tones if he felt as though he wanted to turn back, or if he had nerve enough to go ahead and take the degree. I warned him that it was full of dangers as the goat was loaded for bear, and told him he yet had time to retrace his steps if he wanted to. He said he wanted the whole business, and we could go ahead with the menagerie. Then I said to pa that if he had decided to go ahead, and not blame us for the consequences, to repeat after me the following: 'Bring forth the Royal Bumper, and let him Bump!' Pa repeated the words, and my chum sprinkled the kyan pepper on the goat's moustache, and he sneezed once and looked sassy, and then he see the lager beer goat raring up, and he started for it just like a cow-catcher, and blatted. Pa is real fat, but he knew he had got hit, and he grunted and said, 'Hell's-fire! what you boys doin?' and then the goat gave him another degree, and pa pulled off the towel and got up and started for the stairs, and so did the goat, and ma was at the bottom of the stairs listening, and when I looked over the banisters pa and ma and the goat were all in a heap, and pa was yelling murder, and ma was screaming fire, and the goat was blatting and sneezing, and bunting, and the hired girl came into the hall and the goat took after her, and she crossed herself just as the goat struck her and said, 'Howly mother, protect me!' and went down stairs the way we boys slide down hill, with both hands on herself, and the goat rared up and blatted, and pa and ma went into their room and shut the door, and then my chum and me opened the front door and drove the goat out. The minister, who comes to see ma three times a week, was just ringing the bell and the goat thought he wanted to be nishiated, too, and gave him one for luck, and then went down the sidewalk blatting and sneezing, and the minister came in the parlor and said he was stabbed, and then pa came out of his room with his suspenders hanging down, and, as he didn't know the minister was there, he said cuss words, and ma cried and told pa he would go to hell sure, and pa said he didn't care, he would kill that kussid goat afore he went, and I told pa the minister was in the parlor, and he and ma went down and said the weather was propitious for a revival, and it seemed as though an outporing of the spirit was about to be vouchsafed to His people, and none of them sot down but ma, cause the goat didn't hit her, and while they was talkin' religion with their mouths, and kussin the goat inwardly, my chum and me adjourned the lodge, and I went and stayed with him all night, and I hain't been home since; but I don't believe pa will lick me, cause he said he would not hold us responsible for the consequences. He ordered the goat himself, and we filled the order, don't you see? Well, I guess I will go and sneak in the back way and find out from the hired girl how the land lays. She won't go back on me, cause the goat was not loaded for hired girls. She just happened to get in at the wrong time. Good-by, sir. Remember and give your goat kyan pepper in your lodge.

As the boy went away, and skipped over the back fence, the grocery man said to his brother Odd Fellow, "If that boy don't beat the devil then I never saw one that did. The old man ought to have him sent to a lunatic asylum."—[Milwaukee Sun.

In humble recognition of our dependence upon and gratitude to Him,

I, GEORGE C. LUDLOW, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer throughout the State, and recommend that on that day the people do abstain from their accustomed avocations, and in their usual places of worship do give thanks unto the Lord for His manifold kindness and everlasting mercy, and offer up their prayers for His guidance, protection and blessing.

Given under my hand and privy seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, this tenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and seventh.

[L. S.] G. C. LUDLOW.

Attest: Jos. L. Naar, Private Secretary. 11

THE COMMAND.

The universal sentiment among Democrats throughout the entire Union is to accept the recent popular verdict at the polls as a positive command to vindicate the many flagrant abuses which the party in power have fostered and continued.

To secure long needed reform is the people's command and the Democratic party will fearlessly obey it.

The next House of Congress will not only contain a large Democratic majority, but number therewith several of the most able and experienced statesmen of the present time. To prove that requires only the mention of such Democratic members as Eaton, of Connecticut, Hewitt, Cox, Belmont, and Dorsheimer, of New York, Randall, of Pennsylvania, Hurd, of Ohio, Carlisle, of Kentucky, and Tucker, of Virginia. They are wise and patriotic leaders, and under their legislative control, the honor of country and welfare of all the people will be absolutely safe.

Democratic duty is plain. It must go straight to the root of the evil by Abolishing needless taxation.

Cutting down public expenses.
Stopping extravagance and waste.
Ending official fraud and corruption.
Establishing prudent economy.
Curbing selfish monopolies.
Granting just protection to all interests.
Extending markets for home products.
Reforming the civil service.
Making honesty the passport to office.
Keeping the National Government within its legitimate sphere.
Preserving State rights and privileges.
Overthrowing arbitrary political bosses.
Raising the Constitution into supremacy.
Conferring upon the people, regardless of class or condition, permanent prosperity.
Onward with reforming hand!
That is the command!

A HELP TO SUCCESS.

At the Democratic City Convention to be held on Wednesday evening next, the Ward delegates will have—among other duties—the nominating of a candidate for Mayor of this city. As but two of the four wards have as yet selected their representation in the Convention, it is impossible to positively state who will be chosen as the head of the ticket, but we feel certain that the HON. WILLIAM B. MAXSON, a representative citizen, one popular alike with members of both parties, will receive the unanimous nomination of the delegates assembled. The Democrats in the present city campaign, have determined to place before the public for its support a straight ticket throughout of candidates from their party that represent the desired elements of fitness and acceptability. Certainly no one man, therefore, embodies in a greater degree those very elements coupled with unusual popularity and other admirable qualities, than he whom we urge for the nomination. The coming election, we feel convinced, is to result in an enviable victory for the Democratic party in Plainfield—let it, for this reason, place the name of WILLIAM B. MAXSON before the community as its choice for Mayor, and the result, justly expected, will be the more certain.

THE FACT OF THE MATTER.

In urging the re-election of NATHAN HARPER to the Board of School Trustees, we do so in the interest of the community at large; and in certifying to his ability and fitness, we merely echo the opinions of his associates in the Board and the estimation in which he is held by the entire public. He is certainly better equipped—by reason of experience and knowledge of educational needs and methods—to fulfil the duties of the office to the complete satisfaction of all, than any aspirant who may be named against him. Being personally a man of just instincts and generous impulses, he has occupied the position and performed its functions in a manner that has merited special commendation. The public never had a more devoted servant, cannot hope to equal him with another, and we feel safe in asserting that the welfare of the cause of education in Plainfield depends to a great extent upon the re-election of School Trustee NATHAN HARPER.

THE STATE OF THE CASE.

Our belief in the especial qualifications of ROWLAND B. STOVER for a membership in the Union County Board of Freeholders as expressed previous to his election, has proven remarkably exact—in fact his efficiency as displayed in committee work, his judgment and decision in the meetings of the Board, and more than all his care for the interests of the County and his prudence and thoughtfulness for the tax payer, have gained the expressed commendation of the people of both parties. It is for all this, we again urge the election of MR. STOVER; and it is for all this, we feel assured of such result. Is it policy to elect to the office a candidate who, be he never so capable, is ignorant of the service demanded and uninformed as to the needs of the community? It is certain that as a Freeholder Mr. STOVER has had no superiors, and it seems just so certain that he will be re-elected.

General Andrew Jackson bids fair to come to the front again since the Democratic successes. The Jackson Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, expect to issue ten thousand invitations to a grand Democratic jubilee in the city on Janury 8th, the sixty-eighth anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. Messrs. Cleveland, Pattison and Butler will be urged to attend.

Going! going! gone!—Naval Robeson's $60,000 house in Washington.

Blaine tried to defeat Perry Belmont and got demolished in the attempt.

River and Harbor appropriations will hereafter require much less paper to engross them.

Folger carries only eight counties in New York, and Beaver carries only eighteen in Pennsylvania.

When the sturdy farmers and mechanics of the land stamp their feet, thieving political rats go where holes are dark.

If it had only been a little later in the season, it would very naturally be supposed that the bosses had been snowed under.

Judge Miller, of the United States Supreme Court, declares "that the best feature in the tidal wave was the overthrow of the Bosses."

After the defeat of Robeson, the Cincinnati Commercial (Rep.) thinks "New Jersey is entitled to full recognition as one of the States of the Union."

As each member enters the next House of Congress he will be impressed with the people's injunction—"Mind how you vote." WE ARE ADVERSED!

The 28th of this month the State Board of canvassers will meet in Trenton, when the result of the late election in the State, will be officially determined.

One of the important duties of the Democratic Legislature of New York will be the Congressional re-apportionment of the State on the basis of equity.

Ben. Butler promises that no one who voted for him shall have occasion to regret it; but he don't promise not to make it lively for those who did not vote for him.

One of the candidates asserted of his political friends that they were faithful and fearless. On Tuesday night after the polls closed, he found out that they were "faithless and fearful."

General Butler says that the success of the Democrats will depend on the wisdom of their action. Just so, Governor. Set them a good example. Acts talks louder than words.

Of the 122 Congressmen who voted for the River and Harbor divide about 60 have been retired from public life, and some of the remainder narrowly escaped receiving tickets of leave.

To hold all officers strictly accountable, and honestly supreme in public affairs; to lighten the burdens of the working men by reducing taxation and public expenditures, is Jeffersonian Democracy.

Pennsylvania elected a Democratic Governor because he had proven himself an honest and fearless public servant in the heretofore corrupt city of Philadelphia. The people have at last awakened.

No Republican stump orator dared advocate Robeson's re-election to Congress in the First District except Speaker Keifer, and his presence there added several hundred to the Democratic majority.

Had New Jersey Democrats placed unobjectionable candidates before the people, as they could easily have done, the next Congressional delegation would have stood—Democrats 5, Republicans 2.

A Republican editor in Washington makes the following confession, although too late for medical assistance—"We have done those things we ought not to have done, and we have left undone those things we ought to have done, and there is no health in us."

Simon Cameron says: "Notwithstanding the overwhelming defeat of the Republicans, the Stalwarts intend to stick to their principles and will not unite with the independents, even to insure the election of a Republican President in 1884."

In the Forty-eighth Congress the Democrats will control the delegations from at least twenty-two States, so that the action of the House could easily be predicted if the people should fail to elect a President and it should become the duty of the House to choose one.

It is estimated that in the thirty-three States in which elections were held on the 7th inst, that 700,000 Democratic Republicans, became Republican Democrats. This would account for the tidal wave of popular rage against Bossism, machine politics and bad methods in politics.

A telegram states that the Moody and Sankey meetings in England have been interrupted by the severe illness of Mr. Moody, and adds; "This is an unusual experience for him, for in all his experience as an evangelist it is rarely that he has been laid aside by even a day's sickness." Mr. Moody will probably die.

The defeat of Judge Folger as the Republican candidate for Governor of New York signally rebuked the Administration at Washington, and vindicated the sound Democratic doctrine that the Federal Government has no business to interfere, either directly or indirectly, with the freedom and dignity of State citizenship.

The result of Hubbell's illegal assessment of money to perpetuate Republican control of the House of Representatives is seen in the overwhelming majority of Democrats elected. When the people become incensed and determined, corruption funds are of no more avail to thwart the popular will than a pop-gun is to blow down the rocky fortress of Gibraltar.

At 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning expired the Nestor of the American Press—the venerable Thurlow Weed. Mr. Weed had but recently completed his eighty-fifth year. Notwithstanding his advanced age his mental vigor was unimpaired, and until the last he manifested the same deep interest in the affairs of men and parties which had characterized his long career.

It is remarked that not a Northern Democratic Member who voted for the late River and Harbor bill got re-elected, while many Republicans who voted for it were returned without a kick. All of which goes to prove that the Democrats were in earnest in opposing the re-election of treasury-raiders, while the Republicans were only shamming.

DEATHS.

IN MEMORIUM.

DARBY.—In Brooklyn, Long Island, November 1st, 1882, SADIE M. DARBY.

Ready when the Blessed Master
Sent to bid you come!
Jesus in His mercy gave you
Surety of a Heavenly home.

Dear ones waiting there to greet you,
Who have gone the way before—
May the loved ones left, all meet you,
When they reach the Glory shore.

As you crossed the dreary river
Leaning on the Saviour's breast,
Angel voices all repeating,
You have gained a final rest.

Oh! how glorious are His promises,
To all those who will believe,
"Come to me!" You have my Message,
And I will your soul receive.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - City Editor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

Oh for an Opera House!

THANKSGIVING dinner, Thursday next.

CITY election, one week from next Tuesday.

DEMOCRATIC City Convention next Wednesday evening.

CITY politics are in a most inexplicable state so far as the Republican party is concerned.

FIRST snow-storm of the season, last Friday night—and a heavy one, too, for a little while.

THE Rev. Dr. Downie of India will preach Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, in the Netherwood Union Chapel.

THREE false alarms of fire were rung during Wednesday evening, but for what or why nobody seems to know.

MR. Fred Becker of North Plainfield has just returned from an extended trip through the United States and Canada.

AN enormous stock of dolls of all styles, dressed or undressed, is offered by D. Boehm & Bro., at No. 7 West Front St.

THE Boulevard Lamp, at Crescent avenue and Broadway, was lighted during last Friday evening. Do so, some more.

THANKS to Councilmen Ginna, Newhall, Rushmore, J. Simpson and R. Simpson, the street lamps will be again lighted after Tuesday next.

THE Rev. T. Hogan will deliver a lecture at St. Mary's R. C. church, Stoney Hill, during Sunday evening next, commencing at seven o'clock.

ADVERTISERS desiring a "change" in our next issue must send in the same by Monday noon, as we publish a day earlier on account of Thanksgiving.

NINE of the Councilmen nominated by the Republicans are said to be anti-license. Netherwood gets no representation excepting on the Democratic ticket.

TRINITY Reformed church was filled Thursday evening of last week by an interested audience gathered to hear one of Miss Francis E. Willard's lectures in the cause of temperance.

THE handsome medals for which the members of Warren Hose Co., No. 3 will shoot on Thanksgiving day, will be on exhibition at Staat's pharmacy. A temperance collation will follow the match.

WALL papers are growing more elaborate. In dados blues are the rage and the "electric" is the favorite. Some papers represent church windows with huge flowers between.

THE attendance at the First Baptist Church, Sunday evening, upon the occasion of the Anniversary of the Y. M. C. A., was possibly the largest gathering of its kind ever known in this city.

ON our fourth page we publish the official list of the Senators and Members of Assembly of the One hundred and seventh Legislature of New Jersey. It meets Tuesday, Jan. 9th, 1883.

THE cool nights have had the effect of ridding the street corners from the crowds who make them a public rendezvous. They prefer a position near some warm stove rather than stand out of doors.

THE petit jurors to serve during the December term of the Somerset County courts, were drawn on Tuesday. Those from North Plainfield were Messrs Lewis Bird, Silas D. Pound, Wm. E. Jones and Jonathan Clawson.

CHOICE seats at church, as well as at the opera, bring large prices, and the gossips are talking about the payment of $2,600 for a pew to hear Dr. John Hall preach next year. 'Twas not so in the time of Christ.

THE 10:09 train for New York had gotten as far as Richmond street, Monday morning, when a slight accident to the locomotive compelled it to back up to the station again, where No. 30 hooked on and continued the journey.

THE $100 in gold, for which about 300 chances were sold at the recent Fair for St. Joseph's R. C. church, was drawn at Laing's Hall Wednesday evening. Mr. James Keegan was the fortunate holder of the winning number—366.

THE Philadelphia express that passes through this city about 9:00 every morning, was one minute late at Westfield, however, but reached Elizabeth on time. Thus running the seven miles between those stations in six minutes.

THE public is promised another opportunity to hear the Rev. Dr. De Hass lecture on Egypt and the Holy Land. The ladies of the Park avenue church have secured him for dates to be selected in December and January next.

AT the residence of Mrs. Underhill, corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets, there will be held during the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Dec. 7th, a parlor sale and children's fair for the benefit of the Muhlenburg Hospital.

PARTIES in need of special dainties for the table can be supplied by calling at No. 137 West Front street, or addressing post office box No. 914. Home-made mince pies, wine jellies and other delicacies by a lady who is an accomplished cook.

THE members of Plainfield steamer and hose company of Plainfield, N. J., are anxious to know how it is that "Winnie," a member of that company, can appear on the street with his red shirt and fire hat prepared for a fire before the alarm is given.—Fireman's Herald.

IF more of our residents would hang out as serviceable a lantern as that suspended over his porch by Mr. Joseph S. Cutter on Second street, pedestrians could do without street lamps in spite of those members of the Council who tried to keep our thoroughfares in darkness.

PLAINFIELD gets one of the best presents of the Davis Baking Powder advertising scheme. Rockfellow was the lucky man to sell a box of the baking powder with an order for twenty yards of Tapiasier's black silk. The goods can be seen at Rockfellow's store for the next ten days.

THE falsity of any report condemning the foundation of the Grove street bridge, is proven by the fact that the Committees on Bridges from both the Union and Somerset Counties Boards of Freeholders have examined and approved of the work, and the building of the stone abutments is already commenced.

THE Matawan Journal thinks "a noticeable feature of the election was that 59 votes were cast for Urner, the National candidate for Congress, without paying a cent to the men for voting." Bless the Journal editor's innocent heart! If those 59 had been paid a cent, they would have voted the way they were bought.

THE alarm bell last Monday noon, called the members of the Department from their dinners to assist in quenching a fire that had broken out in a store-room in the residence of Mr. A. Warnock. The damages consisted in the burning of a quantity of clothing valued at $50., and the cause was the building of a fire in an unused stove in the room by little Harry Warnock, aged 4 years.

THE pre-Raphaelite "beauty waist," which is that of the Medici Venus, is twenty-four inches round. The pre-Raphaelites who advocate this measure in preference to the wasp-like dressmaker waist are in the right; but it must be confessed that some of the men that write and talk about the beautiful twenty-four-inch waist of the model woman have only twenty-inch waists for themselves.

MANY of the Christian-minded young men of the land have been engaged in a week of prayer. Their occupation is a commendable one. Next to the politician there is no one who needs to pray and be prayed for more than the average young man. It is to be hoped that he will recollect, however, that it is his life that must bear public scrutiny. Prayer is a grand, good thing. No man can safely weather trouble and temptation without prayer. But it is character that counts.

THE entertainment in the Chapel of the Crescent avenue church, under the auspices of the Young People's Association and for the benefit of the Plainfield Mission Band, was quite well attended last Friday evening in spite of the weather discomforts out of doors. Miss Phelps as a pianiste distinguished herself with some credit, while the other artists were more or less entertaining. The profit of the affair, we are pleased to state, will be quite satisfactory.

THE official returns in the Assembly districts of Warren county elect the regular Democratic candidates. Dr. Bond, the Independent candidate in the Second district, will probably contest on the ground that irregularities exist in Oxford township. On election morning Frederick Wildrick withdrew, leaving Isaac Wildrick and Dr. Bond in the field. Votes cast for Frederick Wildrick, with the Frederick scratched out, were counted for Isaac Wildrick, and moreover, though Oxford is but three miles from Belvidere, the returns were not made until Thursday, during which time it is claimed that changes occurred.

ESKALL, in an attractive advertisement on the opposite page, offers the usual bargains in holiday goods.

THE many friends of Mr. B. T. Mulford, will regret to learn that he is lying quite ill, at his residence, Craig Place.

REV. J. H. Parks of Philadelphia, will preach in Scotch Plains Baptist Church, next Sunday, Nov. 26th, morning and evening.

P. KELLEHER, brother of Mrs. John Paoli of North avenue, and a former resident of this city, was seriously injured at Bergen Point on Tuesday. While at work below ground, a bank caving in buried Kelleher beneath it breaking his collar bone.

The overwhelming defeat in the woman suffrage amendment proposed to the Nebraska Constitution and voted down at the recent election by 25,000 majority, is a signal manifestation of common sense, and we venture the belief that none are better pleased than the sensible women of Nebraska themselves.

WE have received from the Board of Education for publication a copy of the "Expert's report" of the finances of that body from Sept. 1st, 1873 to Dec. 31st, 1881. The same being merely a duplicate of the brief statements published in this paper each year, we refer our readers to the files of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and reserve the space for more satisfying matter.

ELSEWHERE will be noticed the announcement of Prof. W. M. Smith of this city, who will begin a course of tuition in penmanship on the evening of Dec. 7th. Prof. Smith, although a young man, has been for some years recognized as a Penman, and is very well known to many of the citizens of Plainfield, as such. We need, therefore, simply to remark that during the past few years, his business has been such as to bring him in frequent contact with some of the best penmen and teachers in the county, thus affording him exceptional advantages, and eminently fitting him for the business of teaching.

Neal Dow in Plainfield.

On the evening of Sunday, Dec. 3d, Neal Dow will speak in this city in the cause of temperance. The place will be announced in our next issue.

Thanksgiving Service.

The usual Union Service of Thanksgiving Day, will be held in the M. E. church next Thursday morning, at 11 o'clock. The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond will preach, and a collection in aid of the Ladies' Relief Association, taken up.

Union Club Reception.

The Union Club, of Plainfield, will hold a reception under the auspices of their Entertainment Committee, on Friday evening, Nov. 24th, 1882, from Eight to Eleven o'clock. Humorous, Dramatic Readings, by J. S. Burdett, of New-York, and other attractions have been arranged for. Members are privileged to invite only their immediate family and lady friends.

They Say.

That if the colored mail-carrier doesn't take his cart off the sidewalk, it will be kicked over some day.

That Judge Harper will be elected to succeed himself as School Trustee.

That Tuesday was a perfect day.

That Freeholder Staver will serve another year in the Union County Board.

A Thanksgiving Appeal.

The ladies of the Relief Association would be glad to receive donations of food, to be distributed among the beneficiaries of the society, for Thanksgiving day. Groceries, vegetables, meats and edibles of all kinds will be acceptable. Articles may be sent to the Association rooms, on Second street, corner of Madison avenue, on Wednesday morning, Nov. 29th.

J. H. ACLY,
Assistant Secretary.

New Jersey Temperance Alliance.

The annual meeting of the State Temperance Alliance will be held at Newark, in Dr. Findley's church, Dec. 5th & 6th, 1882, commencing at 10 on Tuesday and including both evenings. Prohibition by Constitutional Amendment will be the principal subject of discussion. The evening addresses will be made by Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Rev. Dr. Chadwick, A. M. Powell and Rev. Dr. Gray. Dr. Gray's subject will be "The fight in New Jersey." Perhaps no man knows more about it.

Ten Night's in a Bar-Room.

At VanDeventer Hall on Thanksgiving evening the 30th, the Northern Star Combination of talented artists will play that intensely interesting and highly emotional drama in five acts, "Ten Night's in a Bar Room." In our advertising columns we publish the complete cast which includes actors entirely qualified to sustain their respective parts, and in consequence a very able representation of this very moral play is assured. We would urge our readers to secure seats early, at Millers pharmacy, under the Hall.

Y. M. C. A. Entertainment.

The second of the Y. M. C. A., Sixteenth Annual Course of Entertainments, will be given at the M. E. church next Thursday evening. Upon that occasion Prof. E. J. Fitzhugh—who has so often and in so many ways delighted the tastes of our musically inclined citizens—will lead a choir of thirty voices in a rendition of Barnby's cantata of "Rebekah." The work is one of especial merit, and it is just to suppose that the vocalists selected by Prof. Fitzhugh will interpret it in an unusually satisfactory manner. A few admirably located seats are still for sale at Reynold's pharmacy.

Regular Republican Nominations.

The delegates from the Ward primaries to the Republican City Convention, met on Monday evening in Association Hall and completed the regular party ticket by the selection of the following:

For Mayor—L. V. F. Randolph.
For Councilmen at Large—L. W. Serrell, Isaac L. Miller and S. A. Ginna.
For City Judge—P. P. Good.
For Chosen Freeholders—J. F. Hubbard and J. H. Ackerman.
For Assessor—J. A. Hubbard.
For Collector—John Johnson.
For Treasurer—Jeremiah VanWinkle.
For School Trustee—Full term, Alex. Gilbert. Unexpired term, Geo. H. Babcock.
Commissioners of Appeal—M. Vermeule, M. M. Thorn and E. MacDonald.

Baird's Mammoth Minstrels.

The Newport News speaks in the following flattering way of Baird's Minstrels, which organization has before visited us and will again at VanDeventer Hall next Friday evening.

Every seat on the floor and in the gallery of the Opera House was occupied last night, and a large number were obliged to content themselves with "standing room only." Baird's minstrels were the attraction, and the performance they gave fully repaid the large audience for coming. The overture was very good, the singing and jokes of the eight men calling forth almost continual applause. The olio was varied and correspondingly amusing. Prince Pharaoh is the best contortionist ever seen in Newport. Billy McAllister, both in the overture and in his bones solo, none should fail to see. The songs and dances by the four invincibles the musical duets by Ripley and Reede, the Royal Hand Bell Ringers, and the clog dancing by the great clog teams of ten, helped make up one of the best minstrel shows that has been in this city of late.

Literary Notes.

The North American Review for December commands attention no less by the eminence of its contributors than by the value and timeliness of its table of contents. First, there is a symposium on "The Health of American Women," regarded from three distinct points of view; Dr. Dio Lewis considers the question as it is affected by the prevailing style of feminine attire, especially by the practice of tight lacing; Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton points out the many injurious influences of social environment; and Dr. James Read Chadwick sets forth the effects of education, climate and food. Gov. Buren R. Sherman, of Iowa, writes of the "Constitutional Prohibition" of the liquor traffic in that state. Gen. Grant, in an article entitled "An Undeserved Stigma," states the facts of Gen. Fitz John Porter's case, and argues that the sentence of the court martial that cashiered him was based on a misconception of the essential circumstances. Richard A. Proctor writes of "The Influence of Food on Civilization." Prof. Fisher, of Yale College, in defining the causes of "The Decline of Clerical Authority," or function of the secular State, is by no means to be regretted, and that the spiritual influence of the church and its ministry is to-day greater than of old. Finally, there is a symposium upon the conditions of "Success on the Stage," the contributors being six of our most prominent actors—John McCullough, Joseph Jefferson, Madame Modjeska, Lawrence Barrett, Maggie Mitchell and Wm. Warren.

Instantly Killed.

At a little after one o'clock of Thursday afternoon, the men employed in erecting the stone abutments of the Grove street bridge, had just resumed work when an accident happened that resulted most unfortunately. The guy-rope supporting the enormous derrick used to hoist in position the heavy blocks of stone, suddenly parted and the upright piece of heavy timber in falling to the ground struck John Burke of South Ave. and William Street, crushing his skull and causing instantaneous death. The victim leaves a wife and five children.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

A reception will be given on Tuesday evening, Nov. 28th, to young men by members of the Ladies Auxiliary. This will be the occasion of opening the rooms repapered and refurnished. Let all young men be present. An interesting programme has been prepared.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 30th, occurs the second entertainment of the course, by Fitzhugh and a chorus of 30 voices.

Young men, remember the Bible class on Saturday evening in the Lecture room. Lesson is the 2d Chapter of Acts. The General Secretary will teach the class.

On Monday evening the young men's prayer and song meeting will be held in the Lecture rooms. Topic "The Duty and Privilege of Meeting for the Worship of God"—Heb. 10 25, Act. 11; 26 Mat. 3 16 and 17. All young men are earnestly requested to be present.

Entertainments of Thanksgiving Eve.

At Blatz's Hotel on Somerset street next Wednesday evening, the members of Plainfield Hose Co., No. 2, will hold their Fourth Annual Ball, upon which occasion a large attendance of young people is expected. The music will be in charge of Prof. Bannan of New York, and the entire management of the affair is in the able hands of Messrs. A. T. Marsh, H. Heideloff, J. V. Farlee, E. Marsh, A. T. Ayres, J. R. Frazee and J. Bowman. Tickets at $1 each, admitting a gentleman and ladies, may be procured of members of the company.

At the rooms of the Society, corner of Park and North avenues, the Plainfield Saengerbund will open its season of entertainment and dance on Wednesday evening next. The best of music will be furnished for the enjoyment of the many dancers, and the Committee of arrangements will leave nothing undone to promote the pleasure of all. Only those holding invitations will be admitted, and the attendance will consequently be most select.

Democratic Ward Primaries.

The first and second wards of Democrats held their primaries on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings respectively with the following result. The third and fourth wards will meet Thursday and Friday, and the City Convention in the rooms of the Democratic Association, Wednesday evening the 29th inst.

FIRST WARD.

Corner Loafing.

It seems from the following to the Elizabeth Herald, that the inhabitants of that city are, like this community, troubled with corner loafers and the authorities as remiss in the enforcement of the law as our own:

To the Editors of the Herald:

GENTS:—It is true that we have a police force, but it seems that they are either unable to break up corner loafing or they are unwilling to do it. If you will take the trouble to examine the blotter at Headquarters you will find that no arrests are made for the offence to which I allude. The police sometimes order the loafers to disperse and the gang will move to the next corner, but no arrests are ever made, and the young hoodlums do just as they like. Broad street is infested by gangs of young men who make it a nocturnal business to indulge in lewd remarks and ribald jests just as ladies are passing, and, in many instances, outrightly insult unprotected women who are compelled to pass along the street after nightfall. Broad street and Elizabeth avenue are a headquarters for the worst class of these loafers, generally between the ages of 15 and 21, and their oaths, jests, songs and conversation are of the most depraved nature. These young loafers are all over the city, and, beyond the fact that the guardians of the peace now and then tell them to "move on," they appear to act pretty much as they please. There ought to be some mode of breaking up this loaferism. The law interdicts it, but the police do not execute the law. I write this note with the hope that the Mayor and Chief of Police will see—if they do not now know—that the nuisance is becoming unbearable, and ought to be abated by the authorities at once.

Yours, respectfully,
A WOMAN.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL MILTON COGSWELL.

The announcement of the death from apoplexy, on the morning of the 20th inst., of Colonel Milton Cogswell, of the U. S. A., has caused the deepest feeling of sorrow among his many friends in this vicinity. Col. Cogswell was appointed to West Point from Indiana in 1845, graduating in 1849 and entered the service as 2d Lieutenant in the 4th U. S. Infantry. He served with distinction on the plains in the Indian campaign, until the War of the Rebellion. He was appointed Colonel of the 42d N. Y. Volunteers, on July 21st, 1861, and brevetted Major U. S. A., Oct. 21st, 1861, for gallant and meritorious service in the battle of Balls Bluff, Va.; was appointed Colonel 2d N. Y. Artillery, Oct. 1st, 1862, and brevetted Lt. Colonel, U. S. A., for gallant and meritorious services in front of Petersburg, Va.; brevetted Colonel, March 13, 1865, and retired from active service Sept. 3d, 1871, for disability resulting from sickness and exposure in the line of his duty. At Balls Bluff, Col. Cogswell was seriously wounded at the head of his regiment and left as dead. The enemy capturing the field he was found by them still alive, and being taken prisoner was cast into Libby prison. At this time the Government was contemplating the hanging of prisoners captured on the sea, as pirates. The Confederate Government drew lots amongst their prisoners for hostages to be held for the safety of those captured at sea, and should the Government hang them these hostages to be submitted to the same fate. Col. Cogswell was one of these hostages held, and his life was in suspense for many months.

At the time of his death, Col. Cogswell was the Deputy Governor of the Soldier's Home at Washington. Previous to his appointment to such office he was a resident of this city and a property owner in North Plainfield. On the evening of July 6th, 1874, he was elected a member of the so-called "Swallow-Tail" Common Council of this city, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Councilman Case. In that body the deceased served as the Chairman of the Committee on Police, and by means of his efforts were achieved the radical changes for the better in the City Jail accomodations.

COLONEL WM. H. McMAHON.

At his residence, No. 24 W. Twelfth street, New York city, Colonel Wm. H. McMahon, well known in Plainfield, died suddenly during Tuesday morning. The deceased had not been feeling very well for several days, but was at the Custom House late last week, and Monday evening the members of the Tariff Commission called upon him, Colonel McMahon feeling better and being able to sit up. Colonel McMahon served during the war and was wounded in the head, the bullet, it is said, taking a circuitous route and coming out at his breast. He had suffered from rheumatism, the effect of the wound, ever since, and it is believed the disease attacked his heart. Collector Robertson was preparing to call upon Colonel McMahon Tuesday when he received a despatch announcing his death. He immediately ordered the flag of the Custom-House to be placed at half mast, an honor accorded generally to none but Collectors or other high Government officials. Colonel McMahon had an honorable record in the Custom-House, his services there extending over nearly twenty years. He was Deputy Collector under Collector Merritt, but at his own request Collector Robertson made him Chief Clerk and Adjuster of Duties, this position not being subject to political changes like that of Deputy Collector. Last Spring Colonel McMahon was named by President Arthur as a member of the Tariff Commission, his nomination being confirmed by the Senate. He was chosen as the representative of New York on the Commission after ex-Vice President Wheeler had declined the position of Chairman.

Y. M. C. A.

Report of the President of the Young Men's Christian Association at the Anniversary Meeting, Sunday evening, Nov. 19th, 1882.

Brethren, members and friends of the Young Men's Christian Association of Plainfield:

The annual report of the President of our Association, which is demanded by the Constitution, was last year omitted, not intentionally, but because of contemplated changes in the Constitution, which however were subsequently abandoned. In reviewing the work of the Association at this time, it will not be amiss, therefore, to recall the discouragements under which we rested in the winter of 1880-81, when no one could be found willing to accept the duties and responsibilities of the Presidency, and when there was little indeed of hope before us.

In our perplexity we applied to the International committee for advice; and that committee kindly sent two of its members to confer with us, the result being that an invitation was extended to Mr. W. P. Webster to become the General Secretary of our Association. At that time there was but one Association in the State employing a General Secretary, and it was not absolutely certain that the experiment would prove a success with us. Generous friends provided the additional funds required and in July 1881, Mr. Webster assumed his duties. This step may be said to make a new era in the history of the Association, and is worthy of special emphasis in this report. The result of our experiment is highly satisfactory to us, and the Association hereafter will not willingly undertake to carry on its work without the invaluable aid of a General Secretary. In March last Mr. Webster resigned his position with us to accept a similar one elsewhere and again the International committee interested itself in our behalf and we were placed in communication with Mr. H. O. Williams, whose services we were so fortunate as to secure. Mr. Williams began his work with us in August of the present year, and of the good results you are all glad witnesses.

Another new feature in our work is the recent formation of a Ladies' Auxiliary, having its separate organization, with full list of officers and numbering in its membership about 90 warm friends of the Association; thoughtful in plans, quick in expedients and fruitful in resources; ready to do their part for the welfare of the young men of Plainfield. We are greatly indebted to the members of the Auxiliary for much already done, while the possibilities for good which may in the future be accomplished by this organization can hardly be estimated.

Our membership now includes 178 active and associate members; 54 sustaining members; 14 honorary members and 14 life members, making a total of 260, an increase during the last twelve months of 46. We shall hope to add considerably to our membership during the next year.

Our Treasurer reports our finances in a satisfactory condition. The receipts from all sources during the year, including special donations for the salary of the General Secretary, dues from members and profits of the lecture course have been $1,381 19. A large balance was carried over from last year, the result mainly from subscriptions made late in previous year for salary of General Sec. Our total expenses for the year, including the salary of General Sec., have been $1,785 42. I take special pleasure in noting that the people attending our out-post meetings at Mount Pleasant and Washingtonville, have contributed $110 towards the expenses of those out-posts. While we have often felt the need of a larger revenue, we have the satisfaction of being absolutely free from debt.

Our library contains now about 1300 volumes, of which 65 have been added since the last report. About 100 persons regularly draw books, while many others find pleasure and profit in consulting the books at the rooms. The reading rooms are now opened from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., and are visited by increasing numbers, averaging over 50 daily. We have now on file 26 periodicals, all of the highest character and well appreciated by the young men. We regret that ill health has made it necessary for Mr. W. S. Angleman recently to resign the position of Librarian, which he has so faithfully filled for several years. Mr. John H. Manning has been appointed to the vacancy thus caused.

The usual lecture course last season under the management of our efficient committee, was a financial success; and that it was acceptable to the public is evidenced by the unprecedented demand for tickets for the present course. Through the exceeding kindness of resident friends of the Association, we were able to give during the year a course of "Health Talks" and another course of "Descriptive Talks," both courses being offered free to all young men, and fairly well attended. The "Health Talks" were considered so valuable that it is contemplated to request the lecturers to repeat them at some future time.

Recognizing the importance of attracting the young men from the streets and beer saloons, we have opened an amusement room well furnished with suitable games, which is open every evening and is under the charge of a special committee. A Glee Club, composed of members of the Association, has recently been formed under the leadership of Mr. Newman, of the good results of which we have large expectations. Although organized but a short time, it has already proven a great attraction and has rendered valuable assistance. Under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary, a series of monthly social receptions has been inaugurated, which we believe will prove very enjoyable and serve to attract young men to our rooms. I do not see how much if any more can be done in the way of social attractions, while the means at our command are so limited; and until the good people of Plainfield shall furnish us with a suitable building which we so sadly need.

And now, brethren, it is with exceeding gratitude and pleasure that I call your attention to that which is pre-eminently the work of our Association—the Devotional work. The Chairman of our Devotional Committee and our General Secretary have been indefatigable in their labors and the Lord has richly rewarded them. Our weekly prayer meeting at the rooms has at present an attendance of over 50 young men, many of whom by actively participating in the meeting are acquiring an experience which will be invaluable to them, and helpful to their representative churches hereafter. That these meetings are full of interest is evident from the fact that every night young men may be seen there who have come from two to five miles expressly to attend them. That the Holy spirit has been present is manifest to us all. We record several hopeful conversions and dare to expect many more. The out-post meeting's held every Sunday evening, at Mount Pleasant, Washingtonville and Jackson School houses have been well attended throughout the year. The Sunday school at Washingtonville under the charge of the Association continues in a prosperous condition, with an average attendance the year round of 35. The Sunday School at Mount Pleasant, while not conducted by the Association is never the less the out-growth of our out-post meeting, and we cannot but be interested in its welfare. It holds sessions every Sunday of the year and has a very regular attendance of about 40. Through the influence of these different out-posts several persons have been converted and introduced into church membership.

With the hope of persuading non-church goers to attend Divine worship, we have recently decided to open the Reading Room on every Sunday from 9 until 10. All literature unsuitable for Sunday reading is removed, and a committee is in attendance to welcome visitors, and to see that when the hour for closing the rooms arrives every visitor has a special invitation to attend church. We hope that this plan may in time show good results.

A Bible class for the systematic study of the Scriptures meets every Saturday evening, and is under the charge of the General Secretary, and although its numbers are smaller than we would like, yet it has been of much profit to the members of the class.

Other plans for direct spiritual work are under consideration, to be put into operation whenever we can find the men and time needful for their proper development.

It is, brethren, a cause for special rejoicing and thanksgiving, that this branch of our work has been so signally blessed by our Divine Master, and is at the present time receiving much emphasis. We are not to forget that our primary, chiefest work, is to earn souls for Christ.

It is for this that God has given our Association existence.

It is for this that He has kindled a new enthusiasm among our members. It is for this that He has awakened a fresh interest in the Association among the the churches and christian people of the City. It is for this that He has given us the presence and blessing of His Holy Spirit. While we render hearty thanks to the Father of mercies for some souls saved this past year, let us pray earnestly and labor fruitfully for a more abundant result in the year to come. There is much work to be done, there are discouragements to be endured, there are sacrifices to be made. And we need all the "patient continuance in well doing" without which we cannot hope to succeed. We need having put on the whole armor of God, and having done all, to stand. Then looking to Him, without whom we can do nothing, and through whom we can do all things, we may confidently expect that our labor will not be in vain. Brethren we look back with hearts full of gratitude. We look forward with hearts full of hope. In the history of our Association the prospect was never brighter than to-day. "Only be strong, and of a good courage: be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord, thy God is with thee, whither so ever thou goest."

H. R. MUNGER President.
Plainfield, Nov. 19th, 1882.

The Grand Jury Discharged.

The Union County Grand Jury completed its work at Elizabeth, Saturday, by reporting several indictments to the court and asking to be discharged. The presiding judge, Van Sykel, refused to grant their request, stating that from information, he had received he was assured they had not properly considered the matter of the charges of embezzlement of city money made against Lewis E. Clark, ex-Collector of Plainfield, and that he should send them back to reconsider that case. After being out an hour they returned without any indictment, stating that they had well and properly considered all matters coming before them, and again asking to be discharged. The court this time granted their request. The proceeding of Judge VanSyckel was a very unusual one and excited much comment among lawyers.

Highwaymen Out West.

Many of our readers will remember Mr. Daniel Titus, who for many years resided in this city on Union near Grant avenue. The following account may therefore be interesting of a murderous attack upon his son Lowry, taken from the Republican published at Fargo, Dakota:

A bold and villainous attack was made on Mr. Lowry Titus, of Moorhead, near the pontoon bridge, Wednesday evening. The facts as given by his father are as follows; Mr. Titus has been engaged in the Red River Valley bank for some time and was returning to this city when the attack was made. When he reached the bank of the river, he discovered that the bridge had been swung to permit the passage of the steamer Pluck. On his way to the river, he noticed two men standing behind an ice wagon, but paid no attention to them. Upon turning to return to Moorhead, the strangers approached him with revolvers in their hands. One of them demanded that Mr Titus halt, but he immediately produced a revolver from his pocket, and told the cowardly villains that if they proceeded toward him he would cause them to halt. Observing that their supposed victim was on the defense, one of the men sprang forward and fired, the report of his revolver being simultaneous with that of Mr. Titus'. The highwayman's revolver fell to the ground and he took to the woods. Mr. Titus received a severe shot in the left shoulder, and it is thought that the ball he fired must have taken effect in the body of his assailant, as they were so near each other when the shooting took place that Mr. Titus' coat was burned by the powder from the scoundrel's revolver. Mr. Titus walked home and fell in the doorway. He was quickly cared for by his family, and Drs. Buckley and Kaaus were immediately summoned. The ball was located near the left shoulder, but no attempt was made to extract it, as such an operation at present was considered inadvisable. The wounded man is one of Moorhead's foremost young gentlemen and has the sympathy of the entire community. He manifested commendable courage and saved his life by acting bravely and with presence of mind.

The Proposed Amendments to the Ordinance "To License Inns and Taverns, &c."

We presume but few of our citizens have any knowledge of the effect of the proposed amendments. Ordinances are changed so often, generally in some immaterial point, to improve their efficacy and working, that the public pay no attention to amendments, but leave them wholly to the discretion of the Council. The amendments now proposed have a far wider scope and significance. If adopted they are a practical prohibition of license to many licensed places in one of the wards of this city, because a compliance with their requirements is simply impossible.

The Council of 1881, however diverse opinion may be in relation to their action upon certain important city interests, was composed of exceptionally able and accomplished men, who made a thorough revision of the ordinances of the city. The ordinance "To license Inns and Taverns," &c. now requires that all applications for licenses must be accompanied with a certificate which shall be signed by at least ten reputable citizens and freeholders of said city (three of whom reside within one thousand feet of the said inn and tavern) stating that the applicant is known to them to be of "good repute for honesty and temperance" and thereupon the Common Council may in its discretion grant the license under certain conditions therein set forth.

Section 5 of the ordinance prescribes that applications from saloon keepers, and persons other than inn and tavern keepers shall be made in like manner, "and the owner of the place proposed for license (if the applicant be not the owner) must be one of the signers to the certificate required to be annexed to the application."

The proposed amendments require that all the signers required must reside in the ward in which the business is proposed to be conducted.

At present, no licensed inn or saloon exists in the Second and Third wards. All Freeholders therein, who may be desirous or willing to certify to the honesty and temperance of an applicant for license from a ward, outside of their own, are debarred and prohibited from so doing.

In the First ward one inn and two saloons and in the Fourth ward one inn and seven saloons are licensed. Under the proposed amendments, should the present licenses of the Fourth ward again become applicants, they would require eighty freeholders resident in that ward to sign the necessary certificates.

The owner of the premises occupied must be one of the signers to the certificate. In the Fourth ward, the owners of two licensed premises, situate on Front street, and which have always been conducted in a quiet and orderly manner, reside without the limits of that ward; and ought their tenants to fail in their application by reason of the landlords non-residence? The amendments proposed to sections 14 and 13 are the erasure of the word knowingly whenever it occurs therein.

In the actions against Messrs Thorn and Day, the city maintained that the action against each, was of a civil character and that the principal was liable for the act of his servant. The ruling of Judge Runyon will be reviewed by a higher court, and "we can possess our souls in patience" until a decision is rendered.

The erasure of knowingly places the licensee at the mercy of his servants, who may collide with others, to violate these sections, as it will be claimed that the word "permit" standing alone, will fasten the liability of the principal for the misconduct of the servant.

Why these amendments were offered, we cannot imagine. Entire Prohibition would be better than this ordinance, with the proposed amendments, which punishes individuals but sustains the class.

The commissioners of appeal in cases of taxation meet at the Town Rooms on Tuesday, Nov. 28th inst, at 1 p. m.

Freeholder Maples celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding on Monday evening, Nov. 20th inst, at his residence on Prospect street.

Mr. Joel Moffett has already erected a barn on his newly purchased lot corner of Mountain and Park avenues and has a new dwelling house raised and rapidly approaching completion.

The Cranford brass band is advertised to give a minstrel entertainment on Thanksgiving evening at Lyceum Hall in our village. The band is under the direction of Prof. E. G. Bettel.

The death of Mrs. Anna Webb, wife of Henry L. Webb, occurred on Friday last. The funeral took place on Monday at 10 a. m. Services in the Episcopal church, the Rev. Thomas Drumm officiating. Interment in the family plot in Fairview Cemetery.

The irrepressable Mrs. Ratchford who was committed by Justice Jaques last July in default of bail to the tender care of Warden Cahill at Elizabeth, was released from that institution on Saturday last, the grand jury failing to find a bill of indictment against her.

Justice John Jaques has changed his quarters from the office near the hotel to the one in Hetfield's building, formerly occupied by Dr. Stryker adjoining Miss Whitaker's Millinery store. Mr. Burtis will occupy the building vacated by Justice Jacques as an office in connection with the livery business at Hotel stables.

The Rev. Mr. Honeyman of Plainfield officiated in the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning and the Rev. Warren Hoagland in the evening. The Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the church has been confined to the house the past week with an affection of the throat, but hopes to be able to occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

Aaron B. Clark who has the contract for the stone bridge near Henry J. Holmes, has had a very hard time in getting a good and sufficient foundation for the same owing to the quantity of water, and the condition of the ground being entirely composed of quick sand. Mr. Clark says he intends to have a substantial foundation, although it will involve considerable loss to him in work and material.

The attorneys for the applicants in the matter of the new roads lately laid by the surveyors of highway, filed their return the past week with Town clerk Whitaker and if no caveat is filed against recording them in the county clerk's office within the time specified by law, the roads will be public roads. Quite a number of the persons assessed find fault with the inequality of the assessment laid by the surveyors of highway.

J. Henry Manning has had a new hoisting apparatus put up at the ice house on Clark's Lake the past week. Henry intends to have the house filled this winter, if there should happen to be weather cold enough to freeze ice of a suitable thickness for harvesting. He last winter failed to get more than one-half a crop and in consequence had to purchase ice by the car load, in Newark, for his numerous customers during the latter part of the season.

A special meeting of the Westfield Bucket and Eng. Co. No. 1, was held in the Town rooms on Monday evening last. Considerable business of importance was transacted and a great deal of interest was manifested. Several members had names to propose of persons desiring to join the company, but it being a special meeting they had to await the regular monthly meeting in December. A communication was received from the Town Committee enclosing a copy of the Township Counsel's opinion in regard to the rebate of tax against firemen which was received and placed on file.

It was reported in our town on Saturday morning last that James Roll, residing about half way from Westfield to Springfield, while on his way home from the village of Westfield at about eleven o'clock on Friday evening, had stopped near the late residence of Ephriam Clark to repair a portion of the harness which had broken, when he was attacked and knocked down, and robbed of a considerable amount of money by some person or persons unknown who escaped. He was injured quite severely, so much so that his family physician, Dr. Jobs of Springfield, was sent for to dress his wounds.

On Friday night or Saturday morning early, Mr. N. A. Barnett residing on the Pierson farm near Gallows Hill in our township, had his stable broken into and one of his horses stolen. He notified officer Marsh, who started with him to look for the horse. On stopping at Elizabeth and upon inquiring of Chief of Police Jenkins it was learned that officer Martry had arrested a young man early that morning on his way through Elizabeth riding horse back without any saddle. Officer Martry took the young man to the station and put the horse up in Keron's livery stable. Mr. Barnett identified the horse at the stable as the one stolen that morning and then went to Police headquarters and made a complaint against the thief for breaking and entering his stable and stealing therefrom. The thief gave his name as Charles Harrington of New York city. He has but one arm and is about 25 years of age. He told the officer who arrested him, that he was taking the horse to New York city for the owner. Officer Martry, however, thought the story very thin as the sequel proved. Great credit is due to the efficient police force of Elizabeth under the present Chief William D. Jenkins. Harrington was brought before the court on Monday last and plead guilty; he was remanded to jail for sentence on Saturday.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

CHANGE OF MIND.—I declined to insert your advertisement of Hop Bitters last year because I then thought they might not be promotive of the cause of Temperance, but find they are, and a very valuable medicine, myself and wife having been greatly benefitted by them, and I take great pleasure in making them known. AN EXTRAORDINARY CASE—Austin, Texas, Feb. 28th, 1881—To Mr. J. W. Graham, Druggist: Dear Sir—My case was an acute form of bronchitis, and was of one and a half year's duration. I employed the best medical aid possible, but failed rapidly, until the doctors said I would die—that my case was incurable. Thrown upon my own resources, I got a bottle of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs, and in six hours felt a decided relief. In three days the cough almost disappeared. Now that my chances of life are good for many years, I earnestly recommend the above to every sufferer of lung or throat disease. C. G. LATHROP.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Billious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

AN EXPLANATION THAT CAME TOO LATE TO PREVENT TROUBLE.

Some eight or ten years ago a silver-tongued chap, who claimed to be a fruit tree agent, swindled the farmers of this county in a shameless manner, and one resident of Nankin was so mad about it that he came to Detroit, searched the rascal out and gave him a pounding on the street. After he got through his work he told the fellow that he would lick him twice as bad if he ever put eyes on him again, and it was a threat to be remembered and nursed. About three weeks ago the Nankin man was traveling in Washtenaw county, and as he journeyed along the highway he met a traveler who so closely resembled the fruit tree swindler that he halted and cried out:

"Here you are again, you bold-faced rascal!"

"Yes, I'm here," was the calm reply.

"Well, so'm I, and I'm going to lick you until you can't holler! I said I'd do it and I always keep my word. Climb down here!"

The stranger "clumb" without a protest, shedding his coat as he struck the ground, and a fight began. In about two minutes he had used up the farmer and was cooly replacing his coat.

"See here," said the man from Nankin as he wiped his nose with a piece of burdock, "you fight better than you did eight years ago."

"Well, I dunno. This is my first affair with you."

"Didn't I wallop you in front of the Detroit post office eight years ago?"

"No, sir! I was in Australia up to a year ago."

"And you never saw me before?"

"Never!"

"And was never in Nankin?"

"Never!"

"Well, I'll be hanged! Come to look at you, I can see that you are not the man! Why on earth didn't you explain, or ask me to? You must have thought me mistaken?"

"Oh, yes, I know you were mistaken, but I had just discovered that I had driven seven miles on the wrong road and was wishing some one would come along and give me two words of sass. I didn't want any explanations about it. A rotten sweet apple will cure that black eye in three or four days and salt and water will tighten your front teeth in a week or so. I feel fifty per cent. better, and I'm ever so much obliged. So long!"—Detroit Free Press.

I SHOULD SMILE.

Mr. Topnoddy came in late to supper, the other evening, and his wife had been keeping it on the stove for him an hour, at least; and she was not any happier for the loving ministration. Topnoddy saw the state of affairs, and when he sat down to the table he thought he would make things pleasant for her, so he cheerily began:

"I am a little late, my dear, but I was engaged down town in a matter pertaining to the city government, and couldn't get home. By the way, my dear, what do you think of the mayor's reform movements?"

"What movements? What reform? What mayor? Is he a married man?" snapped Mrs. Topnoddy, like a bunch of shooting crackers going off.

"Well, no," replied Topnoddy, "not yet."

"That's a good thing for some poor woman."

"But I was not talking about that, angel mine. I simply asked what you thought of his reform movements."

"What are they? Is there anything in them about reforming men who come late to their meals, and who won't cut the kindling wood, nor bring in the coal, nor carry a bucket of water, nor fasten the boards on the back fence, nor get the marketing, nor stop talking city government when they ought to talk home government, nor read their newspapers while their poor wives are slaving their lives out cooking for them, nor try to boss the house when the wife knows best what should be done, nor do forty other things they shouldn't do? I say, is this in them? If it ain't, he'd better shut up shop and retire, and let a woman run the machine awhile. I can tell you, Topnoddy, if I was in there I'd make things hum!"

Then she went out into the kitchen for something, and, while she was gone, Topnoddy drew a long breath and sighed:

"Hum! Well, I should smile."

NEW JERSEY FISHERIES.

Census Bulletin, No. 297, just received, gives the statistics of the commercial fisheries of the Middle States. The New Jersey report is summarized as follows:

New Jersey produced in 1880 $3,176,589 worth of fishery products, taking the sixth place in the list of fish producing States. In some of the special fisheries it takes a high rank. Its oyster products, valued at $2,080,625, are exceeded only by those of Maryland and Virginia. Its crab fisheries, from which the fishermen realize $162,012, are more extensive than those of any other State, while its quahaug (hard clam) fisheries are second only to those of New York. In the menhaden fisheries it stands fifth on the list, the oil, scrap and compost produced in 1880 being valued at $146,286. Its river fisheries are of minor importance, the total yield being only 2,752,000 pounds, netting the fishermen $92,435.

The detailed statements show the following facts: Persons employed, 6,220; fishing vessels, 590; fishing boats, 4,065; capital dependent on the fishery industries, $1,492,202; pounds of sea products (including oyster meats), 62,339,486; value of same, $3,085,154; pounds of river products, 2,752,000; value of same, $91,435; total value of products to the fishermen, $3,176,589.

A little girl was asked by her mother on her return from church, how she liked the preacher.

"Didn't like him at all," was the reply.

"Why?" asked the mother.

"'Cause he preached till he made me sleepy, and then hollered so loud that he kep' wakin' me up."

"The candles you sold me last night were very bad," said Suett to a tallow chandler.

"Indeed, sir, I am very sorry for that."

"Yes, sir; do you know they burnt to the middle, and would then burn no longer."

"You surprise me; what, sir, did they go out?"

"No, sir, no; they burned shorter."

A French Count, upon returning from the seaside, finds his previously trusted valet in a state of intoxication that defies concealment or apology.

"Confound you," says the Count, after a severe lecture, "have you no sense of shame—no self-respect? Suppose, now, that you were to be picked up in the street in that condition—"

"O, thash all ri' 'f I am," replied the drunken servant; "don't you fresh yerself 'bout me. I always carry your card case in my pocket."

This insures the election of a Democratic United States Senator.

THE NEXT ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The number of Presidential Electors for 1884, based on the new apportionment, will be as follows:

Alabama	10	Mississippi	9
Arkansas	7	Missouri	16
California	8	Nebraska	5
Colorado	3	Nevada	3
Connecticut	6	N. Hampshire	4
Delaware	3	New Jersey	9
Florida	4	New York	36

Maine	6	Texas	13
Maryland	8	Vermont	4
Massachusetts	14	Virginia	12

Total number......401

There is a net increase of 32 in the number of Electoral votes since the last Presidential election.

The States which voted for the Democratic candidate for President in 1880 have a net gain of 17, and those voting for the Republican candidate 15.

THE DUTY OF DEMOCRATS.

A LETTER FROM EX-SENATOR M'DONALD TO THE NEW YORK "WORLD."

SIR—Yours of this instant asking "What of Indiana and what of the future?" received. Indiana wheels into line with a Democratic majority of from 12,000 to 15,000 and a gain of four members of Congress, and probably of five, and of a Democratic majority in both branches of the Legislature, making our victory complete. The result of the late elections all over the North places the Democratic party in the ascendancy for the next two years. If this ascendancy is to become Executive in 1884 it must be on the record the party makes in the interval. Wise counsels must prevail; reforms must be real.

The tariff must be reduced to the revenue standard.

Taxes must be levied only for the support of the Government.

All expenditures authorized by Congress must be for National purposes, and for no other purposes, and economy must be enforced in all departments of the Government.

The interference of the Federal Administration in State elections and State affairs, so overwhelmingly rebuked in New York, must cease.

As soon as possible all laws authorizing Federal action beyond the limits of the Constitution must be repealed.

Political and official honesty must be made the test of eligibility to office.

In short, we must merit, as Democrats, the confidence which has been reposed in us by the people.

J. E. MCDONALD.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 9, 1882.

POETRY.

GARDEN GATE.

In the sultry time of morning,
When the fields are full of hay,
Pretty Janet brings her sewing
To the gate, at close of day.

Do you wonder that she lingers—
Often glances down the lane,
Do you ask me why her fingers
Seem to find her work a strain?

Love-dreams hold her in their tether
Love is idle—as we know—
Idle in the summer weather,
Idlest in the sunset glow.

Now he leans upon the railing,
Tells her all about the hay;
Still his pleas seem unavailing—
Very little will she say.

Is it but capricious feigning?
Learn a lesson from the rose,
Peerless 'mong her sisters reigning,
Fairest flower that ever blows.

Not at once she flaunts her petals—
First a bud of sober green—
By and by the [illegible] sepals
Show a dash of red between.

Breezes court her, sunbeams woo her,
Wide and wider does she start;
Opens all her crimson treasure,
Yields her fragrance at her heart.

Ah! the rose-buds will not render
All their secrets in one day,
And the maiden shy and tender,
Is as difficult as they.

GIVING THANKS.

BY HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

The last week in October!

As a general thing, Nature is not beautiful with her smiles these short, dreary days, when the world stands shuddering on the threshold of winter. But this particular Monday was full of balm and sunshine; the air sweet with the indescribable perfume of the colored leaves which were drifted up along the roadside, and collected in rustling layers under the stone foundations of Exmouth Jail. Overhead the sky was blue as sapphire; and here and there along this wood-path a stray wild-flower lifted its purple eye, the last, lingering relic of the golden September glow.

Doctor Fitch rode along the lonely bridle-path, the sound of his horse's hoofs on the dead leaves reminding him vaguely of the days, long, long ago, when he was a boy and scoured these very woods in search of nuts, and hunted squirrels and chipmunks with a delight which moose and red deer could not give him now.

"If one could only be a boy forever," said Royal Fitch. "Hallo! who's that?" as his horse shied slightly at sight of a slender figure, sitting on a fallen log, a few feet back of the road. "Oh, it's you, Mary Trefoil! You got your discharge this morning."

Mary Trefoil looked up—a dark-eyed, pallid-faced woman, of two or three and twenty. Dr. Fitch knew her very well.

She had been in Exmouth Prison three months for theft; and during two of these three months she had lain nearly at the point of death, in the hospital ward, with a low, lingering fever.

Dr. Fitch was rather proud of the skill which had rescued her from the jaws of death. He stopped his horse and looked at her.

"Yes, sir," said Mary Trefoil, spiritlessly. "I've got my discharge."

"And where are you going now?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Where are your friends?" he asked, not unkindly.

"I have none, sir."

"But this won't do," said Dr. Fitch, noting the troubled light in the girl's eye, the deadly brightness of her brow and cheeks. "Look here; you must go somewhere, you know. You can't sit here. Can't you think of any place where they would give you food and shelter for a few days, until you get strong?"

Mary Trefoil shook her head. She did not seem to be at all interested in the question.

Dr. Fitch's horse reached up his head and browsed on the still green leaves of a wild grape-vine, which the boughs of a cedar had sheltered from the early frost. Dr. Fitch himself sat like a statue, and looked at Mary Trefoil.

"A social problem," he said, inwardly. "And she must be solved, somehow."

"Mary," he spoke aloud, "can you walk a mile?"

"I suppose so, sir."

"Then walk along by my horse's side. I know a good old lady who wants a girl. Perhaps you may suit her. She need not know who you are, or whence you came."

"I didn't put myself in Exmouth Jail," sullenly retorted Mary. "And I have told one story from the beginning—that I had nothing to do with the silver. I don't know how it came into my trunk; I didn't know it was there, until the officer dragged it out before my eyes."

"The law thought differently," said Dr. Fitch, who, as prison physician, had heard these protestations of innocence from scores of lips before. "However that is not the question we are discussing just at present. Will you try to deserve my recommendation, if I give you one?"

"Heaven helping me, sir, I will!" said Mary Trefoil, evidently affected by his kindness.

She walked beside the horse for some little distance, until, down a side road, which seemed to plunge directly into the woods, they came to an old gray-stone house all mantled in scarlet creepers, with a background of gnarled apple-trees, and the whirr of a grist-mill sounding somewhere in the background like the ceaseless hum of some gigantic insect.

"Good-afternoon, Mrs. Glover!" said Dr. Fitch. "Have you suited yourself yet with a girl?"

Old Mrs. Glover, an apple-faced matron of sixty, looked at them through a pair of round, silver-rimmed spectacles.

"No, nor I ain't like," said she. "Betsey Keene, she's gone into the milliner's trade, and Lucy Hovey, she—"

"Well, I've brought you one," said Dr. Royal Fitch. "Come here, Mary. This is Mary Trefoil," with a quick glance at the silent girl. "I know who she is, and I can answer that she will do her best to please you and make herself useful."

"Indeed I will, ma'am," said Mary in a low voice.

"Folks live about here?" said Mrs. Glover.

"I have no relatives," said Mary. "I come from the northern part of the county."

"All the better," said the old lady, briskly. "You won't have no followers. Well, Mary, I won't deny that I'm awful glad to see you, for I'm pretty nigh tuckered out with doing all the chores myself. To be sure, my son Daniel helps me, mornings and evenings, before he goes to teach deestrick school—for he's a scholar, my son is," with conscious pride. "And father, he does what he can; but a man can't do much beside tendin' grist-mill in a place like this. You look a little white and peaked, but—"

"Oh, she'll be all right in this pure air, with plenty of your new milk and home-made bread!" said Dr. Fitch, cheerily.

And, with a whispered word or two of encouragement to Mary Trefoil, he rode away.

On Thanksgiving Day, nearly a month later, he came back.

"Hello!" said Dr. Fitch. "Why, Mary you look like a different creature!"

Mrs. Glover had gone to church with her son Daniel and "Father," all undismayed by the occasional flakes of snow, which were beginning to flutter through the air, and the howling of the wind down the glen.

Mary Trefoil was tripping around the kitchen, with an unwonted tinge of color in her cheeks, and her soft, brown hair parted from her forehead, and a red ribbon tied at her side. She stopped, with a milk jug in her hand, and looked at Dr. Fitch, brightly.

"I am like a different creature, sir," said she, "thanks to you!"

"So it's going right, eh?" said the doctor. "You like the place?"

"I am perfectly happy here," said Mary. "But, oh, doctor, I have no one to consult, and I've asked myself the question so many times over that everything seems distorted in my eyes! I wonder if I might dare to speak out my mind to you!"

"What on earth is the girl talking about?" said Dr. Fitch.

"If I could only see the prison chaplain—"

"Come, I'll officiate as prison chaplain, for the time being," said Dr. Fitch, good humoredly. "Out with your trouble! What is it?"

"Well, it—it isn't exactly a trouble," confessed Mary, busying herself with polishing the great red apples which were to be the crowning glory of the dessert. "But I think—I am almost certain—that Daniel Glover is getting fond of me!"

"Hal—lo!" said the doctor.

"Oh, doctor," faltered poor Mary, "ought I to tell him all?"

"Hold your tongue," said the doctor, brusquely. "A close mouth makes a wise head! You say you are innocent of all those charges?"

"I was innocent!" cried Mary. "I am innocent!"

"Very well," said Dr. Fitch; "then you are as good as he is."

And with a few kindly words he rode on.

But as Mr. and Mrs. Glover were coming leisurely home from church, with Daniel sauntering behind, a sullen-eyed tramp slouched up to the farmer touching his cap.

"Be you the grist-mill man?" said he.

"I am the miller, friend," said Mr. Glover.

"Well, then," said the dusty-footed stranger, "It is my bounden duty to tell you that you're harboring a prison-bird in your house."

"What!" cried old Mrs. Glover.

"I knows it, blamed well!" asserted the man, "'cos I was in quod at the same time she was. Theft for she, and drunk and disorderly for me. And I wouldn't have blowed on her, but she refused me a drink of cider, and wouldn't let me in to warm my feet. I ain't no tale-bearer; but there's some things as flesh and blood won't bear!"

He stalked on, muttering to himself, while Mr. and Mrs. Glover and Daniel stared at each other in horrified amazement.

"Mother, is it true?" said Daniel.

"It can't be!" said the old lady.

"Ask herself," said the miller grimly.

Mary met them at the door with a radiant smile. The dinner was all ready; the humble array of silver and china sparkled on the board; the fire blazed on the clean-swept hearth.

"I am so glad you have come back!" said she. "Not that I was afraid to be alone, but there was an ill-looking man along just now— Oh, why do you look at me so strangely? Is there anything the matter?"

"There is much the matter!" said the old miller, sternly. Answer me, girl—"

"Father, you shall not be harsh to her!" said Daniel Glover. "Come here, Mary. Lean on me. Nay, do not tremble so. What is there to be afraid of? We all know that the brute spoke lies!"

"Is it a lie," faltered Mrs. Glover, "that you—you were in prison?"

"It is no lie!" said Mary turning deadly white. "I served a sentence in Exmouth Prison; but—but I never was guilty! Circumstances were against me. I—"

"Then," sternly uttered the old man, "you must leave this house!"

"If she goes, father," said Daniel Glover, firmly, "I go with her. For I trust her. I believe in her!"

"Daniel, are you crazy?" said his mother.

At that moment, Dr. Fitch rode up, looking flushed and excited, yet pleased withal. He sprung off his horse and walked into the house, looking keenly about him.

"Good people," said he, "what is all this about?"

"We have just heard," wailed Mrs. Glover, "that our Mary is—a convict!"

"Pshaw!" said Dr. Fitch. "So it has got around to your ears, has it? Well, I have just heard that she isn't. I have come from the hospital ward. A man was brought in fatally wounded in a liquor saloon fray. I examined his hurts. 'My man,' said I, 'if you have any affairs to settle they had better be settled at once, for you have not six hours to live.' Said he, 'If I am dying, there is one or two things I would like to say.' And then in solemn confession, he said, among other black and wicked revelations, that he was one of the burglars in the famous Chartens case—that he hid the silver in Mary Trefoil's trunk when, at the last, he found himself unable to carry it all away, she being seamstress in the Chartens family, and entirely ignorant of the whole thing—that he was too closely tracked to contrive to return, and so she was convicted through circumstantial evidence being, to use the wretch's own words, 'as innocent as a baby' all the time. He is a dying man now, under the care of a chaplain, but he has done his best to right you, Mary Trefoil, in the eyes of the world!"

"Mary," said the miller, "I was wrong just now when I spoke up so sudden."

"Mary, don't look so pale," soothed Mrs. Glover. "Here—drink some of this cold water!"

"Mary, dearest," whispered Daniel, as he stole his arm around her waist, "I knew you were too good and pure to be aught else!"

And the last words revived her most of all!

Dr. Fitch stayed to help them eat the Thanksgiving dinner which Mary had prepared so daintily—the brown and oleaginous turkey, the cinnamon-flavored apple pies, the baked potatoes and mince tarts, with the nuts and apples and sparkling cider afterward. And when he rose up to go, he said, laughing:

"Well, and when is the wedding to be?"

"At Christmas, please God," Daniel uttered, bravely, while Mary Trefoil cried out:

"Oh, Daniel, I never said so."

"But I say so, and, mother says so," chimed in Mr. Glover, Senior. "And so the matter is settled by a vote of the majority."

"And I shall claim the privilege of giving away the bride," said Dr. Fitch, merrily.

And so he went out into the snow and darkness, whistling gayly as he vanished.

And Mary, looking earnestly up into her lover's eyes, said softly:

"Oh, Daniel, I think I never knew before the true meaning of the name Thanksgiving!"

"It does seem providential," said old Mrs. Glover, tenderly stroking down the bright haired daughter-in-law elect, "that all this should have happened on Thanksgiving Day!"

As if all things were not providential, when Providence is over us all!—Saturday Night.

JEALOUSY PUNISHED.

Lilian Whitney looked out into the gathering twilight—her fair face with the nut-brown curls clinging about it, brought out in startling relief by a background of vivid blush roses.

She was expecting her lover—noble, handsome Frank Carleton! Only a week ago he had poured into her ears the story of his love, and had asked her to be his wife.

And she smiled softly and blushed as she looked at the diamond ring which gleamed in the tender light of the glorious June moon, just grandly raising behind the far-off purple hills.

"Oh," murmured Lilian, "what have I ever done that such a grand, noble man should love me?"

The love-light in her eyes became brighter, the blushes on her cheek deepened, for she heard a footstep which she could never mistake.

With a fluttering heart Lilian shrunk back among the rose-bushes, thinking fondly that Frank would soon find her.

But Frank Carleton was not alone—for a woman, tall and graceful in form, dressed in sombre black, was walking beside him.

Hark! Frank was speaking and Lilian strained her ears to hear. What a look of love and devotion there was on his face as he bent over her! Lilian clinched her hands, and her lips grew white and rigid.

"Dear Maud," he said, softly and tenderly, "you can never guess how very, very thankful I am that that man is dead. Now you are free, and nothing shall part us again."

"Nothing, Frank!" she said, looking up at him; and Lilian could see the passionate love shining in her eyes. "Not even your marriage with this beautiful Miss Whitney?"

"Surely not," he answered reproachfully. "Why should it?"

And then they passed on.

With a low moan, Lilian fell prone among the rose-bushes.

Lilian did not stop to reason—did not stop to consider that there might be a mistake—that deceit and falsehood had ever been foreign to Frank Carleton's nature.

And so the next day Frank received a small package—a few books, some old love letters, and a diamond ring. There was no note of explanation; but he well knew who had sent them.

Enraged and astounded, he immediately sought Lilian for an explanation; but the servant who answered his impatient ring said that she was "not at home."

A week later, Frank Carleton started for Europe; and so these two lives, that might have been all in all to each other, drifted further and further apart.

Five years later. It was the evening of Mrs. Roderick Forrest's ball, and the best society of Melville was there.

Lilian Whitney leaned back in the embrasure of one of the windows, and, hidden by the flowing draperies of the curtains, watched with dreamy, half-closed eyes, the bright, merry throng in the ball-room.

Her beauty was more spirituelle than it had been five years ago, and the proud look on her face had softened into more tender, more womanly curves. She was decidedly the belle of the evening, and it was only by much skillful manœuvring that she had been able to gain the quiet retreat for a few moments.

All at once she caught her breath with a sudden gasp of pain, and, placing her hand upon her heart, to stop its wild beating, leaned forward and peered out.

Yes, it was surely Frank Carleton she saw, though he was much changed. Tall and straight, and browned, with heavy moustache and beard, he looked at least ten years older, and certainly a great deal more handsome and manly, than he had looked five years ago.

"How noble he looks!" Lilian thought, with a sudden thrill. "Oh, how could I misjudge him so by my dark suspicions? And now I have lost him forever!"

And the hot tears of bitter anguish and remorse trickled between her daintily-gloved fingers.

The curtains parted, and Mrs. Roderick Forrest and Frank Carleton stood before her.

"Lillie, love, you thought you would outwit us this time, but you see you have failed, for I knew where you were all the time. Allow me to present—— Why, child, are you ill?"

For, white and trembling, our heroine had sunk down, looking like a broken lily.

She had thought she could bear the meeting firmly and calmly, but her strength failed her at the last moment.

When, a few minutes later, she opened her eyes, she found Frank Carleton's arms were about her, and that he was showering kisses on her face.

For a moment she felt as if she could die for very happiness.

"Frank," she whispered, "Oh, Frank, can you forgive me after I have wronged you so deeply?"

"Hush!" he said; "hush, my darling! I have nothing to forgive."

"She has told me all," she went on—"your sister Maud—how you loved her, and how much you helped her while her miserable drunken husband was alive! And, oh, Frank, I misjudged you so cruelly! I did not know she was your sister."

"Of course you did not," he said, tenderly. "Has not your mistake made us miserable for five long years? Do not mention it again, my darling!"

And he stopped her lips with a kiss.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

SOUND TIMBER.

The National Democrat of Rahway rears a platform on which, we think every true friend of representative government ought to resolutely stand.

It reads thus—

"Purify the ballot box.

Make vote buying and vote selling odious.

Arrest and prosecute the first person who purchases, sells or offers.

Not one cent to be used for elections, beyond paying for printing.

All poll committees to be volunteers who labor for principles, not gain.

Discountenance the person who asks pay for political services.

A return to the practices of the good old days of honest Jeffersonian and Jacksonian politics, when a man held his principles as sacred and incorruptible.

No candidate to contribute one cent towards his election in any way.

All candidates to be selected for their fitness for the position and not for their ability to spend money.

Vigilance committees of the best men of both parties to volunteer as detectives, and bring to justice all who in any way transgress the bribery laws."

That is exactly what the present day demands, and what must be made absolutely effective in order to preserve the blessings of civil freedom.

The corrupt use of money in elections has grown to be a rank curse in this country, and it is the duty of every patriotic citizen to battle for its extermination.

No greater insult can be offered the American Republic than the nomination of a man for office because he has money and the disposition to spend it for the attainment of political success, and no worse enemy can the people encounter than such a man.

Let the watchword be—DOWN WITH POLITICAL CORRUPTION!

THE LESSON.

The general result of the elections recently held throughout the United States teaches politicians of every party name a most salutary lesson, and promises great public good.

It may be summarized as follows—

That the welfare of the people and official integrity must be esteemed of far more value than partisan advantage.

That the people rightfully possess and will exercise sovereign authority.

That representatives of the people are servants of the people, not masters, entitled to praise and reward when faithful, but subject to ignominious discharge when found unworthy.

Such, briefly stated, is the lesson thundered forth by vox populi, and no intelligent man can misunderstand its meaning or deny the need of its utterance.

It is wise and timely.

It carries with it both condemnation and encouragement, denouncing in severe and fitting terms political evil, and at the same time invigorating patriotism by showing that the vital principle of free government still animates and controls popular action.

The people are honest.

May their rule endure forever!

Grover Cleveland is the son of a Presbyterian clergyman, and Robert E. Pattison the son of a Methodist clergyman. Mrs. Pattison is also the daughter of a clergyman.

Among the names mentioned for the United States Senatorship in this State are Senator McPherson, ex-Senator Randolph, Hon. Ashbel Green, Hon. Hezekiah B. Smith, and Hon. Gottfried Krueger.

Major O'Connor, of Newark, has been named by his friends as a candidate for the Speakership of the House. Clarke, of Hudson, Ludlam, of Cape May, Ross, of Sussex, and Flynn, of Passaic county, are also named.

It is rumored that Secretary Lincoln in his official report will recommend that no River and Harbor bill be passed at the next session of Congress, on the ground that the extravagant amount ($19,000,000) appropriated last Winter cannot be expended in one year, and that there will be a surplus of at least $8,000,000. There is now a balance from previous years of about $4,000,000.

The complete returns of the late Congressional election show that the next House of Representatives will stand as follows: Democrats, 195; Republicans, 123; Readjusters, 5; Independents, 2; total, 325. The Democrats will have a majority of sixty-five over all others, but this will, no doubt, be increased to sixty-seven, as one Independent member elected from Iowa has declared himself in sympathy with the Democrats.

On the 4th of March next a condition of things will exist similar to that which attracted such earnest attention when Gen. Arthur succeeded to the Presidency. There will be no President pro tempore of the Senate, and no Speaker to fill the Executive chair in the case of "removal, death, resignation, or inability," as prescribed by the Constitution. Judge Davis' term as Senator will expire March 4, 1883, and even if he were re-elected, he would no longer be President of the Senate after that day without being again chosen. One-third of the body will be renewed on the 4th of March, which will participate in the choice of a presiding officer, and there can be no election for a year, hence unless the President calls the Senate together specially.

The following level-headed paragraph is from the Springfield Republican:—"It is melancholy to think how many more Republicans are pinning their faith on 'the Democrats making fools of themselves' than on the Republicans deserving to recover their lost power. When it comes to making fools of themselves, the Republicans are rapidly loosing all chances to twit the other fellows. The Democrats got a majority in the House and kept it for six years, even 'making fools of themselves.' They will be fools, indeed, if they cannot keep it six years a second time and improve somewhat by experience. If the Republicans are wise, they will not wait for that fooling, for there is just a bare possibility it may be unavoidably detained."

"LICENSE" OR "NO LICENSE."

It cannot be denied that the approaching city election is an important one in certain particulars which will have considerable bearing on the future welfare of Plainfield. The granting of "License" or "No License" to hotels and saloons in the city is to be the principal issue in the contest. The prohibition party having captured the Republican primaries and convention, have placed in the field under the head of "Republican Ticket" a "No License" Council. Should they succeed in electing this ticket the scenes and incidents of a few years ago will be repeated, when the Common Council refused licenses to all hotels and saloons in the city, thus cutting off a revenue that could illy afford to be lost to the city's exchequer, while illegal selling was practised by the wholesale, and more drunkenness was apparent on the streets and crime committed than in any year when licenses were granted, which can easily be proven by examining the court records. Besides, the amount of revenue thus derived from licenses is necessary to assist in running the city government. Our public streets must be lighted and kept in repair, and protection afforded our citizens by police regulation. The amount of money raised each year from taxation is too small to carry on the affairs of the city, and the revenue derived from the granting of licenses cannot afford to be lost, especially when the cause of temperance will not possibly be benefited by a refusal to grant such licenses. These are plain facts and answer as well as a two column article on the subject. The people should carefully consider before they cast their votes next Tuesday. The ticket published by us elsewhere is made up of gentlemen of both parties, who are not fanatics on the liquor question, but are in favor of granting licenses and should command the suffrages of our citizens. It is only necessary to go back a very short time for an exposition of the evil results (we speak advisedly) of a no-license policy. In 1877 licenses to sell liquor were refused all saloons, and $800 from hotels was the entire amount of revenue received from such source. Yet a Committee appointed for the purpose, reported sixty-three saloons in the city where liquor was sold. The next year, naturally, a change took place and twenty licenses were granted and a revenue of $4,000 to help the city control the evil traffic, was received. Leaving out of the matter the question of a revenue—which is objected to in this relation, although without it the city could not control what would result in an unrestricted sale—is it not more of a temperance policy to license twenty and have no more, than to refuse all and be cursed with sixty-three lawless dens uncontrolled by the provisions of a license and without the fear of losing the privilege they are possessed of?

CITY ELECTION.

Although Plainfield is a small municipality, the importance of selecting for her the right kind of officials deserves the earnest consideration of voters.

The drawing of strict party lines is not always productive of the best local government. A mixture of Republicans and Democrats is to be preferred. The choice of men because of their ability and readiness to act with practical judgment for the best interests of the whole community and to prudently handle limited resources, is the thing required. Not impetuous men, but men of cool heads and sound decision.

The Democratic nominees, in our opinion, come up to that standard of worth, and we respectfully ask each citizen to impartially scan their names and claims before depositing his ballot.

THE CITY TICKET.

The ticket made at the Democratic City Convention last evening, for City and other officers, which appears in full in another column, is one which should command the votes and support of every citizen having the welfare of our city at heart. It is composed of representative men throughout, some of whom have been tried in public positions and not found wanting in any of the requisites necessary to make a capable and efficient official. To speak individually of them all is unnecessary. They all come up to the standard required in an official who will administer faithfully the laws coming within his jurisdiction.

WM. B. MAXSON.

The name at the head of an election ticket should always lend strength to it. We are confident this will be the case in the nomination of Hon. Wm. B. Maxson for Mayor of the City of Plainfield, who has been selected by the Democrats and Conservative voters for that honor. He represents no clique or faction and receives the unanimous endorsement of a large body of our citizens irrespective of politics. That he will be elected and afterward faithfully administer the affairs of the city coming within his jurisdiction, we have no doubt.

JOHN B. BROWN.

The nomination and election of John B. Brown, as Collector of the City of Plainfield last December, was a proof that the voters of our city desired a change in that office. Mr. Brown has proven himself a most efficient officer since. He has again been nominated for Collector, and should be endorsed by every lover of honesty and capability, and re-elected by a rousing majority. The tax-payer has only to call at the Collector's office to find that the books are kept in the most systematic manner, while the large amount of taxes, due and past due, that have been collected by him is sufficient proof of his capability to fill the office.

ROWLAND M. STOVER

Has been re-nominated for the important position of Chosen Freeholder to be supported at the charter election. Mr. Stover has made an efficient and capable official during his past year of office. That the conservative voters of Plainfield assisted materially in his election to the office of Freeholder last year, is a well-known fact. That they will again do so, after he has so faithfully served his constituents is not to be doubted.

NATHAN HARPER.

We cannot too heartily endorse the nomination of Judge Nathan Harper for a re-election to the responsible position of School Trustee. In him is combined all the requisites necessary to make an official to suit the people. He is honest and capable. His record during the years of his service in the capacity of School Trustee is a most commendable one. He should be returned by a handsome majority.

Astronomers ask for prayers for fair weather on December 6, the date of the transit of Venus.

WALTER L. HETFIELD.

The Candidate for City Judge on our ticket is a young and rising lawyer of Plainfield, who if elected to the position will faithfully look after the city's interests in his official capacity. He should be elected.

COUNCILMEN-AT-LARGE.

No two better men could have been selected as Councilmen-at-Large than those selected at the Democratic City Convention last Wednesday evening—Robert Livingston and Jeremiah Manning. The former has the experience of having served satisfactorily in the Council the past year, while Mr. Manning is well-known to our citizens as an honest and upright man, eminently fitted for the position.

To those of our residents who are in want of clothing we would advise them to call on Lilienstern, the leader of fashions in Plainfield, as it will pay them. He is selling goods lower than they can be bought for outside of Plainfield.

THE Hibernia mines of Morris county rank as the first in New Jersey and the eleventh in the United States. They are worked by three companies—the Andover, the Glendon and the Bethlehem. The average export of the three companies is fully 12,000 tons per month. The Glendon company alone last year raised over 80,000 tons. The three companies employ 800 hands. The iron ore is taken by the Hibernia Mine Railroad to Rockaway, and thence shipped to its destination. Last year the railroad carried over 250,000 tons of this useful ore. Drills which are worked by steam and compressed air are used extensively in these mines.

MR. and MRS. BENJ. B. SQUIER, more familiarly known by the old residents of this city as "Uncle Ben, and Aunt Rachel," (they having lived here together more than half a century), were agreeably and completely surprised on Tuesday afternoon last by their married children and grandchildren filing in just before "tea time," each laden with a basket or package of good things for the inner man, and beautifully spreading the table, invited them to tea. It was the seventy-fourth birth-day anniversary of Mr. S. and as their children were denied the pleasure of celebrating their golden wedding in December last, in consequence of one of the grandchildren being stricken with varioloid, they availed themselves of this occasion for a surprise. In the evening several of the neighbors, including the Rev. J. J. Pomeroy and wife, hearing of it, called and tendered their congratulations. We understand if their lives are spared until Christmas Eve next they intend to celebrate the fifty-first anniversary of their wedding as the golden one. The Rev. Lewis Bond, of Plainfield, who married them, is still residing in that city. It is a rare occurrence to find a pastor and a couple that he has married living for over fifty years in the same county, and we hope they will meet on the fifty first anniversary.—Rahway Democrat.

A very novel and pleasing social affair, was held among the Methodists in the parlors of their church, last Tuesday evening. The feature of the occasion was the serving of China tea in Japanese cups and saucers that were afterwards presented to the partaker to save the trouble of washing. Wun Lung, a Mongolian not unconnected with the laundry interests of this city, was present for the purpose of making tea-box fixtures and painting them off on the [illegible] as his autograph. His success was astonishing. Sweet strains of instrumental music floated through the rooms where congenial couples promenaded during the evening. DEMOCRATIC CITY CONVENTION.

The delegates from the different wards met in the rooms of the Democratic Association Wednesday evening. James E. Martine, Esq., was chosen Chairman and Mr. Vincent L. Frazee, Secretary. The respective delegations were present as elected at the primaries with the exception of the Second and Fourth wards—Joseph G. Miller, J. A. Demarest and James Muldowney were chosen to fill the vacancies. The Chairman of the Fourth Ward was, on motion, authorized to cast the full vote of the delegation. L. F. Wadsworth stated the call and moved to proceed to the nomination of a candidate as Mayor. The First and Second ward delegations waived the privilege of making the nomination and allowed the Third ward to name the Hon. William B. Maxson. No other candidate being mentioned, the nomination was made unanimous. Messrs. W. J. Tobin and W. H. Warner were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Maxson of his nomination.

For Councilmen at Large, Messrs. Jeremiah Manning and Robert L. Livingston were nominated without dissent.

For Freeholder, Mr. Rowland M. Stover was the only nominee and unanimously chosen.

For Collector Mr. John B. Brown was nominated by acclamation.

Hon. William B. Maxson having arrived was introduced by the Chairman and accepted the nomination in the following well chosen words:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION:—No man should be indifferent to the approbation of his fellow-citizens or unaffected by its announcement. For this public manifestation of your confidence, I return to you my sincere thanks, and I accept the nomination so unanimously tendered to me by you, the representatives of the people, in obedience to your call with a full knowledge and appreciation of the responsibility I assume by its acceptance and with the assurance on my part that if it be the will of the people, that I shall be the Mayor of this beautiful city I will execute the duties of that office fairly, impartially, without fear or favor and to the best of my ability preserve the integrity and honor of Plainfield and to secure an honest and economical administration of municipal government, and as far as in that office lies, enforce order, peace, health and protection for all the people of our city.

The offices of Assessor and Treasurer were passed without nomination, and Mr. Walter L. Hetfield was unanimously chosen as candidate for City Judge.

For School Trustee Mr. Nathan Harper was nominated for the full term—no nomination for the unexpired term being made.

For Commissioners of Appeal, Mr. Jasper G. Cadmus was the only nomination, and for him the Secretary cast the ballot.

On motion of Mr. L. F. Wadsworth, Messrs T. H. Keller, R. L. Livingston, L. F. Wadsworth and W. L. Force were appointed with the Chairman as a Committee to fill the vacancies and present a ticket for the support of the Democracy at the coming election.

The Convention then adjourned.

Attention Voters!

Remember. You vote by Wards in the coming election. Read your tickets over before depositing it in the ballot box.

Beware of spurious tickets at the approaching election. Unscrupulous tricksters and heelers will use them. Secure the right ticket and vote it. Carefully scan the names on every ticket.

Still Another.

James M. Dunn has on exhibition at his store twenty yards of Tapleector's most popular make of black silk dress goods. The order was found in a can of Davis' Baking Powder by Mrs. J. A. Drake. The ladies of Plainfield should avail themselves of this new advertising scheme while it lasts. It certainly can't be profitable to continue it many years.

A Grand Concert.

The entertainment to be given this (Thursday) evening in the M. E. church, is the second of the Y. M. C. A. course, and will take the form of a grand concert under the management and leadership of Mr. E. J. Fitzhugh. Dr. De Hass.

The ladies of the Park avenue Baptist church have succeeded in securing that instructive and eloquent lecturer, the Rev. Dr. F. S. DeHass, for two evenings in this city both during the present month. On Thursday the 7th inst. he will lecture on "Egypt and the Egyptians" and on the 21st inst on "The Giant Cities of Bashan." Dr. DeHass' discourses are models of rhetoric, abounding with instruction and of the most entertaining character.

A Surprise.

A large number of the young friends of Miss Alice Tallman of North Plainfield, surprised her at her father's residence on Monday evening last, by their arrival in Mr. John Whiteson's wagon and taking possession of the house. The party was gotten up by Miss Bost of Rockview avenue and Miss Mamie Whitlock and of those invited about twenty attended. The evening was spent in having a grand time which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A Warning to Justices of the Peace.

A Camden justice has been convicted of extortion. He arrested a little fellow under seven years old under the disorderly act, on a charge of using profane language, frightened a confession from the little fellow that he had used bad words while in a three-acre field, fined him $3, and sent him to jail in default of payment. The outcome was the prompt release of the lad and the indictment and conviction of the justice for extorting illegal fees, the law only allowing him seventy-five cents.

Baird's Minstrels.

The Boston Post says: "Standing room only" was the cry before the performance had fairly commenced, and the late comers were obliged to content themselves with this arrangement. The performance of Baird's Mammoth Minstrels was a fine one in every respect; the first part was exceptionally good. The second part was long and varied, and each number was well worthy of the applause which it received. Baird's Minstrels remain only this week and those who desire to see them had better go early and "avoid the crowd." This company shows at VanDeventer Hall, Friday evening.

G. A. R.

It has been determined to establish in Plainfield a Post of the Grand Army of the Republic. At a recent meeting of soldiers, Dr. W. E. Mattison, Mayor L. V. F. Randolph and Capt. Darius Martin were requested to arrange with Gen. Campbell, Department Commander, for the preliminary steps. That having been done, a meeting is now called for Friday evening, Dec. 1st, at 8 o'clock, at the School House in North Plainfield to go forward with the organization. All soldiers of the late war in good respectable standing—whatever the rank or party ties—are invited to join in this movement.

Ten Nights in a Bar-Room.

*At Van Deventer Hall this Thanks*giving evening, the "Northern Star Combination" will make its first appearance in this city and render the strongly emotional and highly moral drama, "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room." The artists selected for the various parts are all well calculated to sustain them, and we are led to believe that the play will be a great success in every way. Mr. Wm. Haines, the proprietor of the organization, is no stranger to many of our citizens, who will endorse our statement that he knows what is good and is just the one to spare no pains in endeavoring to give the public the worth of its patronage. Other members of the company are residents here and deserve a strong support from the community in their effort to interest and entertain. Admission is placed at a low figure—particulars of which and the full cast may be found in the advertisement on the opposite page.

The Game Law Expounded.

Two cases involving questions of interest alike to sportsmen and the occupiers of land whereon game is to be found, were disposed of before Justice Horton and two juries on Monday last. The cases were those of Wendel Roth against Fred. Correll and the same against Henry Rebmann. The facts as brought out on the trials were as follows: Mr. Roth leased a farm in Warren township of a Mr. Terry, and was in possession of same until the thirteenth day of November ult., when he assigned his interest in the lease to one John Wemlein. On the first, third and eleventh of November, Fred. Correll came on the premises hunting with dog and gun; on the third instant Rebmann, also having a gun, accompanied him. Mr. Roth requested them not to hunt on the premises. Mr. Correll replied that he had the written permission of the owner to do so and showed to Roth a letter written by Mrs. Terry, the wife of the landlord, giving Correll the privilege claimed. Notwithstanding this letter Mr. Roth ordered them off the place, but they refused to go and Mr. Roth feeling that his rights as tenant were being infringed upon placed the matter in the hands of his counsel, Messrs. Suydam & Jackson, with instructions to take such proceedings as the law provided for obtaining redress. Two actions of trespass were therefore commenced, one against each of the defendants under the game act, which provides that any one who carries a gun on land not his own, without the license or permission of the owner or tenant in possession shall forfeit to the owner or possessor five dollars and costs for each offence. The defendants were represented by John Ulrich, Esq., who contended that his clients having the written consent of the owner were not liable under the statute. The jury in each case under the instructions of Justice Horton—who in a very clear and convincing manner explained the legal points of the case—found a verdict of guilty as alleged. Thereupon judgment was rendered against Correll for fifteen dollars and costs and against Rebmann for five dollars and costs. The Justice, by this decision, holds the law to be; "That where a landlord leases land to a tenant, without expressly reserving to himself the right to game thereon, the right to such game belongs to the tenant and no one has a right to take such game without the tenant's permission, the permission of the landlord to take same being of no avail as against the tenant." An opinion which we think is characterized by the usual good sense and sound judgment for which Justice Horton is becoming justly distinguished.

OFFICIAL VOTE FOR CONGRESSMEN.

In the present Congress there are nine Greenback members; in the next body there will be but one—Charles N. Brumm, of the Thirteenth Pennsylvania District. The tidal wave appears to have swept this party as bad as the Republican party.

MR. RANDOLPH'S ACCEPTANCE.

The Republican Candidate for the Mayoralty has accepted the nomination in the following terms.

To the President and Members of the Republican Convention of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN—

After duly considering the nomination for the mayoralty unanimously tendered me by you as a representative body, and after a further endeavor on my part toward an honorable and satisfactory retirement from the canvass by securing an acceptable substitute, I deem it my duty to accept the nomination. I am moved to this conclusion by the urgent requests of many citizens, as well as by a sincere desire to serve our city, though my personal reluctance is the same as when I last addressed you.

In case of my re-election, the experience of the past two years should stand me and my trust in good stead. I cannot promise to increase watchfulness or zeal; nor shall I slacken either.

Bearing in mind my identification with the Republican party for nearly a quarter of a century, and my successive nominations from it, I still consider that mere party interest should not weigh against the rights or interests of the community.

*I know of no justification for an officer's apathy or hesitation in the viola*tion of law. I believe that crime and disorderly conduct ought to be suppressed; that the city's rights in the courts should be vigorously defended and insisted on, and the dishonest officers should be prosecuted. If the majority of voters of Plainfield do not so think, they should elect a man of a different faith from mine.

My creed in respect to taxes is short. They should be levied for such necessary purposes as will serve to enhance the public prosperity—should be equitably assessed, promptly collected and honestly applied. On the basis of recent judicial interpretations of our State laws, our Charter has proved inadequate. Important supplementary legislation was secured last winter toward remedying the defects, and something further in this direction remains to be done. Our taxes in Plainfield are comparatively small and should be kept so. This invites new settlers, and promotes prosperity. Guarding well against extravagance, we should, however, bear in mind that there may be an extreme of economy. We want our city kept safe and attractive, our streets in good repair and properly lighted. Toward such results I should be glad to lend my efforts. So far as I have had to do with the application of tax moneys—particularly in matters of police and health—I venture to point to the record of the service which show a decrease in expenditures even as compared with former economical administrations, and that too, during a period fraught with peculiar difficulties, and attended with important results in the way of health, protection and the banishment and punishment of vicious and dangerous characters.

I have done what I could toward the removal of nuisances, though always in a kindly way so far as possible. I know of no good reason in morals or equity why any man or company should be permitted to defile our pure and healthy atmosphere with noxious or offensive vapors, thus damaging property and rendering life uncomfortable. As an officer or citizen I shall seek to prevent it.

I have attended, as best I could, to all complaints and have earnestly tried to aid in remedying all real evils complained of. I hold myself always ready to listen to fact and argument, and am not so wedded to a purpose as to refuse to change it if I find myself in error. I do not court mere popularity, though I sincerely desire the esteem and confidence of honest men. I have no favors of a personal or political character to ask of my fellow citizens. What duties I have performed have been done without fear or reward. There have been duties difficult and painful, as well as duties easy and agreeable. The service has been at times laborious and discouraging, though never wholly without such satisfaction as would naturally attend the sincere endeavor to benefit the town which was the home of my boyhood, and in which some of the happiest years of my manhood have been spent.

Appreciating fully the high character of the body of citizens from whom my nomination proceeds, and taking it for granted that they do not mean to be content with the mere work of making their several nominations, but intend to strive honorably and effectively for success at the polls, I am gentlemen,

Very Respectfully, &c.,
L. V. F. RANDOLPH.

Plainfield, Nov. 28, 1882.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

George Foster who has resided at Tarrytown, N. Y., for the past two years, was here on a visit the past week, being a guest of his brother-in-law, J. Le Roulston.

Our enterprising butcher, Joseph Perry, in connection with the proprietors of the Hotel, has placed a substantial cross walk on Broad street in front of their places of business.

Lewis C. Thiese has recently been appointed agent for Krum & Burpee's patent Manure Spreader. It is a labor saving machine and what every farmer ought to own.

George Todd has purchased the lots corner of Broad street and Union avenue and also corner of Dowmer street and Union avenue, of the owner, L. S. Marbery, of New York city.

Jacob Hamilton's colt attached to his farm wagon, ran away from Irving's lumber yard on Tuesday morning last. He was stopped in front of Perry's butcher shop, doing but little damage.

William H. Meeker, manager of the Merchants' Insurance Co. of Newark, was in our town last week, and in company with local agent J. M. C. Marsh, made an examination of the numerous risks they have in our town and vicinity.

The "Ladies" Helping Hand" of the Zion Mission church gave an entertainment in Lyceum building, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 29th inst. for the benefit of the mission. There was plenty of refreshments of all kinds and the tables were well patronized.

We hope soon to see Samuel Godshalk, one of the genial proprietors of the Westfield hotel, at his place of business again. He has been at Philadelphia for nearly a month, being doctored for an affection of one of his eyes, and from latest reports was convalescing very rapidly.

The Rev. E. H. Bronson preached his farewell sermon on Sunday evening last. The congregation at its morning session passed resolutions of regret at the pastor's leaving. He removed to Philadelphia on Wednesday last, where he accepted a call to preach the gospel in that city.

A caveat has been filed with County Clerk against recording the returns of the new roads, Kimball avenue and Orchard street. A number of those persons assessed by the surveyors of highway as being benefited by the laying of the roads have already come forward and want to pay the amount assessed against them.

Mrs. Mary A. Mooney, widow of Elias Mooney, who formerly resided on the Tompkins farm, died on Friday last at the residence of her son-in-law, Daniel Staples, in Brooklyn, N. Y. Her funeral occurred on Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian church, the Rev. N. W. Cadwell officiating. Interment in Fairview cemetery.

J. Edgar Anthony, an attorney at law of New York city, has moved in the Massett house on Central avenue. Mr. Massett having rented the Fanny Pryor property on the same street. Mr. Massett contemplates building on his newly acquired property, the Clayton farm, on the Rahway road adjoining farm of the estate of Amos P. Scudder.

James M. French, who recently purchased a portion of the French homestead, has removed the old dwelling to Prospect street and intends fitting it up as a tenant house. He has contracted for the erection of a new house on or near the site of the old homestead, where he has fine shade and fruit trees. This, with the improvements made by Mr. Embree, and those being made by Mr. Kniseman, will make that portion of our town very attractive.

P. S. Bergen, the "Silver Tongued" orator of Somerset county, lectured on Saturday evening the twenty-fifth inst. at the hotel. His audience being small, the hall was not opened and he was allowed to occupy the reading room of the hotel. Instead of confining himself to the subject of the lecture, as advertised, it was a rambling talk about politics, religion, temperance and actually of nothing in particular. Amount of collection thirteen cents.

The Commissioners of Appeal in case of taxation, met at the town rooms on Tuesday afternoon, Nov 28th inst., at 1 o'clock p. m., that being the day appointed by law for their meeting. Very few applications were made for a deduction from the amounts assessed against the different tax payers. E. Embree, Daniel G Fink and Issl Moffett were the Commissioners present. Mr. Embree was elected chairman. The total amount deducted from tax levy was $32.48.

George Brooks, a former drug clerk for a number of years of George A. Bayard, and a graduate of Dartmouth College, who has been practising medicine in Piermont, N. H., has been visiting friends here for the past two weeks. On Wednesday last he sailed on the schooner Mary Bradford, Captain Daniel Oliver in command, for the Canary Islands and from thence to the West Indies. Mr. Brooks expects to be absent six months. He takes the trip for the benefit of his health.

Charles Harrington, the person who stole N. A. Barnet's horse, last week, was sentenced on Saturday last by Judge Mc Cormick to the very light sentence of sixty days in the county jail. The court was induced to be very lenient with him from the story he told which, after investigation, proved to be correct. Harrington had been collector for a firm of book-publishers in New York, and had used some of the firm's money in betting on the late elections and lost, and rather than face the firm with his loss, he came to New Jersey and stole Barnet's horse and intended selling him to make good his loss. The New York firm gave him a good character.

KILLING ALLIGATORS.

A Detroiter who had just returned from Florida after an absence of several months, was asked the other day if he had any fun with the alligators down there.

"Yes, sir—dead loads of fun," he replied.

"Kill many?"

"Well, I should say so."

"How many did you ever kill in a day?"

"Three hundred."

"No! you don't mean three hundred alligators in one day?"

"Yes, I do."

"You must have struck a rich spot. Three hundred in one day! Where! What time did you begin?"

"Oh, about ten o'clock in the morning."

"And how long did it take you?"

"About an hour."

There was a pause, during which astonishment, incredulity and envy were visible on the faces of the crowd. Finally one man stepped forward and said:

"Did you use artillery?"

"No, sir!"

"A saw mill?"

"No, sir."

"Dynamite?"

"No, sir."

"Maybe you'll tell us how you did it?"

"Yes, sir—I talked 'em to death. Please call at my office for pamphlets of Florida—its resources, fruits, cereals, alligators, people and hotel rates. Tra-la."—Detroit Free Press.

COULD BREAK OFF.

When a certain family on the Brush farm took a new cook last month it was specifically stated and understood that she was not to have any men hanging around the kitchen. She held to the agreement for three or four nights, and then the family discovered that she had a beau. He came regularly every night after that, and three or four nights ago the colonel was at the back gate waiting for him. When the young man appeared, the colonel threw a whole iceberg into his tones as he inquired:

"Well, sir, did you come here to spark?"

"I did," was the calm reply.

"In love, are you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who with?"

"Sarah, the cook."

"Oh, I didn't know but you loved one of my daughters," sneered the colonel.

"No, I don't at present," said the man as he seemed to catch a sudden idea, "but the thing hasn't gone so far with Sarah but what I might break off in case you had something better up-stairs for me!"

Sarah doesn't work there any more, but the colonel won't get over being mad for several weeks yet.

JINTLEMANLY LADIES.

In a car the seats were all full, except one, which was occupied by a pleasant looking Irishman, and at one of the stations a couple of well bred and intelligent young ladies came in to procure seats. Seeing none vacant they were about to go into the next car, when Patrick arose hastily and offered them his seat with evident pleasure.

"But you will have no seat for yourself," responded one of the young ladies, with a smile, hesitating, with true politeness, to accept it.

"Never mind that," said the gallant Hibernian. "I'd ride upon a cowcatcher to New York any time for a smile from such jintlemanly ladies."

And he retired into the next car, amid the cheers of his fellow passengers.

THE HAT QUESTION.

There seems to be a great many annoyed young gentlemen and annoyed young ladies in the city concerning the hats worn by both sexes. For fear that the public will be "annoyed" by these controversies we must ask our correspondents to give them a rest. Neither the gentlemen or ladies will even be convinced as to what they should wear. The latter will wear what she pleases, no matter whether she be

"Perhaps the most judiciously edited magazine in the world."—NATION, N.Y. Sep. 1882.

THE CENTURY
For 1882-83.

The twelfth year of this magazine—the first under the new name, and the most successful in its history, closed with the October number. The circulation has shown a large gain over that of the preceding season, and THE CENTURY begins its 13th year with an edition of 140,000 Copies.

The following are the leading features:

A new novel by W. D. Howells, to succeed this author's "Modern Instance." It will be an international story, entitled "A Sea Change."

Life in the Thirteen Colonies, by Edw. Eggleston, the leading historical feature of the year; to consist of a number of papers, on such topics as "The Beginning of a Nation," "Social Life in the Colonies," etc., the whole forming a complete history of early life in the United States. Especial attention will be paid to accuracy of illustrations.

A novelette of mining life, by Mary Hallock Foote, entitled "The Led-Horse Claim," to be illustrated by the author.

The point of view, by Henry James, Jr., a series of eight letters from imaginary persons of various nationalities, criticising America, its people, society, manners, railroads, etc.

The Christian League of Connecticut, by the Rev. Washington Gladden. An account of practical cooperation in Christian work, showing how a league was formed in a small town in Connecticut, what kinds of work it attempted, and how it spread throughout the whole State.

"Rudder Grange Abroad," by Frank R. Stockton, a continuation of the droll "Rudder Grange" stories, the scene being now in Europe.

The new era in American house-building, a series of four papers, fully illustrated, devoted to (1) City Houses, (2) Country Houses, (3) Churches, and (4) Public Buildings.

The Creoles of Louisiana, by George W. Cable, author of "Old Creole Days," etc.; a fresh and graphic narrative, richly illustrated.

My adventures in Zuni, By Frank H. Cushing, government ethnologist, and adopted member of the Zuni tribe of Indians. Illustrated.

Illustrated papers on the National Capital, including "The Capitol," "The Supreme Court," "The White House," etc.

Missions of Southern California, by "H. H."; three or four papers of an exceedingly interesting character, richly illustrated.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Further work is expected from E. C. Stedman, Thomas Hughes, Joel Chandler Harris, ("Uncle Remus") Charles Dudley Warner, John Burroughs, E. V. Smalley, H. H. Boyesen, and a long list of others. Entertaining short stories and novelettes will be among the leading features of THE CENTURY, as heretofore, and the magazine will continue its advance in general excellence.

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; 35 cents a number. Subscriptions should begin with the November number, and to enable new subscribers to commence with the new series under THE CENTURY name, we make the following

SPECIAL OFFER.

A year's subscription from Nov. 1882, and the twelve numbers of the past year, unbound, $6.00. A subscription and the twelve back numbers bound in two elegant volumes with gilt top, $7.50.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A COMICAL MISTAKE.

"And this, I suppose, is the village school house," said Moreau, as, emerging from the deep gloom of the Adirondack woods, he stood in the little cleared space, where the grass was as close and fine as velvet, the scent of white clover filled the air, and a small one-storied house, painted the dull color which would now be called "Venetian red," nestled beneath the boughs of a monster black-walnut tree. "Only there's no village worth mentioning, unless you choose the stage-station one. Upon the whole, this portion of the world seems to be still in his primitive condition."

Mr. Moreau had been fishing all day. His creel was well filled; his lunch-basket empty; his India-rubber boots bespattered with mud; face bronzed with a fine, healthy sunburn. He was tired out, with joints aching, nose blistered, face swollen with the unintermitting attacks of the black flies and mosquitoes. And yet he called it "capital sport!"

"Hello, you, sir!" said Moreau, to a shy, white-headed little urchin, who was coming down the hill with a pail. "What is that in the pail?"

"Nothin, sir," was the reply.

"What are you doing with it?"

"Goin' after water."

"Is there a spring hereabouts?"

"Yes, sir."

Moreau nodded his head.

"Good!" said he. "Show me where it is, and I'll give you a penny."

The little lad, nothing loth, ran lightly on in advance, until he reached the spot, beneath a huge gray rock, where a tiny stream of water bubbled into a rude stone basin, worn by the continued drip.

"Here it is, mister," said he, "and here is a gourd-shell to drink outen."

And Mr. Moreau drank a deep, long draught.

"Sweet as champagne," he said, "and colder than ice!"

And he flung the penny to the expectant lad, who having secured his largess, speedily filled his pail and trudged up the hill once more.

"Johnny! Johnny! what keeps you so long?"

It was a sweet, bell-like voice, and Moreau listened to it with a sort of a dreamy satisfaction, as he lay there among the ferns, staring up at the sky.

"The schoolma'am, in all probability," he said to himself, and turned half-way around, among the green "hart's-tongues" to see what manner of female she was.

Round, and dimpled, and rosy, with hair like braided sunshine, big blue eyes, and cheeks pinker than wild roses even now scattering their petals over her face. Mark raised himself on his elbow.

"She's a beauty," he said, half aloud—"a wild flower of the wilderness. And not a bit like the idle district school-teacher. I'll get acquainted with that girl, or I'll know the reason why!"

He left his creel and rod among the grass and wild flowers, by the clear little spring, and walked slowly up the steep path.

The beauty in the pink calico dress did not turn and flee, as he had half suspected she would, but stood awaiting him, with calm composure worthy of a city belle.

"Pardon me," said Mr. Moreau, inventing the first fragrant lie he could think of, "but I am one of the trustees of the Andover district!"

The schoolma'am courtesied prettily.

"I am so sorry," said the pretty girl, "but its past three o'clock, and I am just going to dismiss the children. Perhaps you would call to-morrow, if you are staying in this neighborhood?"

"Oh, certainly" said Mr. Moreau, with a vague idea that he was being baffled by the dimpled, daisy-faced thing, who could not have been a day over eighteen—"certainly! Perhaps you are walking down in the direction of the hotel?"

"No," said the blonde, calmly—"I go up towards Deems' Lake."

Baffled again. But Mr. Mark Moreau allowed no cloud to dim the bland brightness of his visage.

"Ah!" said he. "Then I will bid you good-by, hoping that I may have the pleasure of meeting you again."

The pretty schoolma'am smiled, colored, and courtesied once again, and then shut the school-house door.

Mr. Moreau walked composedly down the hill.

"She's a little jewel," he said to himself, "and she knows her value. I'll find out who she is, and what she is. Upon my word, I should like to paint her as Hebe, peeping out from a bower of roses; or Persephone, with both arms full of flowers. I've always fancied, the idea of a wife who should differ from the rank and file of simpering, smiling, fashionable women. She's a little disposed to keep me at arm's-length, but I don't like her the less for that!"

Once under the shelter of the inn—a long, straggling, stout building, which might have been a fortress, or might have been a grist-mill—he casually alluded to his day's adventure, as he sat over his broiled ham and eggs, weak coffee, and freshly-fried crullers.

"Oh, by the way, 'squire," said he to his landlord, (up in the Adirondacks all landlords are 'squires,' and so is everybody else,) I came across your district school-house to-day."

"Did ye, though?" said the tavern-keeper. "Well, now, ain't that kinder curious? Why, it's a kep'—the district school—by my niece, Ketury Spikes!"

"Keturah Spikes!" repeated Mr. Moreau, rather taken aback.

Somehow, he had associated some very different nomenclature with the fair one with the golden locks. "Keturah" did not seem to suit her at all.

"Yes, Ketury Spikes," said mine host. "Named after an aunt as was expected to leave her some money, but didn't. Pretty smart gal, though, Ketury. Don't need no legacy to boost her along."

"I should think not," remarked Mr. Moreau.

"Got a history, Ketury has," went on the landlord, whose name was Lemuel Stiles.

"Indeed!"

"Disappointed!" said Mr. Stiles. "Engaged to be married. Young man give leg-bail and enlisted, and went to Florida to fight the Indians, and Ketury she made a vow."

"Never to marry?" asked Moreau, quickly.

"No, to marry the first likely chap as asked her," retorted Mr. Stiles, with a grin. "Our gals up here in the Adirondacks is plucky, they is. But somehow Ketury never got the chance. Fellers is scarce in these parts, you see. You ain't a marrying man, be you, stranger?" with a sudden speculative gleam in his dull eyes.

Moreau smiled.

"I might be," said he. "If you will kindly give me a letter of introduction to Miss Spikes. I believe I will try my luck with her. For, to speak the truth, I was exceedingly pleased with what I saw of her this morning."

"Sartin, I will," said Mr. Lemuel Stiles. "And I'll tell you what, stranger, there ain't many gals like my niece, Keturah."

As Mark Moreau sat before the big fire of logs, which the chilliness of the September evening rendered not uncomfortable, he smiled to himself with a Mephistophelian satisfaction.

"At all events, he thought, "this will open a pleasant little flirtation. And if worst comes to worst, I can but follow the example of the Florida volunteer."

All that evening Mr. Lemuel Stiles, who, according to his own frank admission, was "no scholar," wrestled with a sheet of paper, a musty ink bottle, and a stump of a pen, and at ten o'clock produced the following document, not without a certain grave triumph:

"Neece Kitturah, this is to introduce mr. mark maro, who wants a Wife, and you want a Husband and thar's a pare of you. From your affectionate Uncle to command, L. STILES."

"I guess that there'll do the business," said Mr. Stiles, with a pardonable pride, as he smeared out a blot from the top of the I with his coat cuff.

Mark Moreau glanced over it rather dubiously.

"If she wasn't such a little beauty," he thought, "this would seem rather a Quixotic enterprise. But those sapphire-blue eyes would light a man over the very Tarpeian cliff."

And the next morning he proceeded straight to the school house.

"Bob," he said to a red-haired boy who was shuffling his feet outside the door, "is Miss Spikes within?"

"Just come," said the boy. "School ain't in yet. Wants six minutes o'nine yet."

"Give her this slip of paper, please," said our hero, "and tell her that I am waiting outside."

Half a minute later there was a rush like that of a buffalo; and a tall, lean female, with a scanty knot of fox-colored hair screwed on the top of her hair, watery-blue eyes, high cheeked bones, and badly fitting false teeth, flung herself on his shoulder, a la provincial theatres.

"When I seen you go by the tavern *yesterday I felt you were my counter*part," sighed this gentle gazelle, with a strong scent of fried onions in her breath; "but little did I dream as you were so near me in soul. I was a settin' on the back door step when you went past. I had the face-ache, and Fanny Dorrel took charge of the school for me yesterday."

"Fanny Dorrel!" This then was the name of the goldtressed divinity who took his heart by storm. There was a misapprehension all around, and Mark Moreau made haste to disengage himself from Miss Keturah Spikes' clinging arms.

"There is some mistake," said he, hurriedly.

"No there ain't," said Miss Spikes.

"I supposed this letter was addressed to Fanny Dorrel," he pleaded. "It says Keturah Spikes plain enough, don't it," said the lady, with gathering clouds upon her brow.

"My dear Miss—" he began.

"Call me Keturah," she smiled.

"I see that I am intruding upon the business part of the day," he urged.

"School teachin' ain't nothin, when the tenderest feelin's of the heart is concerned" murmured the tall girl.

"But business is business," remonstrated the hero, artfully; "and I shall see you this evening at your uncle's house. Until then au revoir."

The school bell clanged—Mr. Moreau hurried away. Miss Spikes returned with a softly-palpitating heart to her books and slates. Minerva succeeded Cupid—and our hero plunged into the woods, wiping his reeking brow.

"Good Jupiter," he muttered to himself, "does that Gorgon think there is a man in the United States mad enough to marry her?"

Miss Spikes let out school early that day and hurried to the tavern with her love of time.

"Where's Mr. Moreau?" she breathlessly demanded of her uncle.

"Gone," said Mr. Lemuel Stiles; "bag and baggage, horse and foot. Sent for his traps and took the southward bound train."

Miss Keturah wrung her hands.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" she gasped; "why did I ever lose sight of him?"

"Keturah, that's the third husband you've let slip. I begin to think it's all your bad management. And this was a dreadfully likely man, too," said her uncle.

As for Mr. Mark Moreau, he scarcely dared to breathe freely until he was on the Lake Champlain steamer.

He had merely intended to amuse himself by a little flirtation with a woodland beauty; but the matter had become decidedly serious to him, though to others it would look like "A Comical Mistake."

THAT DREADFUL BOY.

HE BUSTS UP A CHURCH SOCIABLE AND MAKES HIS PA CHANGE HIS PANTS.

"Every time pa says anything," remarked the bad boy, addressing the grocery man, "it gives me a new idea. I tell you pa has got a great brain, but sometimes he don't have it with him. When he said, the other day, I was a terror to cats, I thought what fun there is in cats, and me and my chum went to stealing cats right off, and before night we had eleven cats caged. We had one in a canary bird cage, three in pa's old hat boxes, three in ma's band boxes, four in valises, two in a trunk, and the rest in a closet up stairs. That night pa said he wanted me to stay at home, because the committee that was going to get up an oyster supper in the church was going to meet at our house, and they might want to send me on errands. I asked him if my chum couldn't stay too, 'cause he is the healthiest infant to run after errands that ever was, and pa said he could stay, but we must remember that there mustn't be no monkey business going on. I told him there shouldn't be no monkey business, but I didn't promise nothing about cats. Well, sir, you'd a died. The committee was in the library, by the back stairs, and me and my chum got the cat boxes all together at the top of the stairs, and we took them all out and put them in a clothes-basket, and just as the minister was speaking, and telling what a great good was done by these oyster sociables, in bringing the young people together, and taking their minds from the [illegible] of the world, and turning it in these [illegible] into different channels, one of the old tom cats in the basket gave a 'purrow' that sounded like the wail of a lost soul, or a challenge to battle. I told my chum that we couldn't hold the bread-board over the clothes basket much longer, when two or three cats began to yowl, and the minister stopped talking and pa told ma to open the stair door and tell the hired girl to see what was the matter up there. She thought our cat had got shut up in the store-door, and she opened the stair door to yell to the girl, and then I pushed the clothes basket, cats and all down the back stairs. Well, sir, I 'spose no committee for an oyster supper was ever more astonished. I heard ma fall over a willow rocking-chair and say 'scat,' and I heard pa say 'well, I'm dasd,' and a girl that sings in the choir say, 'Heavins, I am stabbed,' then my chum and me run to the front of the house and come down the front stairs, looking as innocent as could be, and we went in the library, and I was just going to tell pa if there was any errands he wanted to run my chum and me was just aching to run them, when a yellow cat without any tail was walking over the minister, and pa was throwing a hassock at two cats that were clawing each other under the piano, and ma was trying to get her frizzes back on her head, and the choir girl was standing on the lounge with her dress pulled up trying to scare cats with her striped stockings, and the committee broke up. Well, to tell the honest truth, pa knew I had something to do with the muss, and basted me, and yanked me around until I had to have my arm in a sling; but what's the use of making such fuss about a few cats. Ma said she never wanted to have any company again, cause I spoiled everything. But I got even with pa for basting me, this morning, and I daresn't go home. You see, ma has got a great big bath sponge, as big as a chair cushion, and this morning I took the sponge and filled it with warm water, and took the leather cushion out of the chair pa sits in at the table, and put the sponge in its place, and covered it over with the cushion cover, and when we all got sat down to the table pa come in and sat on it to ask a blessing. He started in by closing his eyes and placing his hands up in front of him like a letter V, and then he began that the food we were about to partake of be blessed, and then he was going on to ask that all of us be made to see the error of our ways, when he began to hitch around, and he opened one eye and looked at me, and I looked as pious as a boy can look when he knows the pancakes are getting cold, and pa he kind of sighed and said 'Amen' sort of snappish, and got up and told ma he didn't feel well, and she would have to take his place and pass around the sausage and potatoes, and he looked kind of scart and went out with his hand on his pistol pocket, as though he would like to shoot, and ma she go up and went around and sat in pa's chair. The sponge didn't hold more than half a pail full of water, and I didn't want to play no joke on ma, cause the cats nearly broke her up, but she sat down, and was just going to help me, when she rung the bell and called the hired-girl, and said she felt as though her neuralgia was coming on, and she would go to her room, and told the girl to sit down and help Hennery. The girl sat down and poured me out some coffee, and then she said: 'Howly Saint Patrick, but I blave those pancakes are burning,' and she went out in the kitchen. I drank my coffee, and then took the big sponge out of the chair and put the cushion in the place of it, and then I put the sponge in the bath room, and I went up to pa and ma's room, and asked them if I should go after the doctor, and pa had changed his clothes and got on his Sunday pants, and he said, 'never mind the doctor, I guess we will pull through,' and for me to go out and go to the devil; and I came over here. Say there is no harm in a little warm water, is there? Well, I'd like to know what pa and ma and the hired girl thought. I am the only real healthy one there is in our family.'—[Peck's Sun.

MARK TWAIN'S BAROMETER.

Somebody was asking a Hartford man how it happened that Mark Twain wrote and published so little nowadays. "He writes as much as ever," was the reply, "but his barometer is out of order, and he does not know what to publish; so he publishes nothing."

"What in the world has his barometer to do with his literary activity?"

"His barometer is a man-servant named Jacob, who is remarkable for his deficient sense of humor. Mark never can judge of the merit of his own performances. Years ago he fell into the habit of testing everything that he wrote by observing its effect upon Jacob. If Jacob listened to the reading of the article, jest or story with unmoved countenance, or merely smiled in a perfunctory way, Mark was satisfied and sent the manuscript to the printer. But if Jacob laughed outright, or gave any other indication of genuine merriment, the humorist concluded that the stuff was hopeless and withheld it from publication. He regarded Jacob as infallible, and came to lean upon his judgment.

"About three years ago, it appears, Jacob learned for the first time from some outsider that his master was a professional humorist. He felt greatly honored that he should have been chosen habitually to enjoy the first freshness of every new production of genius. He did not exactly understand why he should have been thus chosen, but felt in a vague way that a great humorist must need sympathy and appreciation, and must naturally look for it to the fellow-being nearest at hand. He also felt that he had perhaps failed to be at all times sufficiently appreciative. So Jacob kept his discovery to himself as far as his master was concerned, and resolved to be as appreciative in the future as anybody could desire.

One day Mark called Jacob in and read him a sketch entitled "The Cow and the Lightning-rod Man." In composing it Mark had flattered himself that he had struck a pretty fine streak. To his amazement Jacob put back his head and roared. With a half suppressed ejaculation Mark dashed the manuscript into the waste-basket. Then Mark waited six weeks or two months to collect his forces (for he is never precipitate in anything he does,) and achieved a romance called "How I Bounced the Baby." He summoned Jacob and watched his face with obvious anxiety as he read the touching narrative. Jacob's mirth was painful to observe. Mark tore up the story and then tore his hair.

Two or three experiments of this sort, with unvarying results, persuaded Mark Twain that the malaria, which he has been dreading ever since it began to creep up the Connecticut Valley, had reached him at last and destroyed his powers of usefulness. He fell into a settled melancholy. His friend, the Rev. Mr. Twichel, tried in vain to cheer him up. "Perhaps," suggested Twichel, "your man has really cultivated a sense of humor, so that you must no longer judge by opposites." Mark shook his head, and borrowed a volume of Jonathan Edwards' sermons from his friend's library. He copied out a long passage from the discourse on eternal punishment, and palmed it off on Jacob as his own latest effort. For the first time in history, the gloomy periods provoked peals of laughter. Jacob held his sides, and shook all over. Then he suddenly stopped, his countenance became blank, turned pale, and he incontinently fled. He had seen murder in his master's eye.

"That," said the Hartford man, in conclusion, "is why Mark Twain does not write. He hung his reputation as a humorist upon his barometer, and his barometer, no longer works."

THE MISSION.

The stubborn opposition of the Republican majority in the present Congress to a fair and practical revision of the tariff, and to the removal of oppressive internal taxes, which were levied to meet the extraordinary demands of war, but have been continued for prodigal expenditure in times of peace, is one of the main reasons why the people rendered such a decided verdict against the party in power at the November elections.

That popular decision the Democratic party accepts as authoritative, and will earnestly strive to make it effective through national legislation.

It is what Democrats have long contended for.

Rejecting free-trade laxity on one hand and iron-clad prohibition on the other, they favor a tariff that will benefit the people at large, the employed as well as the employer, instead of subsidizing special interests and creating millionaires at the expense of the toiling many; a tariff framed to provide full revenue for the wants of government and the liabilities of the public debt, and based upon business principles and equity; a tariff that will afford ample and honest protection to every legitimate industry and pursuit without wronging any.

That is what the people demand.

Further they insist—

That the heavy and needless burden of internal taxation, now annually locking up a hundred millions and more of the peoples' money as an immense surplus for corrupt Congressional handling, together with the attendant army of salaried tax gatherers, shall be wiped out of existence.

The good of the people is the creed of Democracy, and the coming Democratic House of Representatives at Washington will, to the extent of its authority, incorporate that creed with the laws of the land.

Such is the mission of Democracy.

Let the people rejoice.

A DESPERATE TRICK.

The announcement of the closing of a large number of iron and steel foundries and mills in different parts of the country at a certain date in the near future is, to say the least, curious. Have the late elections and the proposed revision of the tariff anything to do with the suspension? If the manufacturers, as they assert, cannot make money at the present prices they of course have the right to protect themselves and close up their establishments. But is it true? Mr. Hewitt, who is in this line of business, says that the firm of which he is a member is clearing nearly eighty per cent. on its investment. The whole thing is a mere political dodge, got up to frighten the timid, and is a repetition of the business scare so successfully played during the Hancock campaign. The desperate game that deprives of work thousands of men at the commencement of winter ought to recoil on its authors.—Elmira Gazette & Free Press.

UPSET.

The Republicans of Wilmington, Delaware, just before the recent election, marched boastingly through the streets of that city with a boat on wheels, gaily decorated, and filled with a crew of victory proclaimers, who cheered each other to the echo.

After the ballots were counted, the Democrats got a similar craft, and placing it bottom up, with effigies of the shipwrecked Republicans tumbling overboard, made it the prominent feature of a real victorious procession, proudly stepping to the music of—

"Our flag is there! our flag is there!
We hail it with three loud huzzas!"

It is useless to add, that all Democratic houses along the line of march were brilliantly illuminated, while those of their political opponents looked as dark and sullen as the interior of an Egyptian pyramid.

Moral—Never sail a ship without ballast, nor count chickens before they are hatched.

JEFFERSONIAN.

Both the Democratic Governors elect of New York and Pennsylvania have signified as a particular wish that the ceremony of their respective inaugurations shall be devoid of ostentatious show and parade. That is in the highest degree commendable, and bespeaks a return to the true principles of our Republican system of government, which never displayed greater beauty than when Thomas Jefferson rode on horseback, plainly and unattended, to the National Capitol for the purpose of taking upon himself the oath of office as President of the United States, the most illustrious position in the world.

Safety abides in following the statesman precepts and example of Jefferson, the founder of American Democracy.

CYCLONE.

Some weather Solomon has predicted a terrible wind and tidal-wave storm for the eleventh of March next. River and Harbor Congressmen think it cannot possibly surpass in violence the knock-down and drawn-out political cyclone which swept with such devastating fury from the Atlantic to the Pacific on the seventh of November last.

JUSTICE.

Every citizen must be accounted innocent until clearly and legally proven guilty of crime, and no one has the right to defame and injure another. Such are the wise and safe mandates of Justice in this country.

The carelessness of voters in not examining their tickets carefully before depositing them in the ballot box was made apparent last Tuesday, when several ballots were found in the boxes representing the wrong ward, and which of course did not count for the ward officers. In the Fourth ward there were several First ward ballots.

It may be a pleasant morsel of reflection at present to certain parties interested that they assisted in the defeat of tried and true men on the People's Union Ticket last Tuesday, but—there's another day coming.

UNCLE John Simpson, as usual, received a handsome majority in the 1st Ward for Councilman. His honesty and integrity in all matters makes his election sure when his name is placed on a ticket.

THE hard-fisted workingmen of the First and Fourth Wards gave evidence of their strength as voters in the charter election.

THE First Ward is Democratic when good men are placed in nomination.

Mr. Ginna presented the following communication from the mayor:

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 4, 1882.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—

In view of the approaching Charter Election, and the unfortunate fact that party and personal feeling has run high on issues and nominations now pending, and in view of the current rumors—even though traceable to no reputable source—that money may or will be used to control votes; I respectfully ask you to consider the question of publicly posting the offer of a reward, under authority of our charter, for the apprehension and conviction of any person found guilty of violating the election laws by illegal voting, or by the buying or selling of votes.

I may say in this connection that I gave instructions so long ago as last Friday to have special watch set at various points against any and all illegal voting, or bribery, without regard to person or party. This will continue to have attention in any event, and I shall have plainly posted up the law and the penalty.

It may be thought advisable by you not to go further, or to incur the possibility of expense to the city by the offer of reward. But I incline to the opinion that an order from you for the offer of a reward would materially aid in putting a stop, for the time, at least, to the whole nefarious business—which, I regret to say, seems to have flourished at certain elections in the past; and that it would be worth to the city all that it would be likely to cost,—and more.

Very Respectfully,
L. V. F. RANDOLPH,
Mayor.

Received and laid on the table.

On motion the rules were suspended, and Mr. Depew offered a resolution rescinding a resolution of previous meeting authorizing the renewal at three months of a note falling due Nov. 22.

The mayor personally explained his objections to signing a note that would fall due in a future administration.

The resolution was carried, Mr. Newhall voting in the negative.

Mr. Depew moved for adoption a resolution providing for the issue of a demand note to renew that which had become due. Carried. Mr. Newhall voting in the negative.

Mr. Depew presented a report of the city treasurer, which was read and ordered filed.

THE TRANSIT OF VENUS.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather of Tuesday night and the prophecies of the signal service, the sun shone out bright and clear Wednesday forenoon to the delight and satisfaction of thousands of people who were interested in the great celestial event that was to take place in the heavens—the transit of the planet Venus across the disc of the sun. Thousands of people were to be seen on the streets in all parts of the country viewing the wonder through smoked glass and telescopes, while the astronomers and other wise men took accurate observations of the celestial body as it passed between the sun and earth. A rainy or cloudy day would have been a great misfortune and disappointment to astronomers all over the country.

FROM all appearances a "greasy machinist" has as much influence in city matters as a New York "rooster."

THE CHARTER ELECTION.

The verdict of last Tuesday's election, while it resulted satisfactorily on one issue involved, did not do so in other important respects. The people, by their votes, have decided that it is necessary for the city's interest to grant licenses to sell liquor. The temperance, or prohibition party of Plainfield, was never better organized to carry out its ideas than at the polls, Tuesday last, but the result was far from its anticipations, and better for the tax-payer who has to contribute toward the expenses necessary to run the city government. The "People's Union Ticket" was made up of candidates worthy and well qualified to perform the functions of the offices designated, and should have been elected. The parties interested in assisting in their defeat, however, have now plenty of time for reflection and repentance when it is too late to undo the evil to the Democratic party they are boasting of having done. Although men professing to be Democrats, worked unceasingly all day long at the polls against Mr. Stover for Freeholder, with spurious tickets, on personal grounds and for spite only, it must be borne in mind that it was not through their efforts alone that that gentleman was defeated. A large number of Republicans who last year voted for him must have voted against him this year for political reasons. A comparison of votes in the 2d and 3d Republican wards between this and last year's election for Freeholder shows this. The defeat of Mr. Brown for Collector and Mr. Livingston for Councilman-at-large, are also the effects of personal spite and political chicanery. However, there is an old saying "it's a long lane that has no turn." The recreant Democrats who assisted in the defeat of Democratic candidates and elected Republicans in their stead, should, as we doubt not they will be—remembered.

An Appeal to the Charitable.

The Board of Managers of the Muhlenberg Hospital gratefully acknowledge the contributions, which were sent to the Institution on Thanksgiving day. It is suggested that Christmas Day be designated "Donation Day" for the Hospital. We would mention as articles which will be most acceptable—potatoes, apples, flour, sugar, oat meal, hominy, Indian meal, onions, canned vegetables, canned fruits, tea and coffee. Six patients are now in the Hospital.

E. M. RODMAN, in behalf of the Board.

THE "Press Works" and "Oil Cloth Factory" sons of toil gave an evidence of their strength at the polls last Tuesday. They voted on the right side for the City's interest.

IN the defeat of Rowland M. Stover, for Freeholder, by unfair means, the County has lost an able and efficient official.

COLLECTOR John B. Brown was the best official in that capacity the city has had in years. His defeat was a public loss.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - City Editor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

CORPORATION NOTICE

The duly elected members of the common council, and all other officers elected at the charter election, Dec. 5, are requested to meet at the city clerk's office next Saturday evening, Dec. 9, at 8 o'clock, in order to take the official oaths prescribed by the charter.

If not convenient at that time, all such oaths must be taken within ten days after the day of election, either before the mayor or the city judge.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Dec 6, 1882.

Oh for an Opera House!

THE regular monthly meeting of the Union Club was held last Monday evening.

THE Mayor will swear in the newly elected, at the Clerk's office to-morrow evening.

Two promiscuous fights, one each side of the brook, were hardly fit endings for a Thanksgiving day.

THE growth of Plainfield is evidenced by the enlargement of the C. R. R. freight house to double its former capacity.

The many friends of Karl T. Polak are heartily congratulating him upon his election to Councilmanic honors in the 2d ward.

MAYOR Randolph on Monday last, commenced proceedings in a suit for libel against a daily paper in this city, placing the damages claimed at $30,000.

THE winners of the first and second prizes at the target-shoot of Warren Eng. Co., last Thursday, were respectively, Henry W. Bilyeu and Louis Weigel.

EPSALL's popular dry and fancy goods establishment is now given up to an extensive display of Holiday goods of every kind, for both sexes and all ages.

AN exceedingly praiseworthy performance of "The Danites" was given at Van Deventer Hall, by Lizzie May Ulmer and company, last Wednesday evening.

SWAIN at No. 6 North avenue, is showing the newest Styles in wall papers besides his usual large assortment of window-shades and fixtures, artists' colors, etc.

THE thermometer Monday morning just before sunrise, registered four degrees below zero, and it was not until after seven o'clock that it was above that point.

THE price paid by the School Trustees of North Plainfield for the lot back of the new school building was $850 and not as the types said in our issue of last week.

RESERVED seats for the lecture on "The Mediterranean Sea, its Men and its Memories," by the Hon. Wm. Parsons next Thursday evening, can now be selected at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

HOLIDAY gifts in the way of paintings, engravings, etchings, Christmas cards, Rogers' groups and articles to suit the tastes of the cultured, are offered in rich assortment by Swain at No. 32 West Front street.

THE ladies of the Church of the Holy Cross will hold a parlor sale in the chapel, next Tuesday, beginning at 2:30 p. m. The affair gives every assurance of being a repetition of former successes in this line.

THE Schubert Society of Brooklyn was fed in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., at the close of last Thursday evening's concert. A courteous treatment that is not shown Plainfield vocalists in Brooklyn under similar circumstances.

REV. J. L. HURLBUT of this city will preach next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock in the Netherwood Union Chapel. Mr. Hurlbut has occupied that pulpit for the past two Sundays and doubtless a large audience will be present.

SPLENDID sleighing was a feature of Thanksgiving day, and the oldest inhabitant is unable to remember a similar pleasure upon such holiday of the past. But then it is unusual for Thanksgiving to fall on the last day of November.

THE lectures selected as a part of the Y. M. C. A. Course of the present season, begin auspiciously next Thursday evening with that of the Hon. Wm. Parsons, than whom no more entertaining speaker ever appeared before Plainfield's public.

IN our next week's issue will appear the advertisement of elegant Holiday goods offered by Clare, the jeweler, at No. 9 Park avenue. Meanwhile, however, we would advise our readers to call at that establishment and inspect the beautiful stock.

POPE BROS., very handsome advertisement in another place will attract the attention of our readers as their great bargains in beautiful goods are attracting crowds of customers to their establishment corner of Front and Somerset streets.

DURING Thursday evening of next week at the M. E. church the first lecture of the Y. M. C. A. Course of Entertainments will be delivered by the Hon. Wm. Parsons of England. The subject is to be "The Mediterranean Sea, its Men and its Memories."

DR. FIELD's horse ran away with Dr. Field's cutter, last Saturday, but on its way into the post office was stopped by the animal breaking through the glass sidewalk in front of that establishment. The horse was extricated with his legs severely cut.

THE door-yards and front-stoops of Plainfield residences were thickly strewn with circulars, extras and election tickets, during Monday afternoon and evening. The Peoples Union movement, however, was generally successful in spite of such useless efforts by its opponents.

IT is stated that the owner of Van Deventer Hall contemplates building more convenient dressing rooms in connection with the stage. This is a step in the right direction to afford such advantages as will impel theatrical and other traveling shows to add Plainfield to their list of dates.

THE handsome majority received by Mr Tell A. Beguelin for council in the 1st. Ward, on the People's Union Ticket, demonstrates that, although comparatively unknown in politics, he has many warm friends in the Ward. Mr B. is well versed in parliamentary matters, and will make a capable official.

THE Crescent avenue Presbyterians, last Sunday morning, took up a collection for the purpose of buying a new organ for the Warren Mission. The Crescent avenue Presbyterians, we would respectfully suggest, should buy a new organ for their own church (which certainly needs one) and present Warren Mission with the apology for an instrument at present in use.

MORE extensive advertising in the right direction would have drawn a larger house for Abbey's East Lynne Company, at VanDeventer Hall, last Saturday evening. As it was, however, quite an audience assembled which was treated to a first class entertainment in every respect. The leading lady was a thorough artist, and her support, as a general thing, entirely satisfactory.

AN auction sale of building lots in North Plainfield Township, the property of Mr. Peter Wooden, took place on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. J. W. M. F. C. Marsh officiated and the following prices were obtained. On Somerset street adjoining the Public School, 40 by 132 feet, $391. Corner of Emily and Vine street, 42 by 100 feet, $375. On Vine street near Park place, 52 by 115 feet, $315.

IN explanation of the small vote received by Mr. Charles Schiltz in the First Ward for Judge of Election last Tuesday, it is in justice to him due to state the true reasons for the same. At a meeting of the Committee appointed by the Democratic Convention to fill vacancies on the ticket made by them, a committee appointed at a meeting attended by a number of prominent Republicans, met with them and suggested a support to the ticket headed by Mr. Maxson's name as Mayor, if they were accorded a certain share of the ticket. Among the propositions agreed upon was one that the Democrats should have the names of seven Democrats on the Councilmanic ticket, and the Republicans the Judges of Election. As the Republicans have a large majority in the city, this seemed no more than fair, and it was decided to so frame the People's Union Ticket if the Democratic candidates for the office of Judges of Election already nominated were willing to withdraw. All that were informed of the arrangement agreed to so do. Unfortunately for Mr. Schiltz, the parties who were to see him failed to inform him of the action of the Committee and the consequence was that, in ignorance of the fact he had solicited a number of friends to vote for him on election day. They, in ignorance of the true facts of the case, went to the polls and voted for him. The number of votes received by Mr. S. for the office in his ward proves that he is popular and has many warm friends.

An Exposition of Thanks.

The President and other officers of the Relief Association wish to express their cordial thanks to the public for the generous response made to their Thanksgiving appeal for those under their charge. Many were cheered, not only with an abundance of choice, nourishing food, but also, with the genial thought that they were kindly remembered.

Runaway.

A horse attached to the sleigh of Arnold & Van Norstrand, the North Plainfield grocers, became frightened by the cars over his head at the Park ave. railroad crossing last Friday morning. Starting suddenly a rope which held the whiffle-tree broke, dropping the cross-piece upon the animal's heels and urging it at a high rate of speed towards Front street. Just past Second street a boy named Martin was knocked down, run over and severely bruised. In front of Clare's store a collision with a hay-rigging occurred, which threw out the driver and freed the frightened horse from the sleigh behind it. The animal was then caught and further damage impeded.

Oh, For an Opera House!

The above was the exclamation of the many who attended the most satisfactory performance of Baird's Minstrels at Van Deventer Hall during Friday evening of last week. The company was undoubtedly the best in its line that has ever visited us, and its efforts to "do all it advertised" in spite of stage disadvantages and dressing-room discomforts, were greatly appreciated. The "opening" was simply immense in quantity and quality—twenty-nine artists composing the stage-set and furnishing the best of music interspersed with wit and humor both fresh and sparkling. Mr. Baird deserves special credit for the entertainment furnished in spite of so many drawbacks.

Last Days of the Fair.

Unprecedented success has visited the American Institute this year, both in attendance and display. Although upon its last week the attendance is undiminished and will undoubtedly remain so until the closing hour. At no previous exhibition has there been so many sources of interest, especially in the mechanical achievements. One of the many striking features of the Fair, is a silk loom which weaves the portrait of Mrs. Langtry on silk handkerchiefs. Mr. Arbuckle the celebrated cornetist still delights all with his superior band, and his solos receive rapturous applause. All those who have not visited the Institute should do so at once, as the opportunity is very small.

Worth Having.

The editor of the Chicago Advance very justly says: A fountain pen that always writes and never "leaks," that makes a fair, plain line, and never blackens the fingers, and that, once filled, can be used for days without change, avoiding all the bother and interruption of reaching over to the inkstand for a fresh dip every two minutes, that can be carried in the pocket, and is as handy for use, as a lead pencil, and that writes on any paper however thin or soft; such a pen is worth having. And such a pen is the "Stylographic Pen." This we know from personal use. These pens are forwarded by return of mail from the salesroom of the manufacturer, 290 Washington street Boston, Mass.

Ten Nights in a Bar-Room.

Probably no better rendition of the above play was ever given in this city than that by the Northern Star Combination, at VanDeventer Hall, on Thanksgiving evening. The talent shown by the several artists was remarkable in consideration of their absence from professional ranks, and we feel assured that a repetition of the entertainment will attract a much larger attendance. Mrs. Havell as "Mehitable Cartwright" and Miss Mooreland as "Mrs. Morgan" were specially good, while Nellie Devere the drunkard's little daughter displayed remarkable cleverness in one so young. The acting of Messrs Mattox, Havell, Whitehead and Davenport is worth of particular mention—those gentlemen exhibiting abilities that were exceedingly praiseworthy. The other characters were not so perfect in their parts, some requiring frequent prompting that interfered with the freedom of action that was desirable.

Jurors for January.

Sheriff Forsyth on Tuesday last, in the presence of Judges McCormick, Harper and Hyer, drew the names of forty-eight Petit Jurors for the January term of Court. Outside of the city of Elizabeth, the following gentlemen were honored with a call:

Plainfield—Gabriel Bachman, Charles H. Hodges.
Fanwood—Linus Hetfield.
Westfield—Addison S. Clark.
Cranford—James G. Moore, John H. Crane, Charles J. Fox, Benjamin Westervelt.

The Weather for 1883.

Vennor, De Voe and "Old Probs" have each started a weather bureau of his own and each furnishes what he calls "the only accurate meteorological report." Last week's snow storm was the special property of De Voe, while Old Probs declared that the weather would be fair and warm. England has furnished us with a new weather prophet who deals with the stars, and who is known as "Raphael, the Prophetic Messenger and Weather Guide." The following is a synopsis of his predictions for the coming year. Cut it out, paste it in your hat, and believe the contrary.

January—heavy frosts and abundance of snow.
February—A fair month, except the last few days, when rain and wind prevail.
March—Unsettled, with numerous storms.
April—A dry month; rainfall below the average.
May—A fair spring month; favorable for vegetation, but rather dry.
June—A fair month; favorable for vegetation.
July—A fine summer month; temperature above the average.
August—A changeable month; not favorable for harvest work.
September—A wet month; the end very stormy.
October—A wet and windy month.
November—An unsettled month; the latter part cold.
December—A variable month; temperature above the average.

The great holidays of the year are thus chronicled:

New Year's Day—Windy and unsettled.
Washington's Birthday—Fair weather.
St. Patrick's Day—Wet.
Decoration Day—Unsettled weather.
Fourth of July—Warm and fair.
Christmas—Snowfall.

Personalia.

James Clark Esq., of this city, left for St. Louis on Wednesday for a few weeks absence.

Noah Webster Pike Esq., of East Front street, has been confined to his house for a few days past by a slight attack of quinsy sore-throat.

Mrs. John Burke was last week removed to the Muhlenburg Hospital, her symptoms having betokened fatal results unless the most experienced medical attendance and careful nursing were furnished.

The thanks of the senior is tendered Councilman Livingston for the present of a delicious venison steak and roasting piece of young bear meat, which he procured while on a recent visit to relatives in Maine.

We are informed that the use of Edward L. Finch's name on the Peoples Union Ticket was without his knowledge or consent, and that when learning of the same—which was not until late on Monday—he requested that it be scratched from the Ticket as he was not a candidate for any office whatever.

At the residence of Mrs Seymour Holt, Union avenue, there will occur a Japanese Wedding Ceremony and Reception on Tuesday evening of next week. The guests will be presented with tea cups and saucers, and The Children's Home will be presented with the profit arising from the sale of tickets at one dollar each.

Mr. Martin Giles, a well-known resident of this city, dropped dead Monday of apoplexy. He was engaged in conversation with one of the firm of Wagner Bros., who with his men were painting a house just erected by Mrs. Boome in North Plainfield. The deceased made some casual remark regarding the effect of the weather on the paint, and then sunk to the ground without another word and expired. The funeral took place from the residence of the deceased's son-in-law, Mr. Henry Birnes on Second street, Thursday afternoon.

THE CITY ELECTION!

The "People's Union Ticket" Wins.

A Democratic Mayor and Five Councilmen.

A Democratic School Trustee and Election Officers—Treachery and Malice defeat Stover, Democratic Nominee for Freeholder.

ALSO THE DEMOCRATIC COLLECTOR.

The People Want License for a Revenue.

Tuesday, a remarkably pleasant day for this time of the year, was the scene in this city of a remarkably interesting and exciting election. The unusual features of the event and the unwonted circumstances surrounding it, were calculated to cast so much doubt upon the result that up to Wednesday morning some of the candidates were still in suspense. Party lines—to some extent—were ignored, and but three tickets of any strength were in the field. The regular nominees of the Republican primaries composed the Republican ticket; candidates chosen by the Democrats together with others selected by a branch of the opposite party, formed the People's Union ticket; while a Temperance ticket was made up of Councilmen already nominated that were pronounced anti-license men, with two from the Fourth Ward of the same faith. Besides these, of course, there were the customary number of "splits" whose headings were as numerous as they were calculated to deceive.

The official figures given elsewhere will show the largely increased total and its comparison with that of last year. Also will be found the vote for each candidate so properly arranged that the defeated ones may avail themselves of the time-honored practice (so soothing to the feelings of the defeated) of figuring the whys and wherefores of the result. Leaving such mathematical calculations to their pleasure, we will not attempt to explain the causes—merely recording, for the information of our readers, the consequences.

The Democratic party gains the honor of the selection of one of its members as Mayor, and the city is to be congratulated upon its gain in the same direction. When is taken into consideration Plainfield's overwhelming majority on the Republican side of the house, Mr. Maxson's majority of 102 represents a gain of more than four times that amount of votes. The Mayor-elect was nominated by his own party and endorsed by a representation of the other side, as the head of the People's Union ticket. His election is a most flattering compliment to both himself and the party that chose him.

The Democrats gain another member of the Common Council and reelect Messrs. Gardner and J. Simpson. The next Council will stand politically as follows:

Republicans.	Democrats.
Coriell,	Manning,
Serrell,	Beguelin,
Ross,	J. Simpson,
Marsh,	Polak,
Jones,	Gardner.
E. Simpson.

On the license question the result is particularly satisfactory to those who lay *aside visionary desires and with judg*ment believe that as liquor is sure to be sold the seller should pay for the privilege, be held responsible for breeding disorder, and be placed under some sort of restriction. The "temperance (?) vote" as a whole was surprisingly light, and it is fair to suppose that an attempt to turn the city over into the hands of illegal liquor sellers will not occur again. The next Council, on the temperance question, will stand as follows:

License.	Anti-License.
Manning,	Serrell,
Coriell,	Ross,
J. Simpson,	Marsh,
Beguelin,	Jones.
Polak,
Gardner,
E. Simpson.

It is only just to state that the running of Mr. Finch as a candidate in the Third Ward was without his consent, and to his openly expressed intention of not wishing to be elected may be attributed his light vote. Mr. A. H. Smith of the Second Ward only consented to being placed upon the ticket after repeated solicitations of his Republican friends—on whom should be placed the blame of his defeat.

The election of Mr. Johnson was so entirely unexpected the evening before, that the suddenness of such result is yet a subject of wonder. His opponent was not only the unanimous choice of the Democratic Convention but the Republican combination also was almost given him. The overwhelming majority given Mr. Johnson is something he may well feel proud of—and it was caused by his popularity and sympathy for repeated misfortunes received as much as by reason of the allegations laid at Mr. Brown's door that he was a supporter of the opposition candidate for Mayor. We cannot here too strongly express our regret—which we know is shared by so many—that neither Freeholder Stover nor Councilman Livingston were elected for a second term. That they served the city faithfully nobody will deny, and we can only hope that their successors will do as well. This hope we are convinced, so far as the will of Mr. Vanderbeek can effect it, is bound to be realized. Mr. Harper's re-election as School Trustee was but a just verdict of the people as to his fitness and past services. No result of the election is a greater cause for congratulation.

The Ward officers chosen were divided about as usual. Two Democratic Councilmen from the First and one from the Fourth were selected, and in the Second Mr. K. T. Polak's election was a gain for that party, the suburb of Netherwood, and the community at large. Among the many surprises was the change of the Second Ward polling place from Nash's cigar store to Bird's coal office. This was accomplished by a half-dozen "quiet ones" to that effect, dropped in the box. Mr. Rockfellow's defeat in the Third Ward will be considered by the majority of the public as a misfortune. That gentleman, however, may feel flattered at receiving double the number of votes ever given a Democratic candidate in that particular Ward.

Walter L. Hetfield, the candidate for City Judge, coming so near as he did of election, has the sympathy of his many friends in his defeat.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Taylor's traveling photograph gallery removed from our town on Monday last.

The Rev. Dr. Patton, editor of the Baptist Weekly officiated at the Baptist church on Sunday last.

John Knapp is authority on smoking. He says Old Jumbo cigarettes are the best—they do not bite the tongue.

The skating on Clark's lake has been very good for the past few days, and has been enjoyed by the young of both sexes.

Robert Luckey who resided on Elm street, has removed to the house on Central avenue, recently occupied by A. D. Stoddard.

Samuel Godshalk arrived home last week after an absence of over a month. Sam says he feels first rate, and his eye is getting as good as ever again.

Ichabod Ross has sold his house and lot on Broad street, adjoining Abel S. Terry's, to Jacob S. Ring, who expects to occupy the same next April.

Wm. E. Gardner of Plainfield opened his meat and butter market in our town on Friday last. He is located in the Woodruff building on Broad street.

There is to be a concert of vocal and instrumental music in Lyceum hall on Monday evening, Dec. 11th inst., for the benefit of the Ladies' Society of the Presbyterian church.

John Dorval, the efficient clerk at Geo. A. Bayard's drug store, who has been confined to the house by a very severe fit of sickness, has so far convalesced as to be able to get out doors, on Saturday last, for a short time.

The Westfield B. & E. Co., No. 1, held their monthly meeting on Monday evening last. There was a large attendance of members, and considerable interest manifested as to the welfare of the company. Two new members were elected.

The minstrel entertainment by the Cranford brass band at Lyceum hall last week was very slimly attended, owing to the severe snow storm prevailing. For the short time the troupe have been under training, its performance was well rendered in every part. Nothing was said or done to mar the pleasure of the most fastidious.

There is to be a grand entertainment given in Lyceum building on Thursday evening, Dec. 14th inst, for the benefit of Mrs. Esther Mulford, who is sick and afflicted and unable to care for herself. It will be an object worthy of patronage. John W. Nelson is chairman of the committee, who promises to make it agreeable to all who will favor them with their presence on that evening.

On Sunday last as the result of the extra religious meetings which have been held in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches for the past two months, 23 persons joined the Presbyterian church and 33 the Methodist church; some of them by letter, but the majority of the recently converted. The Rev. Edw. B. Edgar, a former pastor of the Presbyterian church was present and assisted the pastor, Rev. N. W. Cadwell, in conducting the services.

The new bridge over the stream near Henry J. Holmes', to take the place of the arch bridge washed away by the late freshet, has been completed. It is a good substantial structure, and reflects credit upon Contractor Clark. The new structure has heavy iron floor beams, with two inch plank covering, and handsome side rail. It has a span of twelve feet—as large again as the old bridge. The new *bridge has been constructed at about one-*third of the expense of the cost of the old one. Freeholder Mapes and the committee who had it in charge deserve the thanks of our town for the new bridge.

On Friday last William Isleman, aged 10 years son of Louis Isleman, residing on the Jerusalem road met with an accident which he is unable to account for. It seems he took his skates after dinner to go to Felt's pond. After an absence of several hours he was seen to come home and pass the house where he lived and go to the barn. He had no hat on and but one skate in his hand. After he had been at the barn for a short time, one of the family went to look for him and found him wandering around the barn, muttering some inaudible words. He was taken to the house and put to bed, when he became unconscious. Dr. Harrison was sent for and attended him. He remained unconscious for nearly 48 hours. When he recovered his senses, he was unable to give any account of himself, where he had been or what had happened him. One side of his head is very much discolored. The supposition is he must have fell on the ice and struck his head, injuring it severely. He is able to be out doors and around, but still says he does not know what happened him.

THIS (Thursday) evening, the first of two lectures by the Rev. Dr. DeHaas is being delivered in the Park avenue church to an audience, that—the lecturer's popularity assures us—is very large. The second discourse is set down for the 21st inst., in the same place, on "The Giant Cities of Bashan."

DRAKE'S Brass Band of Elizabeth, engaged by a number of enthusiastic friends of Plainfield's Mayor elect, serenaded Mr. Maxson, School Trustee Harper, Councilmen Gardner, Simpson and Coriell, County Clerk Vosseller and Postmaster Pope, last Wednesday evening. Messrs Maxson and Harper made brief speeches to the assembled gathering.

Obituary.

Jacob Adams, a well-known and highly respected citizen of North Plainfield, died at his residence on Somerset street on Sunday forenoon last, after being a sufferer from Asthma a number of years. Mr. Adams was engaged in business in New York, as a member of the old established firm of Battelle, Renwick & Co., of 163 Front street, dealers in chemicals, white leads, &c., and had amassed a competent fortune out of it. He was a son-in-law of ex-Freeholder Daniel [illegible]. He took a great *interest in the prosperity of North Plain*field as well as the growth of our city and was very popular with the masses. Although never soliciting a public office he was elected a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners three consecutive terms (six years in all) and was that body's Treasurer for years. He was very ready to lend his means to assist the Department whenever they became financially embarrassed. Mr. Adams was an honored and influential member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M. and St. John's Commandery. His remains were interred in the family burying plot at Mt. Bethel, Somerset county, on Tuesday, Dec. 5th, with masonic honors conferred by Jerusalem Lodge, W. M. Cook, officiating, and Wm. Addis acting as Marshall. The funeral services were preached by Rev. Dr. Yerkes, who paid deserved tribute to deceased in his remarks. The pall bearers were Messrs. John Sutner, L. L. Compton, D. R. Weaver, F. J. Young, W. H. Alpaugh, Wm. Egbert. Two grown up orphan children, Daniel and Mary, are left to mourn the loss of a loving and kind father, Mrs. Adams having died last December. Deceased was greatly respected by all who knew him for his many excellent qualities. He was an honest man, true friend and good citizen, and his loss will be deeply felt by the community in which he lived.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

If you are a frequenter or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all new countries—ague, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

[illegible], Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.
I have sold Hop Bitters for four years and there is no medicine that surpasses them for bilious attacks, kidney complaints and many diseases incident to this malarial climate.

Hop Bitters Company, [illegible]: I have been sick for the past six years, suffering from dyspepsia and general weakness. [illegible]

A WONDERFUL REMEDY is Dr. Roger's Liverwort and Tar. It has cured more desperate cases of coughs and consumption than any other preparation. Read the following letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, of Washington, D. C.: I have suffered for many years with chest and lung troubles, the doctor having given up all hopes of my recovery, and I have been expecting death any moment, until a few weeks ago, when a friend who had used Dr. Roger's Syrup of Liverwort, Tar and Canchalagua in his family persuaded me to try it. After taking the first bottle I felt great relief, my cough being easy, and the hemorrhages ceased. I am pleased to testify to what a blessing your medicine is.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS cure headache and regulate the Stomach and Liver.

Baker's Pain Panacea cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

W. J. Latta, of University Station, N. C., says: I have used Edey's Carbolic Troches for sore throat with the most satisfactory results.

You can keep your hair abundant and glossy, and retain its youthful color, with Parker's Hair Balsam.

ARE YOU EXPOSED.

To malarial influences? then protect your system by using Parker's Ginger Tonic. It strengthens the liver and kidneys to throw off malarial poisons, and is good for general debility and nervous exhaustion.

TIME AND EXPENSE SAVED.

Hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic keeps the kidneys and liver active and by preventing the attack saves sickness, time and expense.—Detroit Press.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and HALL & RUCKEL, New York. jul6 1y

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It corrects Indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGER'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the secretions which cause them.

BOGUS JEWELRY.

The recent experience of a London lady of rank, who wished to sell some jewels, goes to prove that shams are not newer than other things under the sun. Regarding what were supposed to be splendid rubies, the jeweler said: "They are certainly very showy madam, but unfortunately only clever imitations in glass!"

The lady, much chagrined, then called attention to the heavy setting, to which the jeweler replied, after the usual tests: "The setting is only gilt!" Another article produced for appraisement was a superb bracelet, the gift of a continental sovereign to the wife of a diplomatist. The skillful manufacture and specific gravity of this splendid object had been extolled for generations in the family of the possessor, and so highly was it prized that it was invariably sent to the bankers whenever the family left town.

The jeweler scrutinized it carefully, and pronounced it extremely heavy; "but," he added, "if you will allow me, madam, to raise this very thin plate, I shall be able to show you that the bracelet is filled up with—lead!"

Yet it is quite possible that the original purchasers of these articles believed them to be genuine, and paid for them as such. A few years ago an English gentleman took a bracelet to a leading provincial English jeweler to have the clasp mended. The jeweler looked at the stone carefully, and then said: "You are aware that this is not genuine?"

"Not genuine!" exclaimed the gentleman. "You must be mistaken. This was given to my wife on her marriage by my uncle, the last man in the world to give sham jewelry."

But the jeweler, an eminent man in his line, persisting, the donor was informed. He wrote back that it cost $500, and ordered that it be sent to him; and, taking it to Messrs. ——, a firm of the first eminence, indignantly stated his case. It was sham. They offered a check at once, or a new bracelet, and seemed terribly chagrined. The explanation was that, do what they would, they were at times the victims of their workmen, who substituted admirably made bogus gems for real ones. Probably scores of persons have jewelry thought to be real which in truth is not so.

THE FIRST QUARREL.

If the importance of avoiding the first quarrel could only be firmly impressed upon the minds of all newly-married couples it would prove an invaluable lesson, and spare them numberless and unhappy days and oceans of tears.

After the first others come only too easily; once remove the restraint, pride and natural reserve which bound them together, yet did not allow them to give way to every annoyance before each other, and you have opened the way for a constant resentment of every trifle which does not run smoothly.

Mr. Morris and his wife each began their married life, although unknown to each other, with a firm determination to make any sacrifice to avoid the first disagreement, and since the first really did take place, Morris has spent the time in the hospital, wondering at the forethought which prompted so wise a resolution. Exactly how it commenced he is uncertain, but he distinctly remembers that the opening of the engagement was his attempt to dodge a stove cover; a small shovel of coal came next, followed by the shovel itself, accompanied by the tongs and poker. He gained the dining-room with the caster, two dinner plates and a pitcher circling around his head; while a three-legged stool knocked him down and the breakfast table was very promptly dumped on top of him.

A determined rush and desperate jump landed him in the back yard, with a sprained ankle, directly under the window from which his better half showered him with a continual stream of dish water and rubbish of all sorts. Finally he was rescued by a neighbor, and since then has been recruiting. His advice is not so much to avoid the first quarrel, as a good constitution may stand that, but beware of the second.

A TALE FOR THE TODDLERS.

One day Lucy and her brother were going to the place where the ice cream was kept. Lucy was trotting along, holding Charles' hand. She heard a strange noise in the street near them. Looking, she saw two boys with a little cur dog. One boy had tied a string to the poor little dog's tail and on the other end of the string was a deserted oyster can.

"Oh, brother," said Lucy, "see what the wicked boys are doing."

And then the tears filled her eyes, because she felt sorry for the dog.

Then Charles asked the boys to let the dog go. They would not do this but said they would sell him the dog for twenty-five cents.

"If we buy the dog, Lucy, you can have no ice cream, for I have only twenty-five cents in my pocket," said Charles.

Then Lucy was very sad, for she loved ice cream dearly, but still she knew it was her duty to prevent the dog from suffering.

So for a moment she was silent, and then looking up to her brother she said in her pretty way: "You kick in the ribs of the boys, dear brother, and I will hustle the pup up the alley."

And so Lucy had her ice cream after all.

AFFECTION AND CONFIDENCE.

Some one has said that conjugal affection largely depends on mutual confidence. A friend of ours quoted this sentiment the other day in the smoking room, and added that he made it a rule to tell his wife everything that happened, and in this way they avoided any misunderstanding. "Well, sir," remarked another gentleman present, not to be outdone in generosity, "you are not so open and frank as I am, for I tell my wife a good many things that never happen." "Oh!" exclaimed a third, "I am under no necessity to keep my wife informed regarding my affairs. She can find out five times as much as I know without the least trouble."

The Philadelphia young man has an ingenious system of flirtation. He observes a lady whom he would like to know more intimately. He walks up behind her on the street and drops some yellow substance on the back of her dress. In a moment he tells her very politely that some wretch has been spitting tobacco juice on her dress, and invites her into a neighboring store where he cleans the dress. Then he tells her that her dress in that condition will attract attention, and suggests a carriage to take her home. They enter the carriage, and—the rest of the story depends altogether upon the character of the lady.

BLESS HIS DEAR HEART.

In a very elegant palace car entered a weary-faced, poorly dressed woman with three little children—one a babe in her arms. A look of joy crept into her face as she settled down into one of the luxurious chairs, but it was quickly dispelled as she was asked rudely to "start her boot."

A smile of amusement was seen on several faces as the frightened group hurried out to enter one of the common cars. Upon one young face, however, there was a look which shamed the countenance of the others.

"Auntie," said the boy to the lady beside him, "I am going to carry my basket of fruit and this box of sandwiches to the poor woman in the next car. You are willing of course?"

He spoke eagerly, but she answered:

"Don't be foolish, dear, you may need them yourself, and perhaps the woman is an impostor."

"No, I'll not need them," he answered decidedly, but in a very low tone.

"You know I had a hearty breakfast, and don't need a lunch. The woman looked hungry, auntie, and so tired, too, with those three little babies clinging to her. I'll be back in a minute, auntie; I know mother wouldn't like it if I didn't speak a kind word to the least of these when I meet them."

The worldly aunt brushed a tear from her eye after the boy left her, and said audibly: "Just like his dear mother."

About five minutes later, as the lady passed the mother and the three children, she saw a pretty sight—the family feasting as perhaps they had never done before; the dainty sandwiches were eaten eagerly, the fruit basket stood open.

The eldest child, with her mouth filled with bread and butter, said, "Was the pretty boy an angel, mamma?"

"No," answered the mother, and a grateful look brightened her faded eyes, "but he is doing angels' work, bless his dear heart!"

And we, too, said, "Bless his dear heart!"

WHY SHE SAID "OO."

The other night I overheard a real pretty little piece of love's labor won, and it made my heart beat faster and brought back memories of the past. It happened down on the dark end of the piazza, next to my open window.

'Who do you love?' said he, ungrammatically.

'Papa,' said she innocently, with a coo.

'Who else?' said he.

'Mamma,' said she.

'Who else?'

'Brother.'

'Who else?'

'Sister.'

'Who else?'

'Uncle.'

'Who else?'

'Aunty.'

'Who else?'

'OO'—and then I heard a whalebone snap and a peculiar glugglity, glug, glug sound that didn't need a dictionary for translation. Ah, love's young dream, go on, go on; there will be an awakening some morning about three o'clock in the future, when a bottle of paregoric and a plaintive wail will recall the hours that have been, but are no more.

Over in the park I heard of another case. One can hear of these generally and promiscuously at these places if she will only not try to. They were sitting on a log near the Rocky spring at their devotions.

'And you love me?' he said.

'Can you ask it?' she answered.

'I like to hear you say the sweet words over and over again,' he gurgled.

'I then I do love you and love you,' she twittered.

The newspapers are now quarreling over Mrs. Langtry's beauty, and the Philadelphia papers declare that she cannot hold a candle for beauty to Miss Williams of that city, whose portrait can be found in the pocket of every well-to-do man and woman in the land, and is sold for a dollar by the government and by every bank in America. She is a girl whose face and bust appears upon the silver dollars, and can also be seen upon some checks used by the U. S. Treasury. When the dollar was designed, her face was selected as the highest available type of American beauty, and imprinted upon the coin of the realm. Every man who has a dollar in his pocket can compare the face with the pictures of Mrs. Langtry, and decide for himself.

A DOUBLE PERIL.

About twenty-five years ago, a band of desperadoes who had made their headquarters near the Mississippi, became the terror of the contiguous counties, and by deeds of daring and outlawry gained a notoriety which rendered them the fear of every village banker and the scourge of the farming district.

The boldest and most feared of these outlaws, and indeed the ringleader in the numerous crimes committed, was Sam Hoyt, an old river-hand, familiar with every turn and crook of the stream as well as with the people. He waged a ceaseless war against the law and its minions, making his headquarters on the banks of a romantic little stream which emptied its waters into the Father of Waters, a few miles below the thriving town of Beardeville.

One balmy spring morning, when the deeds of the desperado of Missouri had roused the country to the highest pitch of excitement, a stranger to the residents of that little village entered the place on horse-back, and proceeded at once to the bank. At first his high top-boots, his slouch hat and revolver-filled belt, excited some alarm; but when, with a courteous inclination of the head, he greeted the banker, and that person led him to his private office, the gaping clerks changed their minds, and whispered the single word:

"Detective."

They were right and wrong. The new comer, a self-constituted executor of the law, while determined to hunt down Sam Hoyt, had, beside the motive of reward, a personal interest in the capture.

"I wrote you I'd come," he said as the door closed, "and I won't waste much of your time. A week since, Sam Hoyt and his band drove up to my place, fired my barn and stole every dollar I had in the world. We were boys together and never agreed. Later in life he went his way, I mine. Envious of my securing for my wife a lady he once fancied, he took his petty revenge as I have described. I've now determined to drop business until I've rid the district of this man."

"But, Mr. Hayes—"

The frontier farmer waved an imperative silence.

"I know what you would say," he interrupted. "The peril, the failure of your own officers, and the like; but I know my own courage and energy. Two days since, these men drove up to your bank and stole $50,000 in bills. That's your share of the anxiety, I calculate."

"Yes," nodded the banker.

"And you offer one-fifth of the amount to the captor of the outlaw?"

Again the banker nodded affirmatively.

"Very well. Within a week I will be here to claim that reward, or you will do me the favor to see that in settling up my property my family are provided for."

The banker stared strangely at this singular visitor who faced the issues of his bold venture equally.

"You anticipate then—"

"Success. But if Sam Hoyt and I meet, one will die or surrender before we part."

An hour later, Tom Hayes was galloping over the broad prairie, which to the east swelled to an irregular chain of hills, amid the ravines and forests, where Sam Hoyt had more than once evaded the officers of the law.

Once within the densest of these forests, the frontier detective halted his horse, and proceeded to disguise himself from the contents of his saddle-bag.

The transformation was neither unique nor elaborate, but it sufficed for his purpose. The long, dark beard hid the prominent cheek-bones and firm, resolute mouth, and the rough laborer's suit concealed the straight, athletic form.

He led his horse to the nearest trace of a road, spoke a few word to the intelligent animal, and then with a sharp cut of the whip, had the satisfaction of seeing the practiced horse start rapidly toward home.

Hayes' eyes were watchful, almost anxious, as he continued his journey. He knew the fate of more than one officer who had met death while traversing these same glade in search of the desperado, but he kept on resolutely, with no well-formed plan of action in his mind, only determined to locate his enemy, and then allow circumstance to shape his course.

It was late in the afternoon when he reached the banks of a stream, and, somewhat wearied, sat down in a shady covert of willows to rest and reflect.

Twice he had been to this spot—once to carry offers of a compromise and truce to the man he now sought under official sanction; again, to recover a drove of horses stolen by the outlaw's band.

He knew that he was in the very heart of the enemy's country, and as he noticed moored to the shore a large flatboat, and saw upon its deck traces of recent usage, he at once concluded that it had been employed by the outlaws in conveying their plunder down the river. It was secured by a large hawser to a tree, and swayed in the strong current of the stream, which was muddy and swollen from heavy rains.

Such a thrill of intense interest and excitement as the gold seeker experiences when he finds his coveted treasure, pervaded Hayes' frame as he glanced down the stream and saw a form advancing, which he at once recognized.

"Sam Hoyt!" he ejaculated, as his hand rested on his belt, and his eyes were strained eagerly to watch the other.

It was indeed the noted outlaw, walking rapidly, but with an air of confident security, toward the flatboat. The old scow was built with a large hole and a hatchway leading to it.

The silent watcher had gained the river shore and the deck of the craft as he saw the object of his quest disappear down the hatchway.

A quick glance at the shore revealed no person in sight. From a clump of trees some distance away, however, evidences of human life were visible in the smoke of a fire.

The outlaw, whatever his mission, had gone into the hole of the boat, and alone.

Hayes, thrilled at the thought, and approaching the hatchway, sprang boldly down. There were four small windows in the front of the rear of the scow, so so small that they would barely admit the passage of a cat.

The light from the outside shining through them, however, revealed Sam Hoyt to the detective the minute he glanced around him. It showed him taking from under a loose beam in the bottom of the boat a large portfolio.

The desperado started, turned, dropped the wallet, as he caught sight of the intruder. A loud report resounded like an explosion, and then, as a bullet whizzed by his head, Hayes sprang forward and clenched with his opponent.

Sam Hoyt, depending upon his rapidity of movement in the use of the revolver for many years, was no match for the athletic farmer. It was an easy conquest for the latter, his foe once disarmed, and as he finally held him at the mercy, his knee on his breast, he deftly secured his hands, tied his muffler around his feet, and turned his attention to the fallen portfolio.

He did not heed the muttered malediction of his captive as his eyes gleamed murderously. His heart was exultant as he saw that the secret treasure of the bandit comprised the bank bills stolen from Beardeville, the portfolio bearing the name of the Institution, and the packages of notes, being still in the official paper slips.

As to Sam Hoyt, he knew not who his captor was, only realizing, as he saw Hayes bestowed the bills about his person, that either a thief or a detective had outwitted him.

"Curse you!" he raved, wild with rage amid his helplessness. "One minute with my revolver and I'd fix you."

"You first shot wasn't a fair example, then?" remarked Hayes, sarcastically.

The bandit started.

"That voice!" he muttered.

Tom Hayes tore his beard from his face.

"You know me now, Sam Hoyt," he said, sternly, impressively. "So long as you let me and mine alone, I didn't trouble you much. You roused me at last, and I swore to capture you. Before morning you'll see the inside of the jail or the grave, which depends on how close you keep your mouth."

A sullen, wrathful silence brooded over the bandit's face as he saw Hayes leave him, ascend the notched post and gain the deck. A minute later, too, he saw him come down with a quick leap and a startled ejaculation of alarm.

For as Hayes reached the deck, bent on deciding on how he would be able to remove his captive, he saw a figure coming toward the boat.

It was one of the bandit's friends, alarmed by the shot, coming directly to the scow. That he had seen Hayes, the latter knew, and a minute later a face peered down the hatchway.

Hayes sent a shot whizzing past his head. He hoped to frighten the new-comer away and then gag the outlaw and carry him bodily from the place before the other returned with reinforcements.

But the desperado, discovering the presence of an enemy, devised a very shrewd plot to secure him.

Lifting the hatchway-cover, he threw it over the hole, battened it down, securing it with its bolts, and started on a keen run for the camp of his comrades.

At first Hayes was unable to comprehend his situation. A sneering laugh from the quick-witted captain awoke him to the truth.

"You're in a fix of your own making, Mr. Hayes," he cried, derisively. "In five minutes my band will surround this boat and settle your detective ambition."

"You keep quiet, or I'll save them the trouble of rescuing you," replied Hayes, warningly.

His efforts to force the hatch proved unavailing. In an excited despair he rushed to the port-holes and gazed anxiously out. They were the only outlets, but too small to afford a means of exit for his body.

"Trapped!" he murmured. "But I'll fight for it."

His face grew troubled as he discerned the man who had entrapped him coming down the river shore with a dozen companions, and then his heart gave a mighty throb as a brilliant idea crossed his mind.

With a quick movement he drew his hunting-knife from his belt. The next moment he had reached his arm far out of one of the windows and drew the keen blade across the rope securing the boat to the shore.

The heavy hawser strained and gave, the tarred strands parted, there was a groaning whir, and men and shore receded from his view as the swift current bore the scow rapidly down the stream.

Had he out-witted them? Would they not be able to pursue and overtake him?

The blank, startled look on the face of his captive expressed his alarm at his captor's clever move, while the hurrying bandits in the distance showed Hayes that they had not given up the chase.

But he held them at a disadvantage. Twice, the shore growing rocky, prevented them following the boat without diverging, and twice his revolver kept them at a distance—a shot through the windows deterring them from swimming to the boat, as they would have done.

"They have gone!" cried Hayes, finally with a sigh of relief. "And now to escape from the boat if it is possible."

The old scow had entered the central current of the stream, and was driven down the river at a terrible rate of progress.

He had not for a moment thought beyond an escape from the outlaws. He shuddered, suddenly recalled to himself as his eyes rested on the white, scared face of Sam Hoyt.

He realized now the true peril of his situation. If he did not escape from the boat, if some friendly hand did not rescue him, or the craft be stopped in its course, what might happen? The falls! He grew cold at the thought, and read in his captive's eyes the same terrorful emotion.

But his attention was distracted as he glanced from the window. He had believed the men gone. They had only taken a circuitous cut around to a bend in the stream.

There they were waiting for him, and sending a dozen shots toward him—shots and something more. Two of the men held blazing pine knots in their hands. These, whirled through space, fell on the deck of the scow, and as it passed them the triumphant shouts of the bandits told Hayes that, though they had abandoned the chase, they had placed him in the most imminent peril of his life.

For, with two huge fire-brands fanned to a blazing mass by the breeze on the dry deck of the scow, what would his fate be?

As he saw a light volume of smoke grow denser each moment, pouring from the deck over the boat, he realized that his predicament was a terrible one.

"We are doomed!" he cried.

Sam Hoyt turned an appalled glance upon him as he learned the situation of affairs—the holocaust precipitated by his men, who did not know him to be aboard the boat.

"If you are a man," he said, "you will give me a chance for my life."

In reply, Hayes cut his bonds. It was life or death now, but all their efforts to force the battened-down hatchway failed to move it.

"The falls—the falls," cried Hoyt, in an agony of horror at the recognition of familiar landmarks, as they shot by the shore like an arrow.

He seized the middle post of the hold, Hayes clinging by his side. As he spoke, they could feel the shock of the scow, its bottom grating over the rocks, a dizzy whirl, a downward plunge, and they forgot the flames which roared above them, as with a crash the boat fell over the cataract and into the basin below.

They were stunned, bruised and thrown together amid the crashing and breaking timbers. The flaming boards hissed as they came in contact with the water.

The boat rocked and swayed for an instant, and then parted at the prow.

Hayes was the first to realize the situation.

"Quick!" he cried. "We are in the log boom, under the falls, and will be crushed to pieces if we do not escape."

Followed closely by Hoyt, he climbed out through the broken prow. But he did not descend. The fall of the scow had started the choked-up water-way and its freight of logs.

Tearing along, churning the water to foam, now rising higher in the air, now crashing a huge timber like a pine-stick, the boom, started by the falling boat, went roaring through the gorge, bearing them down with terrific velocity.

Hayes had gained the top of the flatboat, and clung to a jagged timber as it shot over the logs, or was wedged in between them. He started as he felt a cold object pressed to his temple.

"The money!" a hoarse voice muttered in his ear.

And he faced a leveled revolver, and the fierce eyes of Sam Hoyt.

Even in the very jaws of death, avarice was more powerful in the bandit's mind than fear.

Clinging by one hand to a frail support, he held his foe at his mercy.

"Fool!" cried Hayes. "Think of your life, not of your ill-gotten gains. See, we are lost."

Even as he spoke, with a crash a dozen logs crushed the after-part of the boat as though an egg-shell.

He saw Hoyt lifted from the deck, flung high in the air, and, as a horrified shriek pierced the air, fall beneath the mass, and disappear in the eddying swirl of water.

Just in time he flung himself from the deck. The logs danced and shot forward, their slippery surface driving him here and there like a feather. Nearer the shore, a fall, a crushed hand, and then, as a second eddy mixed the timbers together in wild confusion, he gained the river's bank, and sank to the ground, overcome, exhausted, appalled at the wild scene before him.

He reached Beardeville the next morning. The finding of the mutilated remains of Sam Hoyt, ten miles down the stream, a few days later, verified his story, and the recovered money convinced the most incredible of the truth of his narrative of his startling adventure.

He received his reward and the thanks of the community for the river outlaws, losing their leader, soon abandoned the district which had been the scene of a brave man's struggle for life amid a double peril.

ROTHSCHILD'S MAXIMS.

According to George Francis Train, the late Baron Rothschilds had the following excellent maxims framed on his bank walls:

Attend carefully to details of your business.
Be prompt in all things.
Consider well, then decide positively.
Dare to do right. Fear to do wrong.
Endure trials patiently.
Fight life's battles bravely, manfully.
Go not in the society of the vicious.
Hold integrity sacred.
Injur not another's reputation or business.
Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind from evil thoughts.
Lie not for any consideration.
Make few acquaintances.
Never try to appear what you are not.
Observe good manners.
Pay you debts promptly.
Question not the veracity of a friend.
Respect the counsel of your parents.
Sacrifice money rather than principle.
Touch not, taste not, handle not intoxicating drinks.
Use your leisure time for improvement.
Venture not upon the threshold of wrong.

Kiss your girl on the right cheek;
Apples green, and apples dried,
Kiss her on the other side.

Lift her to her pink toe tips,
And print it squarely on her lips.

Blushing with her tempting charms
And it would, we think be snugger
Oft to kiss and tightly hug her.

Eye to eye, and nose to nose,
Flippity flop and away it goes.

What's the use of all this rhyme;
Take your girl at any time
Squeeze her till the blushes come,
Shut your eyes—and yum-yum-yum.

You all are wrong to snatch a kiss;
To vulgar minds it may be bliss.
Ask her hand—if she grant it you—

She sat down at the piano, cleared her throat and commenced to harmonize. Her first selection was: "I Cannot Sing the Old Songs," and a gloom that was colder and bleaker than a Sunday dinner fell on the company when the stranger in the corner said: "And we trust that you are not too familiar with the new ones."

A Chicago man visiting Cincinnati was shown around by a citizen, who said: "Now let's go and see the Widows' Home." The Chicago man put his finger to the side of his nose and winked and then said: "Not much, I won't. I saw a widow home once and she sued me for breach of promise and proved it on me. No, sir; send the widows home in a hack."

"My dear," said a Jefferson street papa to his twenty-five-year-old daughter, isn't it about time you were marrying?"

"Why, papa?"

"Don't why, papa' me! I am getting tired of this foolishness. You are the last of my five daughters, And I don't want you to be an old maid."

"But I cannot find the kind of man I want, papa. What I want is a man who does not drink, smoke, chew, snuff, go out of nights, gamble, bet, over-eat, etc.; in short, a man with no vices and who is always good."

"My daughter," said the fond father, "you are but a stranger here; Heaven is your home."

ODDS AND ENDS.

A smart thing—a mustard plaster.

The coon of the period—the cocoon.

The man eats his corn in the blade who anticipates his income.

A man that is variable is not esteemed very able by his near neighbors.

A man proves himself fit to go higher who shows he is faithful where he is.

A man went out the other night to see if he could ascertain the color of the wind, and found it blue.

"There's no accounting for tastes," sadly sighed the landlord, when his bartender failed to make return for the drinks sold.

A young fellow whose girl jilted him and left him with a broken heart intends to apply for a pension, on the ground that he was in one disastrous engagement.

Perhaps the casual reader has never sat down on a buzz saw and felt himself gradually falling away. If so, he doesn't know what it is to form the acquaintance of a somnambulistic bull-dog in the prime of life.

Some men always do things wrong. Here a man went out the other evening and drove his daughter's young man away just as the youth was getting his proposal in shape, and thus he broke up the match; in fact, he put his foot in it.

"Don't you think Jerseys are just too lovely for any use?" she sweetly inquired, referring to the garment so popular now. And he answered, dreamily, as he clasped her soft hand in his: "Yes, their milk makes the best smear-case I ever e't in my life. You're liable to get yeller janders if you eat too much of it, though."

It is so much pleasanter to have imaginary enemies than to recognize one's own incapacity for any task undertaken, that the delusion is always maintained.

Rightness expresses of actions what straightness does of lines; and there can no more be two kinds of right action than there can be two kinds of straight lines.

Employment, which Galen calls "nature's physician," is so essential to human happiness that indolence is justly considered the mother of misery.—Robt. Burton.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

INSINUATIONS.

Insinuations, designed to personally defame and injure, are the meanest weapons any newspaper professing decency can employ.

Open and direct charges are in the line of manly attack, but the thrusting of malicious insinuations rank only with cowardly assassination.

To the honor of intelligent public sentiment it can truthfully be said, that a cause so advocated generally meets merited condemnation.

FOLLY.

It is folly to pass laws that cannot be readily executed.

The statute books of this and other States contain many dead-letter enactments, rendered such simply because they are obnoxious to public reason and propriety, and often far behind the spirit of the age.

The way to remedy an alleged evil in the community by legislation is to calmly and intelligently convince the people that it fairly deserves and should be removed by such means.

Then it may be done.

Opposition to established usage, however honest, is frequently exceedingly impolitic, causing more harm than good.

The American character freely accepts enlightened knowledge, but forcibly rebels against coercion.

DEMOCRACY.

Some Republican editors confidently calculate upon Democratic blunders as the future hope of their party.

Therein, we think, they are destined to reap sore disappointment.

It is true, the Democratic party has sometimes committed errors of judgment, but its principles remain pure and as strong as of yore, and for the future wisdom will be found guiding its action.

It knows what the country needs.

It has heard and will heed the peoples' cry for relief.

It has able and patriotic leaders.

It will support the Constitution at all hazards.

Enact just and liberal laws.
Protect every legitimate industry.
Stop the waste of public money.
Establish economy.
Ordain simplicity.
Reward integrity.
Enlarge the sphere of prosperity.
Give to every man his honest due.
DEMOCRACY FOREVER !

THE REPUBLIC.

It is a self evident fact, that as our country enlarges in population the legitimate expenses of government will proportionately increase, but, there is no valid reason why the plain and economical system of its founders should be transformed into gaudy show and wasteful extravagance.

A Republican government, if genuine, must be moderate in cost and of practical worth to all classes of people. Ours was so when the Constitution came into existence, and it can be as readily kept so with a population of a hundred millions as with that of ten millions.

Dangers surround the American Republic.

It becomes the peoples' duty to watch and overthrow them, and that can only be done by sternly demanding a return to first principles, that equity shall control the raising of revenue, rigid honesty and utility direct its entire expenditure, and that the general public good shall drive from place and power political profligacy of all kinds.

Battle for the Republic!

Unmask and lay low every enemy!

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Those who suppose that the result of the recent elections will be to put the Democratic party in power at once are mistaken and Democrats should take pains to enlighten them, else Democrats will be held responsible for Republican sins.

The Congress elected this fall will not meet, unless called in extra session, before December, 1883. The legislation which may be necessary to carry on the government for the year ending June 30th, 1884, will be made by the Robeson and Keifer Congress. The effects of the Democratic victory this fall upon the legislation of the country, will not begin to be felt much before 1885, for the first appropriation bills with which the Democratic Congress will have to deal will be for the year ending June 30, 1885. Judging the future by the past, no one can tell the amount of mischief and rascality which may be perpetrated by the present Congress during the last months of its official life.

In our State Legislature there will be divided responsibilities. The House will be Democratic and the Senate Republican. Any measures of reform which the House may originate, the Republicans of the Senate will have the power to defeat. At the same time the House will have the power to defeat any reckless and extravagant legislation originating in the Senate. This they should do. A short and economical session of the Legislature should be the aim of every Democrat. The people don't want a legislature run by the lobby in the interest of corporations and jobbers, and the member of either House who lends himself to such a purpose, will be and ought to be defeated. Of the members of the last Legislature, but fifteen have been returned, and almost without exception they are the men who kept themselves aloof from every corrupt scheme thrust upon the Legislature by the lobbies.—Warren Journal.

According to Kiernan's News-Letter "Receiver Little is understood to have nearly completed a full report of the condition of the New Jersey Central. It is stated that the floating debt of the company is less than $2,000,000, and that it possesses available assets of value more than sufficient to clear off the debt and to close the Receivership."

The Plainfield municipal election resulted in a substantial Democratic victory, William B. Maxson (Dem.) being elected by 102 majority and the Democratic and People's Union candidates securing 7 and the Republicans but 4 members of the Council. Plainfield is a Republican stronghold, but the temperance element brought into the contest the principle of no-license, and no-license laid the Republicans out. The newly-elected Mayor, William B. Maxson, is a staunch Democrat, an able lawyer and a most worthy gentleman. Step by step the Republican party is approaching its inevitable doom—destruction.—Elizabeth Herald.

The penal code was nominally enforced in New York on Sunday last. But all the side doors were open and the concert saloons were full.

Why don't the Jersey Lily get up a little bit of a scandal for a cent about her friend, Mrs. Labouchere? That would sort of even things up between them.

It seems to be pretty universally conceded that the country needs a settled tariff policy. The only trouble is that nobody seems to be settled as to the exact character of such a policy.

Pope was recently made Major General. But General Fitz John Porter still waits for justice. What is fair for Pope should be fair for Porter. Let them both be treated alike. Pope has been honored, now let Porter be vindicated.

Amongst the proposed legislation of this Winter is the erection of a new county out of the county of Essex. It is proposed to have the new county consist of the city of Orange and the townships, so that Newark will be a county by itself.

The Trenton Gazette, (Rep.) says; "It is now settled that Major O'Connor, of Newark, will be Speaker of the House, all the other candidates having withdrawn. The Major is a gentleman of fine ability, and of that judicial temperament which well fits him for the position.

The recommendations in the President's message which are of the greatest importance are the two-cent postage; the abolition of all internal tax except on distilled spirits; tariff revision; the right of vetoing individual items of appropriation, and a fixed tenure for subordinates in the public service. Congress should adopt every one of these recommendations. They are the matured conclusions of a statesman who clearly discerns the material condition and wants of the people.

From the advance sheets of the Legislative Manual of the One Hundred and Seventh Legislature of New Jersey we extract the following statement of the occupations of the Members of the House of Assembly: Lawyers 6, manufacturers 5, broker, 1, physicians 2, surveyor 1, merchants 7, brewer 1, mechanic 1, hotel keepers 5, farmers 13, druggists 2, butcher 1, journalist 1, dentist 1, newsdealer 1, contractor 1, glass-blower 1, miller 1, clerks 2, steamboat captain 1, occupations not stated 6; total 60.

One hundred millions will have to be appropriated this year to meet pension "arrearages," and the regular annual payments. Means are now instituted to detect and expose thousands of impostors who are now stealing from the Treasury. A resolution is pending in Congress calling for a list of all the names on the pension roll. When these names are sent in they should be published in the leading newspapers in every pension district. In this way every man in the community would become a detective agent for pointing out fraudulent pensioners.

At Somerville, Dec. 10, Theo. Wilson, Charles Webber and William Spring broke jail. They dug through a thick wall in one of the cells and got into a ventilator. The lifting of a large stone which covered the ventilator let them into the attic, from a window of which they dropped fifteen feet to the ground. A deputy sheriff discovered them just as the last one got out. An alarm was given, and several citizens went in pursuit. Spring was caught about a mile out of town by David Richards, a law student, and taken back. Wilson is charged with assault, Webber with stealing harness and Spring with burglary.

The Wall Street News remarks that some men don't seem to understand the difference between political assertions and business facts. Three or four days before election a Baltimore lawyer made a political speech in a country village. Being a red-hot Republican he naturally gave the Democratic party the best he had, and among other things asserted that in case of Democratic success the country would have to pay the Confederate bonds. Two or three days after election a man walked into the lawyer's office, opened a valise and took from it $920,000 in Reb. bonds and said: "What are they worth?" "Four cents a pound." "But the Democratic party has triumphed." "What of that?" "But won't the country have to pay these bonds?" "Not by a jugful." The bond holder looked steadfastly at the lawyer for a long minute and then slowly said: "Well, by gum! After ninety-six of us Republicans who listened to your speech went and voted the Democratic ticket in order to realize on our bonds, you now tell me that you didn't mean what you said!"

Anna Dickinson's Politics.

A few weeks ago we unfortunately happened to remark that "Anna Dickinson announces she is no longer in favor of woman's suffrage. We though one season of Hamlet, with its short pants and long stockings, would take the woman's suffrage nonsense out of Anna."

Whereupon a mutual friend of Anna's and ours sent us the following letter to the Editor of the Philadelphia Press, which seems to embody Anna's ideas on the subject:

SIR: You ask me to state explicity whether, by means of a letter to the editor of the Omaha Herald or through other channels, I have avowed myself an opponent of woman suffrage. Explicitly, then, the statement is preposterous and not worthy of the dignity of denial. No one at all familiar with my work and my life would, without malice, make it, and no one equally familiar, unless a fool, would believe it.

I may have written in some private letter to some one what I have no objection to writing in this public letter to whoever may care to read, that in my judgement there is too much voting now, voting that is both ignorant and venal; that no man ought to be able to control the destinies of other people by means of a constitution and laws who is no able at least to read them; that, as a question of principle, these ideas apply as well to women who may vote as to men who do vote; and that, as a matter of personal interest, I would rather see the money I have earned in some hardly-contested campaigns, and have never been paid, than any number of ballots. I have learned through much observation that an abundance of paper with a green-back is a far better guarantee of comfort, safety and honor than any account of material labelled "political rights" without it.

All the same, while intelligent men vote I believe in intelligent women voting. While venal men sell their franchise it is but fair that venal women should enjoy a like monstrous privilege; and while brutes are backed with this additional means of brutality and impunity through rum shops and police courts of travestied justice, I believe in the life companions of these brutes having in hand a staff of protection and defense.

All of which is respectfully submitted by truly yours, ANNA DICKINSON.

The school is well attended, and there is a number of pupils from out of the school district.

The Baptist church of the village has decided unanimously to call the Rev. J. Parks of Philadelphia.

Socially the village promises to be a success. Many parties are under consideration for the young folks this Winter.

The organization of a lodge of the Royal Arcanum is a sign of the village's enterprise. The members are supposed to be about twenty.

Mr. Warren Ackerman, the purchaser of Feltville, is improving the houses of that place. He intends to stock the farm with sheep, under a shepherd.

Since the overwhelming defeat of the projected "Town Hall," the projector of the movement contemplates erecting a hall of his own. He has been seen collecting materials for the structure.

Dr. C. M. Bell who owns the property that formerly belonged to Dr. Townsend, on Park avenue, contemplates erecting several buildings, and he has already awarded the contract to Messrs. Dean & Radine to build a large barn on the property through his agent, Myron Young.—Westfield Monitor.

On application of the above named Administrator it is ordered that said Administrator give public notice to the creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the county of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said administrator.

OH for an Opera House!

VENUS will again make a transit in June, 2004.

COMMON COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

THE last month of 1882 goes out with five Sundays.

Two cent letter postage is likely to become a reality.

LADIES' costumes never had such richness and variety.

IT will soon be time to close up accounts for 1882.

Two Plainfield marriages this month, so far as heard from.

THE cold weather has a wonderful tendency to decrease corner loafing.

IN many of the churches preparations are being made for the Christmas music.

BOYS have commenced to besiege the drug stores for patent medicine almanacs.

THE one hundred and seventh session of the Legislature will convene January 9, 1883.

THE same old poke bonnet that our grandmothers wore is coming into fashion again.

THE city is as peaceful and quiet after the election as the unruffled surface of a sylvan pond.

THE pathway of the cigarette smoker is not only barren of kisses, but it leads to a very early grave.

BOTH white and colored folks have been enjoying themselves at a cake walk in the late rooms of the Hancock Veterans.

BACHMAN, of West Front street, has added a line of toys and Holiday gifts for older ones, to his stock of fancy goods.

THE Parlor Sale at the residence of S. B. Underhill during Wednesday of last week, netted $240 for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital.

THE next evening entertainment and dance of the Plainfield Saengerbund, will take place at its rooms during the night of Monday, January first.

DR. VINCENT says that what is called "nervousness" in boys now-a-days, was called "naughtiness" when he was a boy and punished accordingly.

A YEAR ago to-day in Plainfield residences, fires were not lighted and windows were thrown open to admit what little coolness there was in the air.

THE schools and colleges will soon have the annual holiday vacation, and many young ladies and men who are pursuing their studies away from town will return.

WE have a sympathetic feeling for Trenton; the Times of that city says: "It isn't more lamp posts that Trenton needs. It is more light in the lamps that is wanted."

Now is the time to begin to prepare new resolves. It might not be a bad idea to practice on the more important ones during the two weeks that remain of the year 1882.

ONE year ago there was no frost in the ground, and two years ago in this vicinity ice formed nine inches in thickness. This year we seem to have caught on a happy medium.

WHEN the water from Mr. Geo. I. Seney's pond was drawn off last week German Carp were found in it which had grown five and a half pounds in two years.—Jerseyman.

IF you can't own a fur-lined garment console yourself with the fact that they are losing favor, as the fur is apt to rub off on the clothing. Plush or quilted silk is more fashionable.

DURING the winter months many indentations will be made in the soft ice in the gutters where little boys and girls who have become tired of skating and sliding have sat down to rest.

A NEW game fish has been produced in New York. It is three-fourths brook trout and one-fourth salmon trout. They grow very rapidly, attaining a weight of four pounds in a few years.

ONE of the largest and handsomest assortments of silk handkerchiefs ever shown in Plainfield is offered by Pope Bros., besides other elegant articles so suitable for Holiday presents.

Do not miss your last chance of hearing Dr. De Hass at the Park avenue church, Thursday evening, the 21st inst. An entirely new and instructive lecture on a most interesting subject.

THE members of St. Mary's R. C. church of this city will hold a fair in St. Mary's Hall commencing on Christmas day and lasting over a week, including the first day of the New Year.

THE new postal money-order system permits all sums less than five dollars to be sent for three cents. No blanks will have to be filled out, but the sender will receive an order payable to bearer.

IN our "Wants" column will be noticed an advertisement for a protestant girl or middle-aged woman to do general housework. To such a one, well recommended, a most desirable situation is offered.

WITH a new administration there is a change of the minor municipal officers to be expected. If the present efficient appointees must go, let us trust as fit and capable men may be selected in their places.

SO many weddings have recently been discussed that several parties were reported as being married who were not. The positive denial of the parties themselves should be sufficient to stop these reports.

THE resolution (on paper) of a few Philadelphia girls not to kiss cigarette smokers, has not been adopted in Plainfield yet, and probably will not be, as our girls are not in the habit of making rash promises.

TEXT-BOOKS should not be opened by children out of school hours, and a system which compels a child to study at home is radically wrong and arranged for the benefit of the teacher rather than of the pupil and its parents.

DEMAREST, the Front street grocer, has had placed in his store a telephone by means of which his numerous patrons can order anything they may desire from his large stock of canned goods, vegetables and other articles in his line.

*THE Warren Mission has just purchas*ed for its use one of Estey & Co's $475 organs combining tone, volume of sound and handsome construction. The Mission will soon need more extensive quarters, as its present rooms are too small for the large attendance of each Sunday —Mr. C. E. Tyler's Berean Class alone averaging a membership of eighty adults.

THE Union Congregational church of Brooklyn—of which the Rev. N. Everit Smith, formerly of the Congregational church of this city, is pastor—will hold an Allegorical Reception this (Thursday) evening. The following former residents of this city will take part, among others, in the programme; Miss Laura Smith, Miss Etta Van Duyn, Miss Mamie Howell, Miss Jennie Hugg and Mr. Peter Bogert.

WE mention it as a secret—and trust it will go no further—that plans for Plainfield's Opera House have been drawn and are now in the hands of a wealthy and enthusiastic philanthropist, residing on Crescent avenue. This gentleman is also a member of the Citizen's Committee, appointed by Mayor Randolph for the purpose of devising means for the erection of the building desired.

THE many who could not resist the too rare opportunity of hearing the Rev. J. H. Vincent and those who thought the De Hass lecture of last Thursday evening would be possibly a repetition of some former discourse, missed a rare treat in not hearing Dr. De Hass on "Egypt and the Egyptians." The next and the last of the series by this talented speaker will be given at the Park avenue church on Thursday evening of next week. Subject —"The Giant Cities of Bashan."

THE First Baptist Church was comfortably filled, Thursday evening of last week, with enthusiastic friends of the Children's Home Association gathered to celebrate the Sixth Anniversary of its organization. The Revs. Yerkes, Murphy, Manchee, Stockton and Raymond took part in the exercises, and music by a selected choir was also an agreeable feature of the programme. Plainfield's old admiration, the Rev. J. H. Vincent, delivered the address of the occasion, which showed the speaker still retained his eloquence and power to interest.

CROWDS of little ones interested in the miniature scene and many older folks attracted by the general beauty of the affair, daily gather in front of Peck's window and audibly express their admiration of the successful effort he has made to please the public. The entire right-hand window is taken up with a representation of a scene from the fairy story of the Magic Girdle, and the characters are so life-like in their handsome costumes, and the surroundings so perfectly delineated, that the observer feels transported into the very midst.

OH, for an Opera House.

A HEAVY snow storm is predicted for the 20th.

IN another column Constable Pangborn advertises the sale of certain lands for taxes in Fanwood Township.

THE next meeting of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., will be held in Temperance Hall, Friday evening of next week.

"Is Mrs. Langtry naughty?" asks the Brooklyn Eagle. She is not very naughty, but just naughty enough for the paragraphers. And if she is very naughty, no one can deny that she is very nice.

AT Estil's, No. 7 Park avenue, the display of statuettes and groups, Christmas cards, gift books for young and old, and other appropriate Holiday presents, is unusually large. Call and inspect the assortment.

THE firm of Arnold & Van Norstrand, the Somerset street grocers, has been dissolved by mutual consent and the business will hereafter be conducted by Mr. James K. Arnold with the same fair dealing and careful attention to the wants of his patrons as in the past.

PLAINFIELD is so full of doctors that even the most accurate reporter will at times get them mixed. Which accounts for our statement last week that Dr. Field's horse ranaway, when we should have said it was Dr. Mc Knight's.

THE members of Gazelle Hose Co., No. 1, intend giving their usual Ball this season at Van Deventer Hall, on the evening of Jan. 11th. Further particulars of the affair, which is sure of being especially successful, we will speak of later.

AT the office of City Clerk Leonard during Saturday evening last, the newly elected charter officers (with one or two exceptions) gathered to be sworn in. His Honor, Mayor Randolph, administered the proper oath and signed the certificates.

THE early advent of snow and severe Winter weather is more welcome to the boys than anyone else. Little do they care for the personal discomfort it occasions or the extra work entailed. They want all the fun possible, and they manage to get it.

THE change in the C. R. R. of N. J., time table to be published next week, only effect the Long Branch connections. In future the trains leaving Plainfield at 7:58, 10:37, 11:05 a. m., and 1:27, 3:47, 5:48 p. m., connect for Long Branch, Ocean Grove &c.

IT really seems as if at last our weekly exclamations of "Oh, for an Opera House" will be effective. A number of Plainfield capitalists are "talking" of erecting such a building, and of every movement in that direction our readers will be duly informed.

MR. M. M. THORN as agent for the owners will sell by auction, the 26th inst, on the premises corner of Second street and Madison avenue, a house and lot formerly owned by George T. Young. Also a lot on Highland avenue and Lake street, about 66 by 420 feet.

THERE already arises rumors in relation to the occupants of the minor city offices, to be appointed by the new Common Council. We would beg leave to re*mark, right here, that City Clerk Leo*nard's equal as a City Clerk cannot be found, and a change in such office is not essential.

WE have received too late for insertion a change of advertisement for R. R. Fairchild of Somerset street, announcing a large line of parlor and bedroom suits at remarkably low prices. He has also a handsome stock of furniture of all kinds, which should be inspected by intending purchasers.

ENGINE No. 222, in charge of Engineer John Hogan, on the New Jersey Central Railroad, recently made a run of eighty-seven miles in ninety-one minutes, including a stop at Green Brook for water and at Bound Brook for inspection. The run from Bound Brook to Trenton, twenty-seven miles, was made in twenty-seven minutes.

WEATHER prophets are busy with predictions concerning the coming winter. The general verdict is that it will be a fair average, not very open. This is a safe conclusion since it allows margin enough to cover all mistakes. Vennor predicted that the first week in December would be unusually cold in this vicinity.

VANDERBEEK the Chautauqua music dealer, is the sole agent in this city for Behr Bro's Elegant Upright Pianos with the patent cylinder top. These instruments are superior in workmanship and tone to any others and are but half the price. One has been recently selected by Theodore Thomas for use in his orchestra.

THE very attractive tonsorial parlors in Fleig's Hotel next to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office, are being repainted in a very handsome manner by the proprietor, Professor Maynard. This artist with his assistants, Dr. Alonzo Hill and Senator Wm. Randolph, always study to *please the numerous patrons of the estab*lishment.

L. M. FRENCH, the carriage manufacturer of Somerset street, is securing a patronage all over the country by reason of the thoroughness and finish of his work. He last week sold three coupe-rockaways, one to New York one to Orange, N. J., and one to East Saginaw, Mich. He has the largest stock of sleighs ever exhibited in this city.

NOT having the necessary space in our paper to give special and individual notice to each advertiser of Holiday goods, as has heretofore been our custom, we would suggest to each reader that they carefully scan our advertising columns for proper places to purchase their holiday gifts. The merchant who advertises liberally is sure to deal liberally with his or her customers.

AN experienced farmer recommends that oats be soaked sufficiently to swell them before feeding to stock. Ground oats are in proper condition at all times, but millers are not partial to grinding oats. When soaked the husk is partly torn away, and facility of digestion increased. Poultry will carefully pick out the soaked grains from the dry when allowed a preference in the matter.

THE movement on foot for the organization of a G. A. R., Post in this city and North Plainfield, is progressing favorably. At a recent meeting over thirty old soldiers signed the application for a charter which has been forwarded by Mayor Randolph, Captain Martin and Dr. Mattison, the committee on arrangements. Messrs Olssen and Capt. Mc Donald were appointed to select a meeting room.

THE Fireman's Herald of last Thursday contained an extensive and flattering account of the Fourth Annual Ball given by Hose Co. No. 2, at Blatz's Hall, during Thanksgiving eve. The article finished with the following deserved compliment: "If the Plainfield fire department is composed of such quiet, orderly, wholesouled firemen as compose this company, well may the city be proud." And so it is.

THAT the most successful advertisers are those who employ the columns of well conducted and reliable newspapers is every day being demonstrated. A Philadelphia soap manufacturer, who has accumulated a large fortune, says that he has never spent a cent for posters or for circulars, other than those in which his soap was wrapped, but concentrated all his advertising efforts upon newspapers.

THERE is no more acceptable a present than a year's subscription to one of the many magazines and periodicals to be obtained at the establishment of W. H. Williams, No. 7 Park avenue. Until and including Dec. 25th., they may be obtained at the lowest "club-rates" and make a valuable and interesting gift that lasts for a whole year—reminding the receiver by the coming of each number, of the kind feelings of the giver.

THE custom of making presents is one of the most delightful in connection with the Christmas season. No matter how trifling the gift may be, it brings pleasure to the friend who knows that it represents a wealth of affection. The custom should be encouraged on that account, and even the little folks might be taught to exchange among themselves reminders of another's regard. Reference to our advertising columns will inform you where to purchase your gifts.

WE are just now having the shortest afternoons of the year, but on the 31st inst., they will begin slowly to lengthen. The mornings will, however, be getting shorter by some minutes until Jan. 8th, and then commence lengthening gradually. The shortest day, from sunrise to sunset, occurs to-day when the sun is nearest the earth, but when instead of shining perpendicularly upon our globe it sends its rays down obliquely, and thus causes the atmosphere to be cold.

As we shall probably have more snow this Winter, a word on the subject will not be out of place. After a fall of snow like that of last week, never clean off your sidewalk; because if you did a person *might perambulate without immi*nent danger of falling and dislocating his collar bone, or breaking the cap of his knee-pan, or at least fracturing his skull. And even when the rays of Old Sol has turned to muck and slush the snow and ice, leave it alone; don't touch it!—particularly if you owe about five years' taxes. The condition of some parts of Front street recently would be disgraceful in a village of five hundred inhabitants.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

On Saturday evening the regular Bible Study will be held in the parlor, and a cordial invitation is extended to all young men to attend. These hours of Bible study are of great interest. The subject for Saturday evening will be "Peter's Powerful Sermon."

Every Sunday morning from 9 to 10:15, the rooms of the association are open and free to all.

The next reception will be given on Tuesday evening, Jan. 2d, 1883. This reception will be one of great interest to all who may attend.

An Appeal to the Charitable.

The Board of Managers of Muhlenberg Hospital gratefully acknowledge the contributions which were sent in on Thanksgiving Day.

It is suggested that Christmas day be designated as "donation day" for the Hospital.

We would mention as articles which would be most acceptable, potatoes, apples, flour, sugar, oat meal Indian meal, hominy, onions, canned vegetables, canned fruits, tea and coffee. Six patients are now in the hospital.

E. M. RODMAN,
In behalf of the Board.

About the "Bunnies."

The rabbit hunters are now waiting and wishing for a light snow to fall just in the right time to result in the extermination of the few rabbits left over from the onslaught of the past two weeks. Several contingencies are wanted to make a very successful tracking snow, and it is very seldom that a season passes, as last season did, without a favorable storm. The most killing kind of a snow storm is one which sets in late at night when the hares are out feeding, and which ceases after depositing a soft covering an inch or two thick over the earth before dawn. Such a storm is very destructive to both old and young rabbits, as their fatal foot surely lead the early prowling gunner to their forms, and they are all killed before the warm sun removes the tracks. If a snowstorm begins in the daytime and ceases during the night there is but little likelihood of any young rabbits being killed, for they being unused to snow will not move from their forms until it disappears, or their fears are allayed by constantly seeing it for several days. The two years old, however, will welcome the snow and gambol about in it to their costs.

Of Interest to Our Firemen.

The following extract from Chap. LXI of the General Public acts of the last legislature, is of importance to most of our firemen. As taxes of '82 are due and payable on the 20th inst., members of the Department should at once have their certificates receipted as provided below:

"That all members of an organized volunteer or other Fire Department, organized under the laws of this State, of any town, city, borough or township of this State, working under a special or general law of this State, incorporating said Fire Department, shall be exempt from the payment of taxes to said town, city, borough or township, to the extent as follows:

If the sum assessed at any one time by any assessor upon any member of said Department, shall not exceed the sum of Five Dollars, then said member shall be exempt from the payment of taxes upon said assessment. If the sum so assessed exceeds the sum of Five Dollars, then such member shall have credit for the sum of Five Dollars upon such assessment.

The certificate of the President, countersigned by the Secretary of the Fire Department, of such membership, shall be a sufficient voucher and authority for the assessor or collector of any town, city, borough or township to deduct the sum of Five Dollars from said assessment.

The aforesaid certificate shall be receipted by the collector of taxes when presented to him as taxes paid by any of the aforesaid members."

A Japanese Wedding.

During Tuesday evening last, the elegant residence of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Halt, on Union avenue, was hospitably thrown open to a large number of Plainfield's elite that assembled to witness that particularly novel and, in this country, truly original ceremony of a marriage a la Japanese. The contracting parties were (ostensibly) the Princess Meeloonay of Bail-ee-hae and His Royal Highness, Mul-cay-hee, T'high Coon of Teepera-tee—known to the American public as Mr. Townsend Rushmore and his sister. The retinue of the groom, the bride's attendants and the parents of the happy pair were recognized, through paint and powder and behind tapering moustaches, to be Messrs Miller, Burgess, the Misses Brewster, Murray, Miller, Burgess, Mosher, McGee and Pangborn of our society belles. The costumes, imported especially for the occasion, were surpassingly gorgeous if exceedingly unbecoming. Miss Julia Ketcham, the "go-between"—whose Japanese name and title is too long to fit these columns—conducted the ceremonies with a lacquer Japan awkwardness that—the ladies will be glad to learn—did not lessen the compactness of the nuptial bonds. The striking of innumerable cups of tea and the eating, with an audible accompaniment on the mouth organ, of rice-cakes (made of dessicated cocoanut, to suit the more *refined palates of the Ameri*cans) preceded, interspersed and followed by graceless salams, completed the solemn ceremony. The guests that were so impatient for the beginning, betrayed an entire satisfaction when the affair ended as well as an interest in the short discourse on Japanese ways and manners, given by Prof. Davis of Yeddo, as a termination of the evening's entertainment.

In a room set apart as a bazaar for the sale of useful and ornamental articles from the East, each holder of a ticket of invitation was presented with a decorated cup and saucer as a memento of the occasion—as it had been a momentum that impelled the attendance of some. The thorough success of the affair is mainly due to Mrs. Halt, and the Children's Home will be benefited thereby to a most desirable extent.

Among the many present were Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Fraley, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mc Gee, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Rushmore, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, the Misses Pinkerton, Anthony, Yerkes, Underhill, Messrs Mc Gee, Griffen, Murray and others.

Personals.

Mr. Patrick Kelly, for many years past sexton of St. Mary's church, died recently at Avondale, N. J.

Mayor-elect, Hon. Wm. B. Maxson, was sworn in by Judge Nathan Harper, of the Court of Common Pleas, on Saturday last.

Mr. Charles C. Moore, of Jackson ave., who had been confined to his house recently by sickness, is so much better that he is able to be out again.

Mr. Harry B. Kaufman is so seriously ill at the residence of his father-in-law, Lawrence Myers, Esq., that but little hope of his recovery is given.

Hon. Dwight H. Olmstead, President of the New York City "West-side Association" and author of the new method of transferring real estate, visited this city on Tuesday for the purpose of investment.

On Wednesday evening the 27th inst, at the residence of the bride's parents on East Front street, will be solemnized the marriage ceremony of Miss Mary A. Gardner and George A. Hallock, both of this city.

Mr. Frank Webster, a former attache of this office, has just returned from an extended trip and visit in the Far West. Although rather ill for the past few days, he has now so far recovered his health as to be out again.

The funeral services of the late Martin *Giles were held at the deceased's resi*dence, on Second street near Park ave., during Thursday afternoon of last week, and attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The announcement is out of the marriage of Miss Annie Dunn and Mr. Peter R. Buckerlew, on Thursday evening of next week, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Dunn, corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets.

During Sunday the 3d inst, Mrs Charles Douglas, formerly of this city, died of consumption at her residence in Middletown, N. J. The death of the deceased occurred on the same day exactly one year after the death of her mother, Mrs. Sarah W. Dewey, at her home corner of Central avenue and Front street.

The comparatively sudden death of Samuel Hooley, at the residence of his mother during Tuesday last, was felt with an especial sorrow by his many friends among the young people of this city. The deceased was universally popular with his numerous acquaintances, and admired for his enviable qualities of character and disposition.

Mr. James O. Miller, the celebrated "Orange County Farmer," now known as "Miller the Showman," was in Plainfield yesterday endeavoring to make arrangements for the delivery in this city of his new lecture, "The Museum of the Mind, and Menagerie Combined." We hope our public will be afforded an opportunity very shortly of hearing this talented speaker in his entertaining discourse.

Report of the General Secretary for the Months of October and November, 1882.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN:—Since we last met here many changes have taken place in the surroundings and in our work. We have reason to feel proud of the fine suit of rooms now in our possession—which have been so greatly beautified in the weeks just passed—and certainly our hearts are thankful for what *the ladies have done to increase the in*terest in the work and make our home inviting for the young men of this city. Our rooms are proof of the interest that the Ladies Auxiliary has taken in this work, and that the Lord has wonderfully blessed us in His work. But in re-furnishing the rooms the work of the ladies has not ceased since the interesting receptions held in the building have been under their supervision and both were of great interest and a means of reaching young men who never before have entered our rooms. At the rooms the attendance has been daily increasing and we meet many new faces who are beginning to be regular in attendance. The whole number for October was 1763, an average of 68, while the total attendance for November was 1841, or an average of 70 daily. The game room has been thoroughly re-fitted and is patronized nightly by young men. A committee has this work in charge and has been quite faithful to their duties—which are to attend the room and welcome those using it.

On the 9th of November the annual meeting of the Association for the election of officers and directors was held and the following were elected: Officers —President, H. K. Munger; Vice President, George A. Chapman; Treasurer, H. O. Newman; Recording Secretary, W. M. McGee; Corresponding Secretary, H. J. Runyon. Directors—G. A. Chapman, H. J. Runyon, C. W. McCutchen, E. L. Bonny, D. J. Runyon, E. E. Anthony, H. K. Munger, T. J. Rushmore, H. O. Newman, C. E. Tyler, G. W. Rockfellow, E. R. Ackerman, J. M. Titsworth, W. M. Mc Gee, H. A. McGee, L. S. Mulford, H. K. Carroll, J. H. Cuthbert.

The Librarian has done faithful work and the number patronizing the library is on the increase. During the two months 557 books were drawn, besides many that have been taken in the rooms. While special attention has been paid to our work at the rooms, the out-posts have not been deserted; but many interesting meetings have been held under the auspices of the Association. The average attendance has been as follows: Washingtonville Sunday School, 35; do evening service, 40; Mt. Pleasant 57 and Jackson 24. Arrangements are now in progress so that these meetings will be well supplied during the coming months. The sixteenth anniversary of the Association was held in the First Baptist Church on Sunday evening Nov. 19th and the exercises were of unusual interest. These branches of the work thus reported have greatly increased the strength, efficiency and interest of the specific work and helped to promote the one great aim—that of leading souls to Christ and training them for His service. In this—the work "for young men by young," the Lord has greatly blessed us. The interest of the young men's meeting is apparent from the numbers that have been in attendance. The average for the two month's being 44. At these meetings some young men have made a stand for Christ and we can report four hopeful conversions since the last directors' meeting. Those converted at the former meetings have united with the church, and others are soon to follow. While some have just decided for the Master many others are testifying for Him who never before entering our meet*ings had heard their voice in public testi*mony. The "Bible Study" for young men has been conducted on Saturday evenings, and we feel that this hour of the week has been one of great profit to those who have attended. The average attendance, though small, is nevertheless composed of young men who are growing in the knowledge of God's word. During the week of prayer, in accordance with the international committees' request, meetings were held in the rooms which were well attended and of great profit. As we come to the close of another year we can feel that something has been done for Him, who did so much for us. Yet, we are but just started in the great work that calls for many laborers, and as we try to do the Master's will and make the Young Men's Christian Association of Plainfield a power for good, let us, forgetting self, and relying wholly on Christ, remember the words of Paul to the Thessalonians—"Brethren, be not weary with well doing."

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY O. WILLIAMS.
December 9th, 1882.

A Vote of Thanks

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held Saturday evening, Dec. 9th, a vote of thanks was authorized to be extended to those friends who have donated articles or in anyway aided in beautifying the rooms occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association. They therefore receive the heartfelt thanks of the Association through these columns.

W. M. MCGEE, Rec. Sec.

Present Considerations.

The near approach of the Christmas holidays recalls the annual custom of present giving. The principle rules to be observed in this admirable, if somewhat abused, custom are: First, whom to present; second, what to present, and, third, where to go to purchase the necessary gift. But the principle consideration is —where is the money to come from to get the present? Wanting that very necessary medium, it is best to fall back upon kind words, which cost nothing. The first question your heart will answer. The second and third are answered in our advertising columns. But the principal consideration is not solvable in a newspaper office.

Howorth's Hibernica.

The Washington Gazette speaks in the following flattering manner of Howorth's Double Show, which will exhibit at Van Deventer Hall, on Saturday evening of next week. "Howorth's Hibernica was brought before a Washington audience last Tuesday evening, to the perfect satisfaction of the large house assembled. The entertainment throughout is entirely free from any vulgarity, and everything on the programme was given. The Dutch, Irish and Negro comedians were first-class, the singing excellent, and, take it altogether, it is the best traveling troupe that has appeared in Washington for years. If the company ever come here again they will without doubt be greeted by a larger house even than they had last Tuesday."

G. A. R.

The mustering in of a G. A. R. Post for this city and North Plainfield was successfully carried out at Temperance Hall on Wednesday evening. Chief mustering officer, George B. Fielder of Jersey City, assisted by Thomas A. Little, Commander of Ulric Dahlgren Post of Elizabeth and a delegation from that organization, took part in the ceremonies. The name given was Winfield Scott Post, No. 73 G. A. R. Department of New Jersey, and thirty-nine members were mustered. The following were the officers elected:

MR. PATTERSON MEANT WHAT HE SAID, Lyman Dorman, Huntington, Conn., Aug. 18, 1880, writes: I hereby certify that my boy, ten years of age, was taken sick with typhoid fever, followed by congestion of the lungs. Dr. Dyer, an eminent physician of this place, stated that he thought the boy would run down with Quick Consumption. A Mr. Patterson told me that Cox's Cough Balsam was curing similar cases, and advised me to purchase it. When I carried it home my wife laughed at me, but I knew that Mr. Patterson meant just what he said, and I determined to try it. Two bottles effectually cured him, so that now he is as tough and healthy as any body.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ONLY A COUSIN.

"Nellie, what in the name of wonder is the matter with you? One can scarcely speak to you nowadays without seeing tears in your eyes or a cloud upon your brow. Now, what did I say or do to make you cry in this manner?"

Here the speaker's voice softened from the annoyed, heightened tone he had first adopted.

The person addressed stood at the window, half hid by the dark, flowing curtains, sobbing audibly. 'Twas a slight girlish figure, soft golden ringlets fell in rich profusion to her slender waist; and the tiny hands, like snow-flakes, were clasped convulsively before her fair face, while the tears fell thick and fast. No answer came; only the sobs grew louder and louder and more hysterical.

"Well, I've either to stay here and listen to the rain and storm all the morning or go and see pretty Maude Melton, look into her bewitching black eyes and learn my fate. Which must I do, Nell?"

And Harry Mordaunt threw his nut-brown curls from his high, white brow and then leaned back in the large arm-chair.

"Don't care what becomes of me! Oh, I know what's the matter! George hasn't been here for two days; he is a scamp to cause your dear heart so much pain. Why, my darling cousin, I'll go this minute and find the truant; he'll come back here in a hurry, I'll vouch for it. Then what will become of me? Oh, I'll drop in an hour or two at my own Maude's. Hasn't she the rosiest cheeks and blackest eyes you ever gazed upon?"

No answer.

"Nellie, I say!" And there was a merry twinkle in his half closed eyes as the pettish reply, "What do you want?" came from the pouting red lips.

"Come here!"

"I shall not!"

"Oh, yes you will. Come, Nellie!"

"No, I won't!"

"I have something to tell you. Come along." And the cruel young gentleman turned his handsome face toward her, and held out his hands invitingly.

Nellie raised her tearful blue eyes for a moment to his countenance; but the long lashes instantly swept the flushed cheeks, and, though taking one step forward, said, poutingly:

"I'm not coming near you, you hateful thing, after what you said."

"What I said? What did I say?"

"You know very well how cross you were to me, and then you said that this was a dull old house, and everybody stupid in it; and—and—"

The other little foot slipped cautiously up to its mate.

"Did I say that? It must have been when I was at the window, and you wouldn't kiss me. Sure enough, I remember now. But come, Nellie, sit beside me and tell me all about it. My memory is not very good."

Here he drew up a low-cushioned footstool and very nearly bit off the end of his pet mustache as he noted the little form approaching nearer.

"You never treated me in this way when you first came home from college, but you were gentle and kind as—as—"

The poor little thing choked down the rising tears, and sat cautiously down on the side of the low seat.

"Look out—you'll fall! There now, this position is much more comfortable;" and Nellie found her curly head resting on Henry's chest, and his strong arm tenderly encircling her waist. Then the flood gates were raised again; and how the rain fell!

"Darling wee cousin, what grieves you? Do you regret sending poor George Hunter away with that sad, stricken heart? It is not too late to recall him. Write one line on this slip of paper and I'll hasten with the speed of Mercury, and make all right between you. What! you hate George Hunter and everybody else, and you wish you were dead? Hush, Nellie; it makes me shudder to hear you talk so. Dead! how could I live without Nellie, my own dear love, my darling? And you hate, too, poor Henry, who loves this wee trembling dove so much?"

"Do you, Henry—do you? Are you in earnest? But of course you love me; I'm—I'm your cousin;" and she sighed heavily and the sunny head rested once more on its loving pillow. "Henry, I am sorry I was so cross and so ill-tempered. Can you forgive me?"

The blue eyes were raised entreatingly, but he evaded them and kept gazing into the fire.

"I will if you'll kiss me!"

"No, no, Henry, I cannot."

"Not when I tell you that I am going far away to-morrow, and may never see you again?"

"Oh, 'tis not so. You are not going away dear, dear, Henry. I should be so lonely without you; don't leave me!"

"Yes, I must. Will you kiss me?"

The little form trembled; but it slowly arose, and looking sadly at the averted face of her exacting cousin, answered: "I cannot comply with your request, Henry; but will nothing change your purpose about leaving us so soon?"

How her voice quivered, though she tried to speak so calmly. The hard-hearted wretch, how serenely he appeared.

"Nothing—nothing except a sweet kiss from proud little Nell, and a promise from her that she'll some day be my own precious wife."

"No, no. Am I dreaming. Look at me Henry!"

He did gaze now into the lovely, loving face, and the little maiden saw enough to satisfy the great yearning in her unquiet heart, for with a glad cry she threw her fair arms around his neck, and Henry was saved the tedium of his threatened journey (if the good-for-nothing fellow had ever projected any.)

POETRY.

THE LITTLE BANANA PEEL.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

Like a bar of the beaten gold
 I gleam in the summer's sun;
I am little, I know, but I think I can throw,
 A man that will weigh a ton.
I sent out no challenger bold,
 I blow me no vaunting horn,
But foolish is he who treadeth on me;
 He'll wish he had ne'er been born.

Like the flower of the field, vain man
 Goeth forth at the break of day,
But when he shall feel my grip on his heel,
 Like the stubble he fadeth away;
For I lift him high up in the air,
 With his heels where his head ought to be,
With a down-coming crash he smasheth his mash,
 And I know he's clear gone up on me.

I am scorned by the man who buys me;
 I am modest and quiet and meek;
Though my friends are few, yet the work that I do
 Has oft made the cellar doors creak.
I'm a blood-red Republican lord,
 And a Nihilist fearless I be;
Though the head wears a crown, I would bring its pride down -
 If it sets its proud heel upon me.

ROMANCE OF AN ANCIENT HOUSE.

A LEGEND OF THE HUDSON RIVER.

BY E. HAMILTON LEE.

> 'Tis said thou holdest converse with the things
> Which are forbidden to the search of man;
> That with the dwellers of the dark abodes
> Which walk the valley of the shade of death
> Thou communest."—BYRON.

Every part of the region through which the Hudson flows, from the wilderness to the sea, is rich in legends and traditions thickly clustered with the romantic verities of history. The tales of Fenimore Cooper have thrown a charm over the upper Hudson, and the genius of Washington Irving has made the lower portion of the stream glow with the splendor of romance; but of them all none surpass in weird fancy the legend of Van Cortlandt manor-house at Croton Point.

The long low headland stretching out from the Eastern shore of the river above Tarrytown, dividing Tappan Sea from Haverstraw Bay, is Croton Point—"Teller's Point," of the Revolution.

Up the narrowing bay at the East, below Croton Point and beyond the railway, may be seen at its head, a quaint old mansion—

> Say, ancient edifice, thyself with years
> Grown gray, how long upon the hill has stood
> Thy weather braving front and silent marked
> The human leaf in constant bud and fall?
> The generations of deciduous man
> How often hast thou seen them pass away?

The inlet once deep, now changing into salt meadow land, is Croton Bay, into which Henrick Hudson in the little shallop, the Half-Moon, sailed in 1609; and the mansion is the Van Cortlandt manor-house, one of the most interesting from its associations and most ancient on the river. Recent discoveries, while repairing it, of loop-holes for musketry near the floor in the dining hall clearly show that it originally composed a fort, probably built by Governor Dongan soon after he purchased the domain two hundred years ago.

In the early years of the reign of Queen Anne the manor-house was enlarged by John Van Cortlandt to its present dimensions, and from that period its broad roof has sheltered men of renown. Here have been entertained Washington, Franklin, Schuyler, Lafayette, Whitefield, Asbury and others of eminence. The proprietors were men of note in New York colony and during the Revolution the head of the family and his son were patriots. Over the main entrance hung the strong bow of Croton, the sachem whose name is borne by the Kitchewan river and bay; and within the house were interesting mementoes of the land and the nobility from whom the Van Cortlandt's came—the ancient Dukes of Courland, in Russia.

Tappan Sea has its legends as likewise has Croton Bay. History and romance tell of stirring scenes at the Van Cortlandt manor-house, and among its claims to veneration is a ghost which rustles its garments as it passes through certain rooms at mid-night hour; also the sound of mysterious heavy foot-falls in the great hall are heard in the mystic watches of the silent night. Fifty years ago there was at Cortlandt manor-house a very remarkable portrait placed among the family pictures. The portrait was that of a very handsome young man, with a noble but emaciated countenance, and a large, dark, impassioned eye. He was dressed in the habit of the monastic order of St. Francis, and beside him were a crucifix and skull.

The history of the portrait was peculiar. It was brought from Holland by the first Lord of the Manor, who had been presented with it by the Superior of a Franciscan Convent in Bohemia, where on one occasion, before his departure from Europe, he had quartered during a journey.

The Superior of the Convent after he had ascertained who he was, and who had been entertained by the amiable manners of his guest, informed him that the monastery had a portrait of one of his family, or at least of his name, which he would be glad to present to him. Van Cortlandt, immediately recognized the portrait as that of his remote collateral ancestor, the elder brother of his grandfather four times removed, and the heir-apparent to the honors of his house, which he had abandoned for the sake of a life of religion and poverty. The prior of the Franciscan Convent told Van Cortlandt that Father Seraphicus, had been a person of note in the order, and was highly renowned for his piety and charity. It is of this singular portrait concerning which a tale exists that is not more strange than true.

One summer night in 1733, Robert Johnstone, a nephew of the lord of the manor, was seated in the library of the manor house at Croton Bay. Being a younger brother, Robert studied law, as one of the few gentlemanly roads to wealth and distinction. At the present moment, when we see him, he was deeply immersed in a tome intricate with the subtleties of law. So deeply was he wrapped up in the dull volume before him that he still read on when the clock began to strike the hour of midnight. The affect produced was wonderful. It seemed to him as if the clock, instead of being distant, was striking close to his ear, and startled for the moment by this delusion he looked up. What was his surprise to see the hooded figure of the monk, with crucifix and beads in hand, glide from the picture frame down to the floor of the room.

Planting himself between Robert and the door, muffled up in the long Franciscan habit, the figure neither spoke nor moved.

"Who are you?" "what do you want?" were the first hasty exclamations of Robert, whilst mechanically, at the same time he closed his book. There was a low hollow cough, but still the cowled figure neither made movement nor response. Robert now lost patience and with rapidity of lightning attempted desperately to pass, by the intruder toward the door. As he did so he grasped at the apparition, but his hand met no more opposition than if he had struck at the air. The ghost floated as in a mist before him and went through a door without opening it. Robert threw open the door and followed into an oratory.

The filmy figure crossed the apartment to a prie-Dieu, situated at a further corner, where kneeling he appeared in an attitude of prayer, and continued looking mildly and kindly on Robert until the prayer was ended, when he arose to his feet. Robert, for awhile, continued gazing in utter amazement and it must be owned that a momentary thrill of awe curdled his blood, and made the hair arise on his head; but he was among the bravest of the brave notwithstanding, and when the first surprise was over, regained sufficient courage to question his mysterious visitor to bring him to closer quarters, after he had arisen from his devoir of devotion.

"Still no answer? Thus dare I cast aside that cowl of thine," whereupon tearing aside the spectre's habit, in the folds of which he had concealed his countenance, Robert Johnstone saw his own apparition, bloody and ghastly, whereat he was so astounded that he immediately swooned away, but soon recovering, he saw his mysterious visitor glide from the oratory to the library and re-assume its ancient place within the gilded frame on the wall where Robert had been accustomed to have seen it from his earliest recollection.

"When," continues the old narration, "Robert recovered of his fright, he slowly left the room, proceeded to his chamber and went to bed, but in extraordinary uneasiness, so that he could not sleep, but rose early and dressing, went to his uncle and guardian, John Van Cortlandt.

It was so early that his uncle was not yet stirring, but nevertheless, young Johnstone went into his room and waked him. It was a freedom he was not used to take, and Van Cortlandt was surprised; but asking him what took him there so early? Robert, still in consternation, replied, he had that night seen his ghost; and told him all the particulars as I have related them.

Van Cortlandt at first chid him for reporting an idle dream, the effect of an overburdened mind constrained by study —but observing the agitation the young man was in, and having had the story repeated to him, he grew very serious, and desired his nephew would take care of himself, and recollect if he had given occasion to any person to avenge himself on him, for this might be a true presage of what was to befall him."

Several days elapsed since the appearance of the spirit, when an event happened which must have brought it again to the recollection of Robert.

He was in New York city walking from his lodgings, located in Wall street near the City Hall—then in Wall street fronting Broad street—when he imagined he was dogged by a man, who followed him at a short distance. To make the matter quite certain, he went into a chemist's under pretence of buying some important drug, but though he stayed full ten minutes, when he came out, there was his pertinacious follower.

Turning sharply upon him, Robert demanded "who he was, and what he meant by following him?" The man replied, and with no less sharpness, "I am not following you, I am following my own business."

Robert paused for a moment half disposed to make a quarrel of it, but on second thought abandoned this purpose; it might be nothing more than mere sullenness in the follow, and a perverse disposition to do that which he saw was a matter of annoyance. "I will give the brute one more chance," said Robert to himself; "and then if he still dares to keep at my heels, it will be at his peril." On so saying he crossed to the opposite side of the way.

The man followed him step for step, and Robert could hear the tread of his heavy nailed shoes the moment they had reached the pavement. It was now close on to eleven o'clock at night, the street was almost deserted, and moreover, the lamps, according to the custom of those days, were so few in number and so sparingly supplied with oil, that they served rather to show the darkness than to afford light. Still he heard the steps behind, and—or did fancy deceive him?—the whispering of more than two voices. Again he turned round hastily, and his pursuer being just under a lamp, he saw him at about twenty paces off with a second ruffian, who had just that minute joined him. Decisive measures were now evidently indispensible, and drawing his sword he called upon them to retire at their peril. To this the ruffians replied by falling upon him sword in hand; and such at the time was the state of so public a thoroughfare as Wall street, that the combat continued without interruption from any accidental passer-by, till one of the assailants being wounded, took to his heels, and the other was not slow in following his example—but neither had Robert escaped scot free—one of them had wounded him in the leg, and abandoning all thoughts of following his enemies, he made the best of his way to the nearest tavern. Faint with loss of blood, he called for some brandy, and having drank it off, he coolly wiped his reeking sword, returned it to his sheath and bound a handkerchief about his wounded leg. Common as scenes of this kind were at that period, his tale excited much speculation as to the probable authors of the attack. Some suggested that the ruffians, after all, might not have been personal enemies, but merely intent upon plunder. Robert shook his head.

"I do not believe it," he replied. "My firm conviction is that the villains were hired and set on by some one who owed me a grudge; and mark you, landlord"—this was addressed to the owner of the tavern—"if anything happens to me before the night's over, as I am persuaded there will, let my friends know what I now say: It will be no hard matter for them to guess the murderer."

The landlord would fain have persuaded him to pass the night where he was, or, if not, to let some of the tavern-people see him safe to his chambers. Many of the guests there present joined in pressing the same advice upon him, but he was obstinate to go home by himself; he never had and never would skulk for fear of any such rascals; and when they persisted in their remonstrances, he repelled them with so much acrimony that every one was silent. He was suffered to go out alone, none feeling it was their duty to run a serious risk for the sake of a man who rejected their assistance with contempt and anger. The scene of our tradition must now be shifted to other places and other actors.

There was a Mrs. Brown, who appears, though I know not from what cause, to have taken a lively interest in his fortunes. Perhaps it was from holding some situation in the family of his uncle, the lord of Cortlandt Manor. On this fatal night she dreamed that one Mrs. Shearman, who seems to have been the housekeeper, came to her, and asked for a sheet. She demanded, "for what purpose?" Mrs. Shearman replied, "Poor Master Robert is killed, and it is to wind him in."

And this dream proved true to the letter, for in the morning Mrs. Shearman came at an early hour into Mrs. Brown's room, and seeming like one bewildered, asked for a sheet. "For what purpose," said the terrified dreamer, the very words of her sleep rising spontaneously to her lips—"Poor Mr. Robert is murdered," was the reply, "he lies dead in the watch-house at the City Hall, and it is to wind his body in."

I will not attempt to deny or explain the vision enough for my purpose, that he had really been found dead near the steps of the old City Hall—on Wall street, at the head of Broad street—and having been found here early in the morning, his body was removed to the watch-house. There was a deep wound under his left breast; by him was his bloody sword, yet it was generally supposed at that time, that he had been killed in some house and laid there afterwards. It was also said, that a stranger's hat, with a bunch of ribbons in it, was found by his side; but notwithstanding these indicia, and the earnest exertions of his friends and relatives, the assassins could never be discovered.

GOING TO LODGE.

A boy went into a store the other morning, limping and seemed to be broke up generally. The proprietor asked him if he wouldn't sit down, and he said he couldn't very well, as his back was lame. He seemed discouraged, and the proprietor asked him what was the matter. "Well," said he, "there is no encouragement for a boy to have any fun nowadays. If a boy tries to play an innocent joke he is kicked all over the house. You see my old man is no Spring chicken, and though his eyes are not what they used to be, yet he can see a pretty girl further than I can. The other day I wrote a note in a fine hand, and addressed it to him, asking him to be on a certain corner at half past seven on Saturday evening and signed the name of Daisy to it. At supper time pa was all shaved up, and his hair plastered over a bald spot and he got on some clean cuffs, and he said he was going to Lodge to initiate some candidates, and he might not be in till late. He didn't eat much supper, and hurried off. I winked at ma, but didn't say anything.

"At half past seven I went down town, and he was standing there by the post-office corner, in a dark place. I went by him, and said, 'Hello, pa, what are you doing there?' He said he was waiting for a man. I went down street, and pretty soon I went up to the other corner, and he was standing there. You see, he didn't know which corner Daisy was going to be on, and he had to cover the whole four corners. I asked him if he hadn't found his man yet, and he said no—the man was a little late.

I went up street and saw pa cross over by the drug store, and I could see a girl going by with a water-proof on but she skited along and pa looked kind of solemn, the way he does when I ask him for new clothes. I turned and came back, and he was standing there in the doorway, and I said, 'Pa, you will catch cold if you stand round waiting for your man; you go down to the Lodge and let me lay for the man.' Pa said, 'Never you mind, you go about your own business and I will attend to the man.' Well, when a boy's pa tells him to never mind, my experience is that the boy wants to get right away from there, and I went down the street.

I thought I would cross over and go up the other side, and see how long he would stay. There was a girl or two going ahead of me, and I could see a man hurrying across the street from the drug store to the other corner. It was pa, and as the girls went along and never looked he was mad and stepped into the doorway.

It was eight o'clock then, and pa was tired, and I felt sorry for him, and I asked him for a half-dollar to go to the theatre. I never knew him to shell out so quick. He gave me a dollar and I told him I would go and get it changed and bring him back the half-dollar, but he said I needn't mind the change. It was awful mean of a boy that had been treated well to play it on his pa that way, and I felt ashamed.

As I turned the corner and saw him standing there shivering, waiting for the man, my conscience began to trouble me, and I told a policeman to go and tell pa that Daisy had been suddenly taken sick and wouldn't be there that evening. Well, when I went home the joke was so good that I told ma about it—and she was mad; I guess that she was mad at me for treating pa that way. I heard pa come home about 11 o'clock, and ma was kind to him. She told him to warm his feet, cause they were like chunks of ice. Then she asked him how many they initiated in the Lodge, and he said six; and then she asked him if they initiated Daisy in the Lodge, and then she began to cry.

"In the morning pa took me into the basement and gave me the hardest talking to that I ever had—with a bed slat. He said he knew that I wrote that note all the time, and he thought he would pretend that he was looking for Daisy just to fool me. But what did he give me that dollar for? Ma and pa don't seem to call each other pet names any more, and as for me they both look at me as though I was a hard citizen. I am going to make a second Jesse James, they think. There is no encouragement for a boy here." And the youth limped out to separate a couple of dogs that were fighting.

* * *

A patriotic purpose: A solemn-looking son of Erin, who had been hanging about the ticket office of a railroad company apparently without any purpose, was tackled by the facetious clerk. "What's your name pappy?" "Terence Rooney, at your service." "Got any baggage, Terence?" "Yes, sir; a bottle of whisky and a bundle of shillelahs." "Where are you going?" "Going West to start an Oirish republic." The clerk withdrew.

"You mustn't touch the top of the baby's head," said a mother to her little four-year old; "she has a soft spot there that is very tender."

The youngster gazed at it curiously for a moment, and then asked:

"Do all the babies have soft spots on their heads?"

"Yes."

"Did papa have a soft spot on the top of his head when he was a baby?"

"Yes," replied the mother, with a sigh, "and he has got it yet."

And the old man who had overheard the conversation from an adjoining room, sang out:

"Yes, indeed he has, my dear boy, or he would be a single man to-day."

WISE WORDS.

Courage our greatest failing does supply.

Rather be beaten in right than succeed in wrong.

None have less praise than those who hunt for it.

Duties fulfilled are always pleasures to the memory.

Perseverance is the best school for many virtues.

With good men religion will be the first consideration.

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.

Good, the more communicated, more abundant grows.

The secret of felicity is a judicious interruption of routine.

For the noblest man that lives there still remains a conflict.

A judicious silence is better than truth spoken without charity.

Pride has two seasons—a forward spring and an early fall.

Women is the nervous part of humanity; man the muscular.

Care for what you say, or what you say will make your care.

Fortune has rarely condescended to be the companion of genius.

Speaking the truth is like writing fair, and comes only by practice.

We should believe in works; words are sold for nothing everywhere.

Next to love, sympathy is the divinest passion of the human heart.

He who can take advice is sometimes superior to him who gives it.

The seeds of our punishment are sown at the same time we commit sin.

We have little pity for others until we are in a situation to claim it ourselves.

Truth is so related and colored that no department of her realm is isolated.

He that would have perfection of pleasure must be moderate in the use of it.

The love of glory can only create a hero; the contempt of it creates a wise man.

Brain is the impelling force of the world, and thought is the symbol of progress.

A noble part of every true life is to learn to undo what has been wrongly done.

Christianity is not so much the advent of a better doctrine as of a better character.

Human things must be known to be loved, but divine things be loved to be known.

Are not flowers the stars of the earth, and are not stars the flowers of heaven?

Fortune does not change men; it only unmasks them and shows their true character.

Let him who regrets the loss of time make proper use of that which is to come in the future.

We never find people ungrateful as long as they are in a condition to render them services.

When you have occasion to utter a rebuke, let your words be soft and your arguments hard.

The people may be made to follow a line of action, but they may not be made to understand it.

It is no honor to profit merely to appear in the arena. The wreath is on those who contend.

We should look at the lives of all as at a mirror, and take from others an example for ourselves.

Great ideas travel slowly and for a time noiselessly, as the gods whose feet were shod with wool.

There are many men whose tongues might govern multitudes if they could govern their tongues.

He who is not in any particular office has nothing to do with plans for the administration of its duties.

There is a fellowship among the virtues by which one great, generous passion stimulates another.

The more an idea is developed, the more concise becomes its expression; the more a tree is pruned the better its fruit.

It is only necessary to grow old to become more indulgent. I see no fault committed that I have not committed myself.

We should do by our cunning as we do by our courage—always have it ready to defend ourselves. Never to offend others.

Said cinicle, ungallant Diderot: "Women swallow at one mouthful the lie that flatters, and drink drop by drop the truth that is bitter."

He is a good man, people say thoughtlessly. They would be more chary of such praise if they reflected they could bestow none higher.

There are many men who appear to be struggling against poverty, and yet are happy; but yet more, who although abounding in wealth, are miserable.

Choose for your friend him that is wise and good, and secret and just, ingenious and honest, and those things which have a latitude; use your own liberty.

The Pythagoreans make good to be certain and finite; and evil infinite and uncertain. There are a thousand ways to miss the white; there is only way to hit it.

Men of great purity are often unfortunate in the management of public business because they are apt to go out of the common road by the quickness of their imagination.

The Constitutionalist.

PATRIOTISM.

Nothing ranks higher as a public virtue than patriotism, which means the love of country.

To love is to be faithful under all circumstances, therefore, patriotism enjoins devotion to and the zealous serving of country, not a mere section, but the whole, not for selfish personal gain, but for the welfare of all classes of people.

That constitutes a patriot, such as were those who braved the storm of battle to achieve Independence, and strove diligently in council to rear the fabric of Constitutional Government.

Since then our country has been blessed with patriotic statesmen and defenders, and many justly entitled to that most worthy designation are citizens of the Republic to-day.

Call them to the front?

To place the management of public affairs in the hands of such, and such only, is an imperative duty.

Men may honestly differ as to public measures and belong to opposite political parties, yet be equally patriotic.

Professing to be a patriot, and at the same time plying the trade of a venal politician, is where deception and damage comes in. The two characters are adverse. A true patriot forgets self for country, a professional politician discards country for self. They are as wide apart as the icy polar sea and the tropic gulf.

The broad land swarms with mercenary politicians and suffers in consequence.

Patriots are needed, statesmen of enlarged views and positive fidelity, sufficiently intelligent to discern what general prosperity demands, and brave enough to apply the remedy without fear, favor or procrastination.

PATRIOTISM is the word and want.

CHRISTMAS.

"As shadows, cast by cloud and sun,
Flit o'er the summer grass,
So, in thy sight, Almighty One!
Earth's generations pass.

And while the years, an endless host,
Come pressing swiftly on,
The brightest names that earth can boast
Just glisten, and are gone.

Yet doth the Star of Bethlehem shed
A lustre pure and sweet;
And still it leads, as once it led,
To the Messiah's feet.

Oh Father! may that holy Star
Grow every year more bright,
And send its glorious beams afar
To fill the world with light."

This world is beautiful. Its forest-caped mountains and fruit bearing vales, mighty stretch of sparkling water and flowering plain, its roaring cataracts and deep-toned music of the sea, enraptured mortal sight and sense, but dearer yet are life's happy days.

Life, with all its drear vicissitudes and bitter tears, has happy days, periods of invigorating mental sunshine, when even the darkness of human thought melts away into the brightness of bliss.

Christmas is such a day.

Commemorating the happiest event that ever befell mankind, it remains a world-wide and gladly greeted almoner of good cheer.

Its memories are precious, and like seed cast over the inundated soil of the Orient, return rich annual harvests:—

"White as the gleam of a receding sail,
White as a cloud that floats and flits in air,
White as the whitest lily on a stream,
These tender memories are
A fairy-tale of some enchanted land,
We know not where; beautiful
As a dream within a dream."

Who cannot joyously remember the Christmas days of years long passed, and who does not hail with delight the one now near at hand?

"The sky may not always be bright,
The sea not always calm,
Nor breezes bring an argosy
Of spices or of balm.
'Tis time enough to weep and mourn
When sorrow has its day:
And you'll agree 'tis well to be Right merry while we may.
Along the shores of life the tides
Have ceaseless ebb and flow;
And through the year the seasons have
Their time to come and go.
Then let us make the best of life,
And if not always gay
Or full of glee, why shouldn't we
Be merry while we may!"

To all we sincerely extend the salutation of MERRY CHRISTMAS.

A portion of the correspondence of President Garfield with Senator Dorsey at the time of the latter's election in 1880 has been published, which affords specific proof of the warm cordiality which existed between them and led them into the most confidential intercourse. These letters defeat the attempts which have been made to refute the statements made in Dorsey's recent Star-route card on the ground that his persistent association of Garfield with himself was impudent and unwarranted. It is plain that Garfield sought and solicited his counsel and help.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Georgia are to hold a convention in Atlanta on Wednesday, Jan. 10, to organize into a State body. The call says: "The union has auxiliaries all over the country, and is gaining in interest, in numbers, and in importance every day. Its influence is being felt in every direction, and a reform is begun which, with God's continued help and blessing, will result in great good, if not in the complete downfall of the national sin of intemperance."

Ex-Senator Randolph is quoted as saying: "I don't claim to be a prophet, but there are things I think I can foresee, and let me tell you 'that' Joe McDonald of Indiana is going to be our next President. There is such an uprising in his favor among the Democrats East as well as West that unless something occurs to very much change the aspect of affairs he will get the nomination, and the man who gets the Democratic nomination will be President."

It seems to be the prevailing opinion throughout the State that Hon. John R. McPherson will be his own successor to the United States Senatorship upon the convening of the next Legislature. This appointment would be a deserved one. Mr. McPherson has made an able representative and done much toward securing Democratic success in the State by the exertion of his influence to that end.

The Mexican Senate has ratified the treaty of commerce, navigation and amity concluded between Mexico and Germany last week.

SHERIFF FORSYTH'S BONDS.

A New York paper yesterday morning, contained a sensational article claiming that by the failure of Sheriff Forsyth to file his bond each year as the law technically reads, "The County is without a Sheriff, and all acts of that official since such failure are null and void." We understand that Mr. Forsyth was advised that it was unnecessary for him to file any bond in addition to the one given when he assumed the duties of the office; that such bond would cover his term and no other was necessary. This ruling having been questioned, the Sheriff at once filed a bond and the law in its broadest construction has been thus executed. Any claim to the effect that sales by the Sheriff or other acts are illegal will be determined by the Chancellor or Court and not by newspaper reporters.

Formerly in New Jersey, Sheriffs were elected for one year only, and the statute required yearly, the filing of a new bond. The statute was changed, giving the occupant of that office a tenure of three years, but requiring an interval of the same duration before he can again become a candidate for re-election. After the revision, by an act passed March 15, 1876 it was enacted, that the Sheriffs thereafter elected should file a bond with a certain number of securities conditioned in a certain sum for the faithful performance of his duties during his term of office. This was done by Mr. Forsyth when he entered into the performance of the duties of this office. He was afterwards advised by his counsel learned in the law, that he had satisfied all the requirements of the statute. This strange charge of negligence, which, if true, could only result to his personal injury, no acquaintance of Sheriff Forsyth will believe. It is sufficient for us to know that the whole matter will at once come before the Hon. Bennett Van Syckle, and that his decision upon the questions raised thereon will foreshadow the decision of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey.

There is a State law that was passed in 1876, which makes it a misdemeanor, punishable to the extent of $1,000 fine and one year imprisonment, for any person who shall "playfully or wantonly point or discharge a gun, pistol or other fire-arms at any person."

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company have issued a permanent order forbidding the stopping of Sunday trains at Ocean Grove. This order is in accordance with all the engagements for Sunday seclusion made by the Ocean Grove Association and railroad companies, as the place has grown.

The House on Saturday refused to make an appropriation for the "fast mail" service, and the "newspaper train," as it has been called, will be taken off. The argument was that the service was purely for the benefit of New York and Philadelphia newspapers, and that if they wanted such a special train they ought to pay for it.

The pupils of the Morristown public school are being drilled, so that in case of fire the school house can be emptied in a very short time without confusion. At a trial before the Mayor and Fire Committee, the children passed out of the building, from the large hall, in three minutes, and from their class rooms in a minute and a half.

Apples are very scarce and high. Choice Newton Pippins sell for $20 per barrel and other popular varieties are proportionately steep in price. But people will have apples, no matter what they cost and it is money well spent, for a few apples eaten at "the golden time"—before breakfast, will keep a person healthy and save many a doctor's bill. The crop in New York was a failure, hence the high figures now quoted.

DEATHS.

CARNEY.—In North Plainfield, Dec. 18th, of convulsions, Addie, daughter of John H. and Eliza J. Carney, aged 8 months.

TO LITTLE ADDIE IN HEAVEN.

Thou hast left us, darling Addie,
Gone to thine eternal rest;
And we fancy we can see thee
Sleeping on our Saviour's breast.

Yes, thou'st left us, precious darling—
Left us for a brighter home,
Where pain or cares can ne'er betide thee,
And where sorrows never come.

We know that God but loaned thee to us,
Still, we would have kept thee here;
Every day thou seemed more cunning,
And to our hearts became more dear.

Why, God called thee home so early,
Is to us a mystery:
Did He fear thou we'rt our idol?
Instead of Him, we'd worship thee!

While our hearts are crushed and bleeding,
We'll bow and kiss the chastening rod.
Notwithstanding, it is hard for us
To say: "Thy will be done, oh God."

Though here on earth no more we'll see thee
We know thou'rt only "gone before;"
And this, we know, a little angel
Awaits us on the Heavenly shore.

—Your sympathizing friend, M. J. S.

The birthday of Mr. William Grogan of this city, was celebrated in a most joyous manner, last Tuesday evening, at his residence where a number of his friends gathered to wish him "many happy returns." That their expressions were sincere, is shown by the handsome gifts with which he was presented.

Howorth's Hibernica.

The Manchester, N. H. Mirror, of Sept. 14, 1881, says:—"Howorth's Double Show was presented in the Opera House last evening to a greatly pleased audience that was so large in number that almost every available sitting was taken. Howorth's Hibernica has visited this city before, consequently the amusement-going people of Manchester are familiar with its characteristics, but the programme on past visits has never been so good as at the present time. In addition to the interesting comedy features of the entertainment, which elicited repeated encores, an exceedingly fine panorama of scenes in Ireland was presented, with a few words of explanation about each picture. The programme concluded with four living Allegorical Tableaux representing the past, present and future of Ireland."

This company will give one of its entertainments at Van Deventer Hall, to-morrow evening.

Killed by the Cars.

On Tuesday afternoon last, Edward Titus, aged 18, of Philipsburg, a brakeman on the local freight to New York, was terribly mangled by the cars at this station. The unfortunate man was engaged in coupling the cars when his foot became wedged in between the rail and guard of the switch at the west end of the freight house. He was unable to extricate himself, and the moving cars running over his leg cut it off at the ankle and literally stripped the flesh from the limb below the hip. The victim was made as comfortable as possible in the freight house, and Dr. Fritz the railroad surgeon at this place, was sent for. Everything was done to relieve the suffering man, but his life was despaired of from the first. There was not enough of the leg left to heal—indeed so far up had the flesh been torn away that the bowels protruded from the lower part of the groin. Upon the arrival of Dr. Pettit, the surgeon in chief of the C. R. R., who was telephoned from Elizabeth, the victim was removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where the attendance of Dr. Chas. Hart was also summoned. Conductor Parker Titus of the freight train, the brother of the sufferer, was with him through the night and next day, as was also his mother and another brother. He was kept from pain and conscious, but did not rally from the terrible shock.—The unfortunate young man died during Wednesday night.

Burglars in Dunellen.

Last Saturday morning several residences in Dunellen were entered by thieves and in some instances plunder obtained by the bold marauders. So far as learned the residences of the following were entered or attempts made to enter: Postmaster C. S. Pope, Samuel D. Marlowe, Mrs. Ana Crafts, Wm. Craig, Geo. Thomas, Gray & Coles. Indications were apparent in the morning where attempts had been made to enter other houses. Mr. Pope was awakened about 4 o'clock in the morning by the presence of a short, slim man, with a slouch hat over his eyes, and the lower part of his face covered by a mask, standing at the bed side, examining his clothing which hung on a chair beside his bed. As he turned over toward the burglar, the latter's eye caught his, and with one swoop he gathered the clothing in his arms and started down stairs, with Mr. Pope close at his heels shouting for him to "drop them clothes." The thief had made his arrangements for an easy exit, both the rear and side doors being open. Out of the back door he darted and disappeared in the darkness. Mr. Pope followed to the door and then went back and dressed. His pants which the thief took, were found a few rods away, in front of Boice's Grocery Store, despoiled of their contents, about $90 in money and watch and chain. If Charley had not his revolver under lock and key he says he could easily have brought down the burglar.

At Mr. Marlowe's residence, that gentleman was awakened by the noise made by the thieves in a room below him. As they started to flee upon hearing him moving he accelerated their steps by shouting lustily at them through a speaking tube. Outside the house were found the next morning, his wife's best shawl which the thief or thieves had dropped in their flight.

At Mrs. Crafts they secured a shawl, and were not heard by the family in their depredations. Entrance was effected into Mr. Craig's house through a lower widow. Mr. C's clothing was ransacked, but nothing of great value obtained. His watch was beneath his pillow and not disturbed.

At Mr. Thomas' residence the thieves made their biggest haul. Without awakening any of the family, the sleeping room of Mr. Thomas was entered and his clothing ransacked. They succeeded in getting his valuable gold watch and chain and some $9 in money. The watch and chain were valued at $200.

Admission to the dwellings in other instances were obtained by turning the key in the lock from the outside with a pair of pinchers.

About 12 o'clock the night previous, the railroad watchman, Mr. C. Williams, discovered a burning sheaf of straw beside the blacksmith shop of Samuel Van Arsdale, which he extinguished with difficulty. He saw a man run away from the building as he approached the fire.

It is reported that the conductor of a coal train saw two men with bundles riding on his train when it arrived at the Communipaw ferry that morning, who became very intimate while crossing the ferry.

The License Ordinance.

One of the last acts of the outgoing Council was to pass an ordinance that is not only unreasonable in some of its provisions, but unjust to a number of citizens who are expected to fulfill its requirements. We allude to the amended License Ordinance, which has been so changed by the License Committee as to make it, in some cases, impossible for a person applying for a license to keep an inn or tavern or saloon, to comply with its provisions. The old ordinance was good enough in its requirements. It demanded that the application for a license should be signed by at least ten reputable Freeholders, residing in the city, three of whom should live within one thousand feet of the place where the applicant desired to do business. Seven of these signers could reside in any part of the city. The ordinance as amended provides that the ten signers shall reside in the same ward where the application comes from. Last year there were twelve applicants for license to keep hotels and saloons granted such privileges. Three of these were in the 1st Ward and nine in the Fourth Ward. The Second and Third Wards have no hotels or saloons. These applications were signed by reputable Freeholders from all parts of the city as the law directed. Under the provisions of the amended ordinance it may be an easy matter for some applicants to procure all their signers in the Ward where they propose to do business, but in other instances it would be an impossibility, especially in the Fourth Ward, where with nine applications it would require the names of ninety Freeholders as signers. Persons residing out of the Ward who desired to sign the application of a friend, would be debarred from so doing. One effect will be to drive saloons out of one Ward into another where signers could be secured, and thus scatter the traffic where it would not be under the surveillance of the police as it now is. The object of the amended ordinance seems to be only to cause the applicants for license trouble and annoyance, while the traffic will not be abated or controlled as easily as heretofore. Another point in the amended ordinance is to be criticised. That is the striking out of the word "knowingly" from the section which provides a penalty for the selling of liquor illegally. Hereafter if a bartender sells liquor to a minor without the knowledge of the proprietor of an inn or saloon, and against said proprietor's express commands to the contrary, the framers of the ordinance propose that there shall be no excuse for fining the proprietor and imprisoning him, when every one knows that no man can be punished criminally for an offense that another commits. Why then was the amendment made? It seems as though it is done to annoy and distress the party who has complied with all other requirements of the law and is ignorant of the sale of his agents. The matter of framing a License Ordinance that would regulate the sale of liquor in a judicious and satisfactory manner, has been the labor of previous Councils, and it was thought the one in force the past year and more, could not be bettered. It provides for a high license fee, and contains stringent enactments. Under its provisions the liquor traffic in the city has been satisfactorily controlled and kept within bounds. The amended ordinance is oppressive in its enactments and the obnoxious sections should be repealed by the new Council at their first meeting.

An Event.

The Madison Square Theatre will shortly present in this city its great metropolitan successes "Hazel Kirke" and "Esmeralda." The former play has been given over 1000 times and the latter has run for a whole year at the theatre. We are authorized to state that the company soon to appear comes under the direct auspices of the Madison Square Theatre and brings special scenery for each act. Their appearance will be an undoubted dramatic event as they produce the two great plays of the year. Oh, for an Opera House!

A Grand Fair.

Commencing Monday next, continuing throughout the week and including New Year's day, the ladies of St. Mary's R. C. church will hold a Fair in St. Mary's Hall that is intended to be especially attractive and unusually successful. A large quantity of handsome articles of use, ornament and adornment have been contributed, besides a beautiful carriage robe to be voted to the most popular coach or hackman, a gold-badge and a fine hat for the most admired fire companies, and a watch to be contested for by the St. Mary's Temperance Society and the Ancient Order of Hibernians. There will also be a number of particularly attractive articles that will be sold by chances. Tickets good during the entire week are for sale at 75 cents each.

All Are Welcome.

Undoubtedly among the most handsomely furnished, convenient and attractive rooms in the State for the use of the public, are those of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, in Chautauqua Building, at the corner of Park and North avenues. Recently decorated with perfect taste, the sidewalls and ceilings are papered in bright colors and gilt and the floors covered with soft carpet, while comfortable chairs scattered around the rooms welcome all to spend a quiet hour in the perusal of a variety of books, and periodicals of the day, or the exciting pleasure of entertaining games. Mr. H. O. Williams, the Secretary of the Association, is untiring in his labors to promote the desires of those who visit the rooms, and Mr. J. H. Manning, the Librarian, is most courteous in his attention to all. The young men of Plainfield—and also the elderly—find in these rooms during the long evenings of the Winter, the quiet enjoyment and interesting pastimes that are so pleasing.

On New-Year's day, the ladies of the Auxiliary will receive calls in the rooms and cordially invite all who may wish to come in. None need feel strange or backward, as a kind welcome will be extended to one the same as to another.

Council Proceedings.

Monday Evening, Dec. 18th.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Rushmore and Messrs Depew, Gardner, Ginna, Kaufman, Lindsley, Livingston, Newhall, J. Simpson, R. Simpson and Thompson—11.

Absent—none.

Minutes of the regular meeting of the 4th inst., read and approved.

PRESENTATION OF COMMUNICATIONS AND PETITIONS.

By Mr. Ginna the following:

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—

I have the honor to return the Communication of the Law and Ordinance Committee of the City of Plainfield referred to me at your last meeting, with the following opinion:

The Board of Freeholders are not a law making body nor can their action relieve Collectors of Cities, Townships or Counties from the performance of their duties as required by law.

The 834 Section of the General tax act, makes all taxes raised, liable in the first instant to the payment of the State and County quota of taxes.

This was decided in the Supreme Court in the case of

The board of Water Commissioners of Rahway vs. Robert C. Brewster, Treasurer of Rahway. } XIII Vroom pg. 125

This board cannot relieve Plainfield from complying with the law as it has been enacted, which requires the payment to the County until the State and County quota is paid of all taxes levied and collected in the City of Plainfield.

Dec. 7th, 1882.

Respectfully
J. Aug. Fay, Jr.,
County Attorney.

I hereby certify the above to be a true copy of a certain opinion of J. A. Fay, Jr., County Attorney, as filed with the papers of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

James Vick.

From the appearance of Vick's Floral Guide, which is on our desk, we should judge that the young Vicks are "chips of the old block," as the Floral Guide with its lithographed cover is handsome enough for the parlor table. It is printed on the best of paper, has three colored plates of Flowers and Vegetables, and full of useful information. Those who send 10 cents for it cannot be disappointed, as the plates alone are worth the amount. Address, as in past years, James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The record of vital statistics for Westfield Township during the month of November last, show five births and four deaths.

The Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church of our town, arrived home on Tuesday after an absence of two weeks.

Asa G. Trask and family, residing on Dudley avenue, have gone to Brooklyn for the winter. They expect to return early in the spring.

Addison S. Moffett who has been seriously sick with Typhoid Pneumonia for the past two weeks is slowly recovering under the medical attendance of Dr. Joseph B. Harrison.

Wallace Kayler has rented a portion of formerly the Ferris and Hanson building, corner of North and Central avenues, for the purpose of a carpenter and general jobbing shop.

Arthur Clark's team of mules attached to a wagon and hay rigging, while the driver stopped at Darby's store in Cranford, left for home and were found by Samuel Kelsey, along the road, and returned to the owner.

Have you a friend at a distance whom you would like to keep well informed in Plainfield matters? If so, send the Constitutionalist as a Christmas or New Year's present. We will mail it to any address one year for $2.00.

Christopher Snyder, brother-in-Law of Postmaster Decker, arrived with his family on Wednesday last from his home in Jerseyville, Illinois. He is stopping at Mr. Decker's. The friends of Chris. were glad to greet him.

Mr. James M. French in making the excavation for the cellar of his new house on the Jerusalem road near the site of the old homestead, dug up what seemed to be an old headstone with the date 1748, and the letters A: W. cut upon it.

On Friday last the death occurred of Mrs Anna Morris, wife of Dr. James Morris, from that dread disease consumption. Her funeral took place on Sunday from their family residence on Mountain road. Interment at Fairview Cemetery.

The entertainment given in Lyceum building on last Tuesday evening, for the benefit of Mr. Hester Mulford who is an invalid, was largely attended by her friends and relatives from Elizabeth and Newark. The proceeds will net about thirty dollars to Mr. Mulford.

On Friday night or early Saturday, the grocery store of Matthew Clark, corner of Broad street and North avenue, was broken into and robbed by a thief or thieves of a lot of canned goods, about five dollars in change from the money drawer and numerous other articles to the value of about fifty dollars. They gained an entrance by getting through a back shed window and then cutting and bursting out a panel of the door and removing the cross bar which Mr. Clark supposed perfectly secure.

The Westfield Temperance Prohibition Union, of which Justice Pearsall is President, have opened a Free Reading Room in the Justice's office on Broad street. It is open every afternoon from two until six o'clock p. m., and on Monday and Wednesday evenings and a regular Temperance meeting on Saturday evening of each week. The Union ask for the contribution of newspapers and periodicals by our citizens, for the use of the Union at their rooms.

On last Saturday night, our baker, Mr. John Darsh, upon retiring for the night, opened the doors of a base-burner heater with the damper turned off in the pipe. He awoke about four o'clock in the morning, nearly exhausted with the quantity of coal gas that had escaped into the room. His wife was similarly effected and did not recover until Monday noon. It is a warning to persons upon retiring to so arrange the dampers in their coal stoves, that the escaping gas will pass up the chimney instead of into the sleeping apartments.

Collector Connoly has been the past week at the Town Rooms for the purpose of receiving taxes for the year 1882. Dec. 19th inst. was the last day for payment before they are returned to a Justice of the Peace for collection. The amount of duplicates in Westfield Township for 1882 is over $15,000. Over $10,000 of the taxes had been settled before they were returned to the Justice. Mr. Connoly sent, on Tuesday last, a check to County Collector Sheridan, for the full payment of all State, County and State School taxes for the year 1882. Westfield's collector was the first one to pay in 1881. Who has beat him this year?

The Annual Communication of Atlas Lodge, No. 125 of F. and A. M., was held at their Lodge room over Academy Hall on Monday evening the 18th inst. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year, and installed: Charles Haberly, W. M.; A. Z. Chambers, S. W.; Thomas H. Love, J. W.; Lewis C. Thiese, Treasurer; Wm. W. Gilby, Secretary; A. K. Gale, S. D.; James B. Lambert, J. D.; H. C. Vandeboof, S. M. C.; Linus Hetfield, J. M. C.; Addison S. Clark, Chaplain; Erastus M. Doibler, Tyler. Thos. H. Love was elected trustee for three years. There was a very full attendance of members of the Lodge and a number of visiting members from Jerusalem Lodge of Plainfield.

A fire broke out on Friday noon last, in the blacksmith shop attached to John S. Irving's steam mill. An alarm was sounded by the blowing of the steam whistle. Several members of the Bucket and Engine Co., with the assistant foreman, J. H. Manning, were the first to arrive at the fire and succeeded in putting it out. But very little damage was done. Foreman Barcalow of Westfield Hook and Ladder was on hand. The "Little Giant," of the Hook and Ladder Co., was brought to the building, too late to be of any service but for the prompt action of our firemen we no doubt would have had to record a very serious fire, as the mill part was stored with a considerable of dry material which would have soon put the fire beyond control of our fire Companies.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is now unlawful to take black bass from the waters of this state.

A good rabbit hound in Burlington county will sell for fifty dollars.—Exchange.

Here is a chance for some of our Plainfielders to get rid of their good (?) hound dogs.

The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society are negotiating for the purchase of a large number of quail in anticipation of turning them loose in certain localities next Spring.

A respite for the rabbits and quail from the gunner's is approaching. The season for killing them ends with the last day of December. Gunners will bear this in mind and not lay themselves amenable to the law.

HE QUITS THE DRUG BUSINESS.

"Well, what are you loafing around here for," says the grocery man to the bad boy one morning this week. "It is after nine o'clock, and I should think you would want to be down to the drug store. How do you know but there will be somebody dying for a dose of pills?"

"O, darn the drug store. I have got sick of that business, and I have dissolved with the drugger. I have resigned. The policy of the store did not meet with my approval, and I have stepped out and am waiting for them to come and tender me a better position at an increased salary," said the boy, as he threw a cigar stub into a barrel of prunes and lit a fresh one.

"Resigned, eh?" said the grocery man, as he fished out the cigar stub and charged the boy's father with two pounds of prunes. "Didn't you and the boss agree?"

"Not exactly. I gave an old lady some gin when she asked for camphor and water, and she made a show of herself. I thought I would fool her, but she knew mighty well what it was and she drank about half a pint of gin, and got to tipping over bottles and kegs of paint, and when the drug man came in with his wife, the old woman threw her arms around his neck and called him her darling, and when he pushed her away and told her she was drunk, she picked up a bottle of citrate of magnesia and pointed it at him, and the cork came out like a pistol, and he thought he was shot, and his wife fainted away, and the police came and took the old gin refrigerator away, and then the drug man told me to face the door, and when I wasn't looking he kicked me four times, and I landed in the street, and he said if I ever came in sight of the store again he would kill me dead. That is the way I resigned. I tell you, they will send for me again. They never can run that store without me."

"I guess they will worry along without you," said the grocery man. "How does your pa take your being fired out? I should think it would break him all up."

"O, I think pa rather likes it. At first he thought he had a soft snap with me in the drug store, cause he has got to drinking again like a fish, and he has gone back on the church entirely, but after I had put a few things in his brandy he concluded it was cheaper to buy it, and he is now patronizing a barrel house down by the river. One day I put some castile soap in a drink of brandy, and pa leaned over the back fence more than an hour, with his finger down his throat. The man that collects the ashes from the alley asked pa if he had lost anything, and pa said he was only 'sugaring off.' I don't know what that is. When pa felt better he came in, and wanted a little whiskey to take the taste out of his mouth, and I gave him some, with about a teaspoonful of pulverized alum in it. Well, sir, you'd a died. Pa's mouth and throat was so puckered up that he couldn't talk. I don't think that drugman will make anything by firing me out, because I shall turn all the trade that I control to another store. Why, sir, some times there were eight and nine girls in the store all to wunst, on account of my being there. They come to have me put extracts on their handkerchiefs, and to eat gum drops. He will lose all that trade now. My girl that went back on me for the telegraph messenger boy, she came with the rest of the girls, but she found that I could be as tawty as a clock. I got even with her though. I pretended I wasn't mad, and when she wanted me to put some perfumery on her handkerchief I said all right, and I put on a little geranium and white rose, and then I got some tincture of assafety and sprinkled it on her dress and cloak when she went out. That is about the worst smelling stuff that ever was, and I was glad when she went out and met the telegraph boy on the corner. They went off together, but he came back pretty soon, about the homesickest boy you ever saw, and he told my chum he would never go with that girl again because she smelled like spoiled oysters or sewer gas. Her folks noticed it, and made her go and soak herself, and her brother told my chum it didn't do any good, she smelled just like a glue factory, and my chum, the darn fool, told her brother that it was me who perfumed her, and he hit me in the eye with a frozen fish down by the fish store, and that's what makes my eye black, but I know how to cure a black eye. I have not been in a drug store eight days and not know how to cure a black eye. And I guess I learned that girl not to go back on a boy 'cause he smells like a goat."

"Well, what was it about your leaving the wrong medicine at houses? The policeman in this ward told me you came pretty near killing several people by leaving the wrong medicine."

"The way of it was this. There was about a dozen different kinds of medicine to leave at different places, and I was in a hurry to go to the roller skating rink, so I got my chum to help me, and we just took the numbers of the houses, and when we rung the bell we would hand out the first package we come to, and I understand there was a good deal of complaint. One old maid, who ordered powder for her face, her ticket drew some worm lozengers, and she kicked awfully, and a widder woman, who was going to be married, ordered a celluloid comb and brush, and she got a nursing bottle with a rubber nozzle, and a teething ring, and she made quite a fuss, but the woman who was weaning her baby, and wanted the nursing bottle, she got the comb and brush and some blue pills, and she never made any fuss at all. It makes a great deal of difference, I notice, whether a person gets a better thing than they ordered or not. But the drug business is too lively for me. I have got to have a quiet place, and I guess I will be a cash boy in a store. Pa says he thinks I was cut out for a bunko steerer, and I may look for that kind of a job. Pa he is a terror since he got to drinking again. He came home the other day, when the minister was calling on ma, and just cause the minister was sitting on the sofa with ma, and had his hand on her shoulder, where she said the pain was when the rheumatiz came on, pa was mad, and told the minister he would kick his liver clear around on the other side if he caught him there again, and ma felt awful about it. After the minister had gone away, ma told pa he had got no feeling at all, and pa said he had got enough feeling for one family, and he didn't want no sky-sharp to help him. He said he could cure all the rheumatiz there was around his house, and then he went down town, and didn't get home till most breakfast time. Ma says she thinks I am responsible for pa's falling into bad ways again, and now I am going to cure him. You watch me, and see if I don't have pa in the church in less than a week, praying and singing, and going home with the choir singers, just as pious as ever. I am going to get a boy that writes a woman's hand to write to pa, and—but I must not give it away. But you just watch pa that's all. Well, I must go and saw some wood. It is coming down a good deal, from a drug clerk to sawing wood, but I will get on top yet, and don't you forget it."

DID HURT A LITTLE.

"Does the razor hurt you sir?" inquired a North Side barber of a writhing customer.

"You are sure it's a razor?" said the man.

"Oh, why, yes, certainly."

"I thought it was a hoe. It does very well for a hoe, but it is infernally dull for a razor."

LITERARY NOTES.

The Winter number of Ehrich's FASHION QUARTERLY is out, and a copy can be had for only fifteen cents. Within the compass of its ninety odd pages are illustrations of every kind and description of Christmas gifts; from the rattle of toy reins for the three-year-old infant, up to the gold-headed cane or dressing-gown for papa, or the long wished-for watch for mamma. Dolls and doll's furniture, tin toys, mechanical toys, telegraphic machines, bonbon boxes, velocipedes, fancy stationery, gorgeous plush-covered boxes, savings banks, musical apparatus, books of every kind—in short, the whole range of possibilities in the way of Christmas presents, is covered; and parents' purses and children's fancies can alike be suited, however fastidious the one or attenuated the other. Indeed, we believe it safe to say that such a mass of useful information, for so small a price, was never issued from the press before. The FASHION QUARTERLY is published by Messrs. Ehrich Bros., of New York, at 50 cents a year, or 15 cents a copy.

Under the editorial charge of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for January commences the New Year brilliantly. It is a holiday number and affords delightful, edifying reading. The first of a series of articles on "Religious Denominations in the United States" treats of "Methodism: Its Character and Its Attainments," by Rev. Dr. Curry, D. D. The editor has an interesting article, "Who was Thomas Guard?" Paul Pastnor shows "What the Monks Did for Early English Literature"; other contributions are from the pens of Mrs. Jane G. Austin, O. M. Birrell, G. MacDonald, LL. D., Edwin de Leon, etc., etc., and consist of admirably written stories, sketches, essays, poems, etc. In the Home Pulpit is a discourse by Dr. Talmage, "The Popular Christ." Those interesting features are continued—"Personal Notes and Comments," "Editorial Comments," etc, and there is a large, instructive miscellany. Price $3 a year; single copy, 25 cents, postpaid. Address, MRS. FRANK LESLIE, publisher, 53, 55 & 57 Park Place, New York.

A very good thing to have in every home, by everybody, old and young, in the country or village, and in cities as well. A marvel of condensed information, both useful and trustworthy, with a thousand or more engravings, illustrating labor-saving methods and devices in the field, in the garden and in the household, animals, plants, etc., with many large beautiful pictures; illustrated stories for and instructive talks with boys and girls; plans of houses, barns and out-buildings, with specifications. All these, and much more, will be found in the 42d volume of the American Agriculturist, now beginning, and at less cost than anywhere else in the world. Its exposures of humbugs, a most valuable feature, is to be pushed with increased vigilance. To the previous staff of editors and contributors many additions are now made, including the best writers all over the country. In its prime, this journal enters its 42d volume, more vigorous than ever, with new writers, new artists, new dress, etc. Though prepared at larger expense than most $3 and $4 magazines, it is, owing to its immense circulation, supplied, postpaid, for $1.50 a year, and less to clubs—either English or German edition. Single numbers, 15 cents. One specimen, postpaid, 6 cents. A plate copy of Dupre's last great painting, "IN THE MEADOW," is presented to each yearly subscriber. Address Publishers of American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

POETRY.

THROUGH THE "HOLY DAYS."

Glad the light of Christmas comes,
Merry is the Christmas feast,
Through a thousand happy homes,
North and south and west and east;
Blithe the song the traveler sings,
Blithe the wish the reveler says—
Lifting hearts to happier things
Through the Christmas holidays.

Other dear desires were ours—
Few fulfilled and many lost,—
Though we catch, in rarer hours,
That which we have longed for most;
Life hath found a fairer measure,
When we tread forgotten ways,
In the sudden street of pleasure,
Through the Christmas holidays.

In the future we shall see
Much to promise and forget—
There are tendencies that be
Which we cannot fathom yet—
Still a song the traveler sings,
Still a toast the reveler says—
Trifling with familiar things
Through the Christmas holidays.

THE FAIRY GRANDMOTHER.

Madame Dupont, wrapped in a loose robe of some soft gray material, a faded cashmere shawl partly covering her, lay on the lounge before the bay window that formed almost the entire front of her tiny cottage. Her large black eyes, their dimness somewhat dimmed by her long sickness, dwelt with dreamy pleasure on the landscape spread before her.

It was a very commonplace landscape, such as can be seen in any country place on any summer day—only a broad field, white with daisies, among which two or three brown cows patiently sought for tender blades of grass, with one tall stout tree standing midway, solitary and alone, and a background of dense tangled brushwood. To careless eyes, scarce worth a careless glance; but to her's, so long shut out from sight of earth and sky, seemed most beautiful. The slender, white wrinkled hands folded upon her breast were yet too weak to hold even one of her beloved books, and the small feet yet lacked sufficient strength to sustain the frail body. But—thank, Heaven!—the cruel pain had gone, and in its stead had come a blissful rest.

All through the fickle months of spring, taking no heed whether they smiled or wept, she had never raised her weary head from the pillow.

And the snowdrops and crocuses and scillas and hyacinths and tulips had grown and budded and bloomed in her little garden, and she, who had hoped to watch them grow from the first green leaf to the perfect blossom, had only seen the few Viola had plucked and brought to her bedside, where, seen through a cloud of suffering, a shadow had fallen upon their beauty.

And now it was the heart of June, and the roses, gay in every shade of pink, climbed about the window, looked in and entreated her to come out. But no; she could not hope to walk again until the roses had faded and the lilies had begun to reign. And perhaps even this hope would not have been hers had it not been for the love and care and cheering words of Viola, the eldest daughter of the many daughters at the big farm house. Kate, the strong, rough, Irish servant-maid, was kind and faithful in her way; but her's was money service, and left to it alone, she might have died; but Viola served for love (she had loved the pretty old madame since first they met), and love brings faith hope and patience, and many other beautiful things.

For weeks the young girl came morn, noon and eve, to stay an hour each time, and her visits were the only gleams of brightness that lighted that darkened room. And many the wee loaf of whitest bread, and golden pat of butter, and drink of sweet rich milk, and fresh laid, pink tinted egg, she brought to tempt the languid appetite; and many the song she sang, soft and low, to woo for the sick woman the angel of sleep.

And yet not only were they neither kith nor kind, but she knew naught of Madame Dupont save that she had built the four-roomed cottage the preceeding spring, and had lived there since the last July in the humblest way.

There was a large family at the farm house, and much work to be done—hard, unlovely work, the very thought of which often made the young girl wake in the gray mourning from the pleasant dreams, clasp her hands to cry out, "Is this to be my life forever?" And had it not been for the glimpses for beauty she caught about her home—the far off river gleamed in the sunlight or moonlight, the orchard trees white with blossoms in spring, and laden with fruit in summer and autumn, the shady woods where countless shy wild flowers hid from the glare of the world, the songs of the happy birds, and the grand sunset behind the distant hills—she would have been heart-weary indeed. For she loved everything beautiful. And especially did she love music with all the tenderness of a creator, as madame discovered one day—the day they first saw each other, in fact, when Viola, coming on some errand to the cottage, stopped, entranced, on the threshold of the door to listen to a plantive melody in a minor key, feebly but beautifully played on the old fashioned upright piano.

"You love music?" said madame, turning slowly and confronting her.

"With all my heart," answered the girl, the vivid blush that was ever ready to appear flushing her sweet young face.

"You play?"

"A little—very little; but I have had no piano for three years—since my own mother died."

"Let me hear you."

"Oh, madame, I dare not try after you."

But the old lady rose and gently led her to the instrument. There were two or three keys entirely dumb, and the rest were not in perfect tune; but the spirit of music so guided the long slender fingers that they reproduced the minor melody madame had played so daintily enwrapped in bird like trills and rippling runs that she, in turn, stood entranced.

"After me, indeed!" she said, as the girl struck the last chord. "I had to learn, but you—it is a part of you. And you have no piano? Ah, that is sad. Could I give you mine, it should be yours. But it belonged to my dear husband, who died twenty years ago, and I could not bear to part with it. He was a Frenchman, and a professor of music, I was an American girl, and one of his pupils. When I married him I helped him teach others, and so came to be called 'madame.' We loved each other very much. But I shall be glad, my dear—very glad—to have you come here and play as often as you will."

"Could I call on you as often as I would," said the girl, with a bright smile, "I am afraid I should soon tire you. But I will come as often I can. And oh, madame"—suddenly kissing the soft wrinkled cheek—"I can not tell you how much I thank you."

But the "often" proved very seldom, for some of the summer boarders staid until the end of October; and the butter had to be churned, and the fruit canned, and the young sisters to be prepared each day for school, and the twin boys—nothing to speak of in point of years, but perfect Methuselahs in mischief—to be looked after from morning until night, and winter wardrobes to be made, and a thousand and one other things to be done.

And then madame fell sick, and all the time Viola could spare she spent at her bedside. "Time that had much better be spent at home," scolded her step-mother; "for there's a servant there, and one servant's enough to take care of two such houses as that, and their mistresses too, sick or well. I have no servant."

"You have me." Viola might have replied, "and no servant ever worked harder or for less wages;" but she set her lips firmly together, and said nothing. But she rose earlier than ever thereafter, that she might not leave undone the slightest of her tasks, and thus merit no reproach for the few hours each day she gave her dear old friend. And now madame was getting well, and, with the help of her strong servant maid, could go from room to room; but she was best satisfied to lie in the wee parlor on the lounge before the big window.

And here Viola made her appearance the day roses were beckoning, with a dish of luscious red strawberries smothered in cream; but in spite of the merry greeting there was a hint of a shadow on her bonny face that did not escape madame's keen black eyes.

"Tell me about it, my dear," she said said in her sweet, trembling voice.

Viola knelt beside her. "You must be a fairy, madame," she said; "for none but a fairy could have guessed that I was a little sorry to-day. And for such a trifling cause I'm ashamed to speak of it." But the old lady insisting with gentle persistence, she began: "It is a ball I would like to go to, but cannot. I have never been to a ball, and this one— You remember the young lady who boarded at our house last summer, with her father and sister—"

"And brother," suggested madame.

"And brother," repeated Viola, never lowering her frank blue eyes, but blushing from the tip of her round chin to the curls shading her fair brow. "Well, she and I were good friends then, but I never dreamed she would remember me after she went away, for he—she, I mean—is rich, and I am poor, and our ways in life lie very, very far apart. But she has not forgotten me. See, madame, here is an invitation to a ball to be given on the nineteenth anniversary of her birth at her aunt's house only a few miles away. And—and her brother signs it too. He writes a handsome hand, does he not, madame?"

"A strong handsome hand, my dear, and he is a handsome, manly fellow. I do not forget the messages he used to bring me from you, and deliver with such courtly grace. You must go to the ball."

"Oh, madame, it is impossible, I could not go if it were to be the simplest of parties, and it is to be a fancy dress. I have nothing to wear. You know the crops failed last year on account of the drought. But what folly for me to let so slight a thing distress me for a moment, when all at home have health and strength and you are fast getting well!"

"For which we should be—and no doubt we are—devoutly thankful," said the old lady, "and the more reason why you should go to the ball. You said just now I must be a fairy. I will prove my right to the title by being a fairy god-mother. You did not know that my name was Violet. Take the key, you will find under the clock on the mantel, and open the ottoman that stands yonder."

"Open the ottoman, madame?"

"Yes; it is simply a chest in disguise, and in it lies your ball dress."

The lid of the disguised chest was raised, a long box lifted out and opened. An exclamation of delight burst from Viola's lips. There lay a satin dress of creamy whiteness. It unfolded into a miracle of old-fashioned loveliness. Purple violets were scattered here and there upon the scant skirt, as though dropped from some careless hand, and the puffed sleeves and short waist were made of a wealth of amber-hued lace. And then came a large quaint fan of sandal wood and peacock feathers, a necklace of pearls, a high tortoise shell comb, and a pair of satin shoes with low flat heels and queer-pointed toes.

"But you never mean that I should wear these, madame?" said Viola.

"That I do, most surely," said madame, gayly, "I wore them, child, many years ago. And now another Violet needs them. There is a fate in it. And I, will put a sheel upon them: and—who knows?—they may help you win a true lover, as they did me."

'But the shoes, madame—they are too small, I'm sure.'

'Try them, my dear.'

Viola slipped one on. 'It binds across the instep,' said she.

'Take the scissors and cut it then.'

'Oh, madame, it would spoil it.'

'Do as I bid you. Fairy godmother must be obeyed. Now take the rosettes still remaining in the box, and fasten one over each shoe to hide the damage done.'

And with the beautiful rosettes of satin and lace, with a "V" encircled in seed pearl in the centre of each, hiding the gaps the scissors had made, the toilette was complete.

And so Viola went to the ball, not in a fine carriage drawn by prancing steeds, but the father's covered wagon, behind the old farm horse.—But when she appeared in the brilliantly lighted room it was rather late, for the old horse traveled slowly—the creamy white satin dress clinging to her slight, graceful figure, the pearls clustering around her smooth throat, her golden hair wound about the tortoise shell comb, her dimpled arms and shoulders just showing through the ancient lace, her innocent blue eyes looking shyly over the quaint fan, and her feet clad in the queer pointed shoes, half hidden by the great rosettes—the gay crowd felt, some of them (the fair maidens these) with bitter envy, that an unknown Princess of Beauty was among them.

And the Prince of the reigning house quickly followed his sister to welcome her, leaving a Night with diamond stars to sparkle for some more faithful worshipper. And again and again he and the unknown princess danced together until nearly daybreak, when a servant summoning her hastily—for the farmer father was tired of waiting—she flew to the dressing room and one of the rosettes bursting from its fastening on the way, away went the shoe it had helped to hold in place, down, down through the well of the winding stairs, to regions far below.

And Viola, having the enchantment of the night still strong upon her, never missed it, but hastily drawing in her boots, ran to the old wagon, jumped in, and drove away in the dim light of morning from the Prince and Fairy land.

But when she awoke from the deep sleep into which she sank as soon as she reached her home—the sun was then on its westward way—she discovered the loss, and while bewailing it the Prince rang at the door.

"I have found a slipper, or shoe, or something of the kind," he said, taking it from the breast pocket of his fur-trimmed coat; "and as it will not fit either my sisters, or my cousins, or any of the lady friends who with them bide, I thought it might fit you."

"It does not really," said truthful Viola, with her lovely blush. "I could not have worn it had it not been cut open at the instep—I have not an aristocratic foot—and that is how, the stitches that held the friendly rosette giving way, I came to lose it."

"That I, thank fortune! might find it. And now, Viola, dearest—"

But what need of saying more! You can all end the story for yourselves, I am sure, even to guessing that madame lived to be a hundred years old, and that never was fairy god-mother so loved and petted as she.

UNCLE REMUS'S CHRISTMAS DANCE-SONG.

[This song is sung with what Uncle Remus would call the "knee-racket"; that is to say, it is a "patting" song. If the reader will bear in mind that the rhythmical effect is based on time—on recurring and invariably pauses,—there will be no difficulty in catching the swing.

KIND TO THE OLD MAN.

"I raise you three dollars, father," said a Comstock young man who was in a little game of draw with his paternal progenitor the other evening.

"What are you doing that for?" asked the old man, rather peevishly.

"Can't help it. Got two pair."

The elderly gentleman threw up his hand, whereupon the youth showed his cards, disclosing the fact that he did not have even so much as a pair of deuces.

The look of disgust on the old man's face was intense, but it changed suddenly, for the next hand, which was dealt by his accomplished son, contained three aces.

"Mebbe you won't be so previous in your bluffing this time," chuckled the father, as he drew two cards and shoved a handful of his hard-earned silver into the middle of the table.

"I tap you," was the son's laconic reply, throwing up a $20 piece.

In his eagerness the old man did not notice that his boy had not drawn any cards, and so unhesitatingly called. He was downed. The boy had a flush.

After the old gentleman had left, the young man said, in the voice which was almost choked, and which showed plainly how much he was moved by the emotion of filial affection, "I had to do it, boys. You know how it is. Father has to work very hard, and it was doing him a favor to break him quick, so he could get home and have his regular sleep. Barkeeper, fetch in the drinks."—Virginia City Enterprise.

WISE WORDS.

He who knows most, grieves most for wasted time.

Fortune doesn't change men; it only unmakes them.

One hour of justice is worth seventy years of prayer.

An idle man is like stagnant water; he corrupts himself.

While you seek new friendships, cultivate the old ones.

We count by changes and events within us. Not by years.

Small cheer and great welcome make a nice merry feast.

Every man desires to live long, but no man would be old.

The milestone of to-morrow leads to the town of "never."

True worth is summed up in the faithful discharge of duty.

Detestation of the high is the involuntary homage of the low.

Avoid extravagant promises. State facts, and act up to them.

When a man is wrong, and won't admit it, he always gets angry.

A contemplative man can always employ himself in meditation.

Those whose courses are different can not lay plans for one another.

What matters if one has not gold in his purse, if he has it in his heart.

The greater our dread for crosses the more necessary they are for us.

Joy, and temperance, and repose, slam the door on the doctor's nose.

What sculpture is to a block of marble education is the same to a human soul.

Success leads to success. One point gained will continue to accomplish.

Never strike a horse that is pulling its best, even if the progress is slow.

To select well among old things is almost equal to inventing new ones.

He who laughs at cruelty sets his heel on the neck of religion and godliness.

It is better to humor the conceited than to seek to destroy their principles.

The doorstep to the temple of wisdom is a knowledge of our own ignorance.

A man in any station can do his duty, and in doing it, can earn his own respect.

There cannot be a greater treachery than to raise a confidence, and then deceive it.

Save something of what you earn. Youth and strength are not always our privileges.

We attract hearts by the qualities we display; we retain them by the qualities we possess.

Make yourself an honest man and you may be sure there is one rascal less in the world.

Be not over hasty in making a bargain. Study first both the advantages and disadvantages.

Reason from well-grounded precedents, and be not too confident of a pre-conceived opinion.

It's enough for a man to understand his own business, and not to interfere with other people's.

To endeavor to work upon the vulgar with fine senses is like attempting to hew blocks with a razor.

How many people would be mute if they were forbidden to speak well of themselves and evil of others.

It is easy enough to make sacrifices for those we love; but for our enemy, we have to struggle and overcome self.

That kind of religion is likely to be most popular which does not seriously interfere with what you intend to do.

Life is a struggle from the cradle to the grave. He is the better prepared for it who continually considers it in this light.

A fool in high station is like a man in a balloon—everybody appears little to him, and he appears little to everybody.

It is safer to affront some people than to oblige them; for the better a man deserves, the worse they will speak of him.

The mind profits by the wreck of every passion, and we may measure our road to wisdom by the sorrows we have undergone.

To think we are able is almost to be so; to determine upon attainment is frequently attainment itself. Thus earnest resolution has often seemed to have about it a savor of omnipotence.

The son of an emir had red hair, of which he was ashamed, and wished to dye it, but his father said, "Nay, my son; better so live that fathers shall wish their sons had red hair."

"Employment so certainly produces cheerfulness," old Bishop Hall used to say, "that I have known a man to come home in high spirits from a funeral because he had the management of it."

God has made no one absolute. The rich depend on the poor, as well as the poor on the rich. The world is but a more magnificent building; all the stones are gradually cementing together. There is no one who subsists by himself alone.

The love of display which results in vulgar ostentation is the result of selfishness, of a desire to excite the envy of others rather than the wish to share benefits with them—an effort to appear great without striving to be great in reality.

Character is human nature in its best form. It is moral order embodied in the individual. Men of character are not only the conscious of society, but in every well-governed state they are its best motive power; for it is moral qualities in the main which rule the world.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

THE NEW YEAR.

"Our fathers' God! from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,
We are to-day, united, free,
And loyal to our land and Thee,
We thank Thee for the era done,
And trust Thee for the opening one.

O! make Thou us, through centuries long,
In peace secure, in justice strong;
Around our gift of freedom draw
The safeguards of Thy righteous law;
And, cast in some diviner mould,
Let the new cycle shame the old!"

So the pen of Whittier dedicated the Centennial year, and his beautiful poetic sentiments apply freshly and truthfully to our beloved country at the dawn of 1883.

Never in the world's long history did a people have greater cause to render thanks for national blessings than those of the United States at the present time.

Health, Peace and Progress, the three guardian angels of happiness and material prosperity, wield their sceptre from frontier to frontier, while an aroused public patriotism has given well grounded hope that political profligacy and mercenary greed, those insidious and most dangerous foes of free, representative institutions, have been blocked in their work of devastation.

May the New Year prove that the power of the people remains supreme, and that their inalienable rights and interests are secure from all enemies, either within or without the broad expanse of the American Union.

Let Country be the living theme—

"What to us are centuries dead,
And rolling years forever fled,
Compared with thee, O! grand and free
Columbia—sweet land of liberty?
Strong with the strength of verdant hills,
Fresh with the freshness of mountain rills,
Pure as the breath of fragrant pine,
Glad with the gladness of youth divine,
Serenely thou sittest throned to-day
Where freedom's zephyrs round thee play.
Thou art not old with thy hundred years,
Nor worn with toil, or care, or tears;
But all the glow of the summer time
Is thine to-day in thy glorious prime!"

The New Year is joyous because of the cheering personal hopes it creates, the opportunity it affords for the greetings of friendship, and the making of new resolves.

That it may be the harbinger of manifold blessings to all, the allayer of strife and the promoter of harmony, the inspirer of charity and the opponent of intolerance, the demolisher of evil and the architect of good, scattering along its pathway equal rights and rich rewards for honest industry, is our heartfelt desire.

To every one within reach of our editorial salutation, young or old, high or low, rich or poor, white or colored, native born or naturalized, Democrat, Republican or Greenbacker, we wish a happy, happy, HAPPY NEW YEAR!

"ONE OF THE FOOLS."

Judge Tourgee, who not very long ago, after figuring as a Republican "boss" in North Carolina, worked a literary "boom" against the South, in the graphic language of our times, "for all it was worth," and who now edits a periodical called Our Continent, has evidently heard of the November elections. He calmly observes that "the late Republican party is as dead to-day as if Cheops had been builded over its ashes." Cheops is commonly thought to have been a builder and not a building, but that doesn't matter. In the way of monumental ingratitude this utterance of the author of "A Fool's Errand" is really quite as imposing a thing as the Great Pyramid is in the way of architecture.—N. Y. World.

While the ostensible editors of newspapers charged with libel are being called upon to answer to criminal indictments, it would not be amiss for Grand Juries to inquire into all the legal responsibilities attaching to the publication of these libels. Just as the incendiary would be harmless without the torch, so these libelers would be harmless if not furnished with the weapon they abuse, and his punishment alone does not meet the case. Legally the man who lurks in the background, while the assassin whom he furnishes with the weapon stabs his victim, is as bad as the assassin; morally he is worse—for he is a coward. Give the law its full course and let all who are responsible for libel be made to answer.—Trenton American.

The will of the late Henry Sitgreaves of Phillipsburg was read Saturday, and though the estate (which is valued at $80,000) is divided very unequally, no contest will be made. The reasons for making distinctions among the heirs are made in the will. During his lifetime Mr. Sitgreaves gave to some of his children considerable money. By the will his daughter, Anna Sitgreaves, receives the homestead and furniture and $19,000; to Mrs. Henry Heltzman, a daughter, $9,000; to Mrs. Walter, a daughter, $9,000; to Mrs. Merch, his widowed daughter, $7,500; to Mr. John Walter, husband of a deceased daughter, $9,000; to Lewis Sitgreaves, $9,000; to Charles, $4,000, entailed, and to his son Mack, $700.

The Republican press and politicians of this State are trying to work up a plan to prevent a joint meeting of the Legislature this winter, and thus retain for another year the present Comptroller in office, in the hope that next year they will have a majority on joint ballot. Let the Senate act factious if they choose and refuse to go into joint meeting, or confirm the Governor's appointments. The responsibility will rest on them, and they will have to answer for their factious course to the people at the next election. Let the Democrats do their duty and act wisely, and they have nothing to fear.

Ex Councilman Benjamin Squier, of Rahway, who was convicted at Elizabeth, a few days ago, of having embezzled town funds, which he had put up as collateral for money advanced to him, was on Wednesday last sentenced to three years' imprisonment. Counsel for Mr. Squier asked for a writ of error, which was granted. The necessary bill of exceptions was filed and bail renewed in the sum of $3000. The writ of error is returnable at the February term of the Supreme Court.

On Wednesday last the Court of Common Pleas approved the renewed bond of Sheriff Forsyth, dated Nov. 14th, 1882. It is understood that the case will be laid before the Supreme Court at Trenton on Saturday next, when that body will determine on the legality of the Sheriff's action.

GLEANINGS.

The rebel-Pashas in Egypt were degraded on Monday, after which they started for Ceylon.

A. C. Nutt, State Cashier, was shot and killed at Uniontown, Penn., Sunday, by a member of the Legislature.

A Jersey City firebug pleaded guilty to an indictment for manslaughter and was sentenced to ten years' hard labor in State Prison.

Forty years ago it took four days and a half to go from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. People get away from Philadelphia faster nowadays.

At Highlands, there are many cases of malarial fever. A Board of Health has been organized, and all stagnant pools are to be drained.

The distinction is claimed for Worcester, Mass., that it has more telephones in use in proportion to its population than any other city in the world.

Teresa Sturlata, the Chicago murderess, after being sentenced to one year in the Penitentiary, announced her intention to go on the stage after her release.

State Prison Keeper Laverty received a valuable diamond pin as a gift from the other prison officials on Saturday. Many prominent people of the State were at the presentation.

Judge Arnoux dismissed the injunctions obtained by New York Hebrew merchants permitting them to remain open on Sundays. He holds that they must obey the laws, as Christians are obliged to.

It required six Jersey City policemen to lodge Kate O'Neil, a woman with but one leg, in a cell on Friday night. She was reeling about on crutches boisterously drunk, but fought desperately in resisting arrest.

An effort will be made during the next session of the Legislature to pass a law allowing local school boards the right to levy and collect taxes for the erection of buildings and the payment of ordinary school expenses.

A tramp, who said his name was John Cole, on Saturday night went to bed under a freight train in Jersey City, and when the train moved his legs and an arm were crushed. He was removed to the hospital in a dying condition.

Among the Democratic candidates mentioned for the Comptrollership, are Col. Wm. P. McMichael, of Burlington, Wm. W. Swayze, of Hunterdon, Ex-Gov. Rodman M. Price of Bergen, A. J. Smith, Gen. R. F. Stockton and F. S. McNeely, of Mercer.

St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church at Riverside, which was burned last March and has just been rebuilt at a cost of $15,000, was dedicated Sunday, Bishop M. J. O'Farrell of Trenton performing the dedicatory services, and the pastor, Rev. Fidelis M. Voigt, blessing the church.

The first session of the New Jersey Legislature was held March 1, 1683, two hundred years ago, making the incoming Legislature the Bi-Centennial of New Jersey. It is suggested that appropriate observance of the occasion be had, and that Maj. Gen. William S. Stryker be invited to deliver an address.

Dorsey, the Star route manager, says it cost $400,000 to carry Indiana in the Presidential campaign of 1880, and he knows, and that it required four times that amount to carry New York, which was over one million and a half, and about which Arthur has full knowledge. Let the books of the National Republican Committee be opened. Dorsey is the Secretary.

Mrs. Ellen Dunn, of Hoosick Falls, a lady 50 years of age, threw her arms around her husband's neck, Monday afternoon, and exclaimed: "I thank God that we have had such a happy Christmas." The husband replied that he hoped they would live to see many of them, the wife kissed him, turned away, passed into an adjoining room, and dropped dead of heart disease.

Great excitement was caused in Newark Saturday afternoon by a fire in the factory of Looker Brothers, No. 845 Broad street. The flames spread rapidly and it was feared that there would be large destruction of life and property. No lives were lost, the destruction of property being about $20,000, all covered by insurance. The whole fire department was called out. Travel on the main streets of Newark was interrupted for over an hour and 20,000 persons crowded the vicinity of the fire.

The Paterson Guardian says: "It is understood that John Ryle has changed his mind and concluded not to contest the election of William Walter Phelps to Congress." But Mr. Ben Urner of this district is no such sort of man. He is determined to show the Kean family that promises made must be promises kept, or else there will be Old Nick to pay and no pitch hot. There has been a little lull in the alleged prosecutions lately, and it is barely possible that the "party of the first part" has come down handsomely to the "party of the second part." If not, we advise him, the party of the first part, to not delay the matter too long, otherwise the party of the second part may proceed to extremities.—New Brunswick Times.

There is to be a Grand Shooting Match at "Uncle Ben Connett's" Dog Corner tavern on New Year's day, at which plenty of pigeons will be furnished. Two $50 matches are to be shot off that day. Shooting commences at 10 o'clock, a. m.

There was a large attendance at the Pigeon Shooting match at Metuchen on Christmas Day, and some excellent exhibitions of skill manifested. In the important match of the day, between Mr. VanSicklen of Metuchen and a New Brunswick gentleman, the former won the match.

The publishers of The American Angler, a weekly paper devoted entirely to fishing and fish culture, announce that on and after January 6th, 1883, they will publish from week to week a series of exhaustive essays upon the game fishes of America. These essays will include a popular and scientific description, structure, coloration etc., of fish; their habits and habitat; description of tackle used; and when, where and how to catch them, etc., etc. The articles will be written by the best angling authors in America, and the series will treat of all the game fishes of the salt and fresh waters of the continent, and when completed will form a text book for anglers, a great want not filled by any existing publication. The American Angler is the only paper of its kind that is published in this country. Its weekly pages are replete with information of special value to the fisherman and its fishing reports, in season, form a practical guide to the angling tourist. The publication offices are in New York city at 13 and 15 Park Row, and the subscription $3.00 a year.

The Rev. Thomas Simms of Middletown, Conn., will occupy the pulpit of the M. E. church on next Sunday morning, and the presiding elder of the district in the evening.

On Tuesday morning last Anna Moffett, aged 13 years, daughter of Albert W. and Helen M. Moffett, who formerly resided at Westfield, but moved to Clark Township last fall, died from that dread disease, diptheria. She was buried on Thursday. Their youngest and now only child, lies very low from the same disease.

Ezekiel Clark, aged 89 years, formerly a resident of Westfield, died on Friday last at the residence of his son in Dover, N. J. His remains were brought from Dover to Westfield on Saturday last. The Sunday School of the Congregational church of Christ, held its Christmas festival on Tuesday evening last. The children assembled at 5 p. m. and two hours or more were pleasantly passed in social enjoyment. After partaking of refreshments the school formed a line and marched into the audience room of the church where a large number of parents and friends were waiting to witness the exercises. In place of the reading desk, which at other times occupied the platform, stood a large evergreen tree brilliantly lighted and loaded down with the usual Christmas fruit. It might be here mentioned that the children have donated this tree with its load of dolls, toys, books and other gifts to the Children's Home of Jersey City, the inmates of which will in due time doubtless be gladdened by the timely gift. After prayer by the pastor, the Rev. Henry Neill, and the singing of some Christmas hymns by the school, the Rev. John Kershaw of Bound Brook, delivered a very interesting and appropriate address. Short speeches were made by the Pastor and by the superintendent, Mr. Hosford whose equanimity was somewhat stricken at one period by being made the subject of a well worded address by one of the teachers, Mr. Ladd, who in the name of the School presented Mr. Hosford with an elegantly bound volume of Henik Poems. This being followed by the gift of a beautiful book from the infant class, decidedly surprised Mr. Hosford who somewhat regained self possession and suitably acknowledged both tokens of esteem. The distribution of gifts to the school and general congregation was a success of the festival and after which the exercises closed. The officers and teachers are to be congratulated for the good order and discipline which the school exhibited.

On Christmas evening the Sunday School of the Methodist church, held its Christmas festivities. The organ was presided over by Miss Ella Ferris and Mr. Chas. H. Day cornetist. Long before the hour for the commencement of the exercises, the large audience room of the church was fairly packed with human beings, their not being standing room left. At six o'clock the children marched in by classes to the seats reserved for them. The order of exercises was as follows: Organ voluntary, prayer by the pastor, the Rev. Warren Hoagland, and chant by the school "our Father in Heaven," after which praise texts were read by the Superintendent Mr. R. R. Sinclair, and by the school and congregation, singing "Joy to the world the Lord is come." At this time a short address of happy greeting by the pastor to the school and audience, which was followed by singing by the school and responsive readings, and a Christmas hymn by the scholars of the Zion Mission, then the story of the advent was told by thirteen boys and girls, who deserve great credit for the way they recited their respective parts. A recitation by Pearlie Whitaker, who was Santa Claus. At this stage of the proceedings Santa Claus and his family arrived upon the platform in a large sleigh, and began distributing presents to the children. Several of the children were recipients of very handsome and valuable presents. The platform of the church was handsomely trimmed with evergreens and two large Christmas trees were brilliantly lighted. During the exercises the Supt. Mr. Sinclair, read a letter from the person in charge of the Five Points Mission School of N. Y., acknowledging the receipt of a large dry goods box which was sent to them by the school, last week filled with clothing, boots and shoes, dolls and toys for the children of the Mission school.

The Christmas exercises of the Presbyterian Sunday School were held on Wednesday evening Dec. 27, inst. The audience room of the church had been tastefully decorated for the occasion. The platform had a large arch of evergreens erected across its front which was brilliantly illuminated, in the rear of which was two large Christmas trees. Suspended from the centre of the arch was a large star, with the motto "Star of Bethlehem", worked in evergreens about it. From the centre of the high ceiling large ropes draped in graceful curves to either side of the church, from the centre of which, in the act of flight was suspended a large dove. The exercises commenced at promptly 7:30 p. m., at which time the church was filled with people to overflowing. The organ was presided over by Miss Jennie Pierson. The Rev. Jos. Greaves, Supt. Sinclair of M. E. church, Supt. Grant of Baptist church. The Pastor of the church, Rev. N. W. Cadwell and Supt. Elston of the Sunday school, occupied the platform. The exercises were begun with an organ voluntary, followed by a song by the school. Scripture lessons were read by R. R. Sinclair; Invocation song by the school "List to the Bells," responsive readings "Love and Mercy," by Supt. Elston, and the school, the song "O list to the Grand old Choral"; responsive readings "Truth, Magnificat," by A. T. Grant and the school. At this point a few chosen remarks were delivered by the pastor, the Rev. N. W. Cadwell and Prof. Elston, after which the Christmas gifts were presented to the children. The pastor, officers and teachers of the school were recipients of several fine and valuable presents, which were received and accepted with thanks. The pastor presented to several members of the infant class, some splendid books for their prompt attendance at school. The officers and teachers deserve great praise for the splendid manner in which they decorated the church, which was referred to and the design explained by the pastor in his remarks.

Attention, Democrats.

J. E. MARTINE, President.
L. F. WADSWORTH, Secretary.
Plainfield, Dec. 22, 1882.

OH for an Opera House!

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

WHAT did you [illegible]

Now commence to practice on writing [illegible]

AFTER the first day of the new year, it will be ex-Mayor Randolph.

COMMENCE the new year by subscribing for THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

THE new council and city officers-elect, commence their duties next Monday at noon.

WE have an efficient street commissioner, why should there be any change in that office?

THE public should not fail to see Belle Gilbert as "Esmeralda" to-morrow evening at VanDeventer Hall.

THIS city need not be afraid of burglars for some time to come, as they are through with Plainfield.

WE are pleased to note that "no wine" on the New Year's table will be the order of the day, next Monday.

REMEMBER to-morrow evening, at Van Deventer Hall, the only chance this season of witnessing "Esmeralda."

IN Philadelphia the practice of tooting horns in the public streets on Christmas and New Year's days is forbidden.

THE Rt. Rev. Bishop Wigger of the Newark Diocese, is expected to be present at the St. Mary's Fair, this evening.

IN our column of "Wants," will be noticed an advertisement of table board for gentlemen and pleasant rooms.

THE singing by a double quartette at the Trinity Reformed Church, last Sunday, was quite a feature of the services.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, is next Wednesday evening.

IF we are to have a new Corporation Counsel let us hope that he will be as able a one as at present occupies that position.

BEGINNING next Monday and continuing throughout the winter, Peck will close his store at seven o'clock each evening.

THE one who rang the alarm Sunday morning, certainly earned his dollar. Full fifteen minutes the old fire bell rang out its warning.

THE Rev. A. V. V. Raymond preached, last Sunday evening, a most instructive sermon on the origin of the many customs of Christmas celebration.

THE attendance at the several Sabbath Schools has grown astonishingly of late. It will probably fall off now, and until the excursion season comes around once more.

IN our advertising columns will be noticed the announcement of the administrator's sale by public auction of a portion of the property of the late John Burke.

THERE has been a change in the time table between Trenton and this city. Trains now leave the former place at 10:06 and 4:22, instead of 10:08 and 4:25 as heretofore.

THE receiving of New Year's callers by the young ladies of this city, will be almost universal this year. Bountifully laden tables will also be more than usual, the custom.

REMEMBER that special scenery is presented with each act of "Esmeralda." Don't fail to witness the rendering of this drama at VanDeventer Hall, to-morrow evening.

THE breath expended by the small boy lately in the blowing of the enthusiastic tin horn, would go far towards the feeding of the lungs of the whole nation for the next seven years.

THE next entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course, is a lecture by George Makepeace Towle, Esq., late U. S. consul to France and England. The date is Thursday, January 18th.

SEVERAL persons have received involuntary ducking on Tier's Lake, from a too venturesome spirit in playing "tickley bender." After some one is drowned, it is presumed the foolhardy practice will cease.

IT is whispered that a Plainfield young lady was promised by a gentleman friend that he would fill her stocking if she hung it up "the night before Christmas." She did so, but—when he saw it he was undecided whether to buy the owner a piano or to put another kind of a calf in it.

MEMBERS of Warren Hose Co., No. 3, and some of their friends, will indulge in a grand Penuckle Parade next Monday morning. The procession will be headed by the Leber-Wurst Brass Band, and it is expected that not more than five hundred will take part in the line of march. It is particularly requested that no one will ask the boys in.

THE First Baptist and Methodist Sunday Schools held Christmas exercises together in the church of the former, last Sunday afternoon. The joint efforts of the two organizations in the way of sweet singing, responsive reading and other services, were never surpassed, while the processional of scholars was a sight seldom witnessed in such extent.

THE Seventh Day Baptist's during Tuesday evening last, held at their church special services appropriate to the present Christmas season. The principle feature of the occasion was the singing of a Cantata, "The Night of Glory," a musical collection of pleasing solos, duets, quartettes, and choruses, that were sung to the entire enjoyment of the large assemblage present.

THE Farmers Hotel on Somerset street, for so many years under the proprietorship of Mr. Warner Heidsloff, recently deceased, has fallen into new hands. Mr. Jacob Blimm, late of Mount Bethel, has secured a lease of the premises and will open about the first of February. This gentleman is possessed of considerable experience in the hotel business and so popular as a landlord among many in this city and Warren Township that his success is assured.

THE celebrated hams of Taylor, the well known pork-packer of Trenton, are considered by all who use them to be unexcelled, while we ourselves can personally testify they are unequalled. At the branch of Taylor's establishment on Park avenue this city, a large stock of these hams are always to be found; while Mr. N. J. Randolph, the agent in this city for these delicacies, is always on hand to give his patrons courteous attention.

"HOWORTH'S Hibernica and Double Show" gave an entertainment in Van Deventer Hall last Saturday evening to a small, but entirely gratified audience. The panorama was really a remarkably praiseworthy series of views, and the company that furnished the evening's amusement was composed of many talented artists. The entire programme was a pleasing one, and we feel assured that upon the occasion of a second visit the show will receive the greater patronage it deserved.

THE young people of our city, who number themselves among the friends of the members of Gazelle Hose Co. No. 1, are justly looking forward to a jolly time during the evening of Thursday, January 11th. Upon that date the members spoken of will give their Third Annual Ball, and the place selected is Van Deventer Hall—where the greatest comfort and convenience for the many dancers can be attained. Tickets admitting gentleman and ladies are to be had of the members at one dollar each.

A LECTURE in the city by Dr. De Haas, seems to be the sign for a storm or other drawback to the full house deserved. On Thursday of last week, at the Park ave. Baptist church, that speaker delivered his closing lecture in this city for—let us hope—the present season only. Quite an audience was present to hear of the "Giant Cities of Bashan" and was thoroughly interested and entertained. Those to whom is due the credit of securing the presence of Dr. De Haas in this city, certainly deserve greater success and patronage than was accorded.

DURING Monday night of next week, the members of the Plainfield Saengerbund and their friends will enjoy an evening's entertainment and dance in the society's rooms at the corner of Park and North avenues. Tickets of invitation were issued to none but the special ones who are numbered among the chosen acquaintances of the association, and, in consequence, an entirely select company will be brought together. These entertainments are the most enjoyable that are given in this city, and it is getting to be a desirable favor to secure one of the invitations. Their new year will open very happily.

COUNCIL meeting to-morrow evening.

A COLLECTION for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital was taken in the Crescent Avenue church last Sunday morning.

A FRENCH physician says that raw oysters and chicken soup will nourish any girl through at least six disappointments in love.

THE Grand Jury of Somerset County had a long sitting and concluded its work last Friday night, having found 21 bill of indictment.

BY special request, the Christmas services of the M. E. church will be repeated on next Sunday night, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. All are invited.

DIPHTHERIA is now ranked as a contagious and infectious disease. The same precaution to prevent its spread should therefore be taken as where cases of small-pox exist.

THE boys of Zephyr H.&.L. Co. No. 1, of this city, will visit Elizabeth next Monday evening as the guests of brother firemen at that place. A jolly time is looked forward to.

FOR a New Year's gift one of those Behr Bros. elegant upright pianos would be a thing of beauty and joy forever. You will find them at [illegible] store, 23 Park avenue.

PLAINFIELD'S Collector, [illegible] has every reason to feel gratified at the capital showing his forthcoming annual report will make. Our city has never had a more faithful or efficient official.

THE Christmas Festivals of the Sunday Schools yet to come, are those of the First Baptist, Grace Episcopal, Crescent Avenue, First Presbyterian, and Trinity Reformed; all to take place this (Thursday) evening.

IF a person is attacked on the highway by a dog he or she has a right to kill the dog, and the owner can be held accountable for any injury inflicted by the animal. If you are obliged to keep cross dogs, keep them tied up during the day time at least.

SO remarkably pleasing was the singing by the choir of the Crescent avenue presbyterian church on Sunday morning last, that it is the expressed hope of all who were so fortunate as to hear them, that a repetition of the anthems will be given by the same vocalists at an early date.

THE coachman of Mr. Streull, of Netherwood, was recently robbed of quite a large sum of money which he had laid up from the savings of his salary. Who stole it from the place where he had it concealed, is not known, but it is supposed to have been taken by a man engaged in work in the immediate vicinity.

AT Lyceum Hall, Westfield, last Monday evening, there was held a Grand Christmas Promenade under the management of that Jolly Two, Messrs H. D. Van Liew and F. H. Nelson. The music was furnished by Prof. Concklin of Newark, who kept the young folks in a continuous dancing humor. Messrs H. Lewis and W. E. Sisco were the able floor managers of this entirely successful affair.

ACCORDING to a recent ruling of the Corporation Counsel, the incoming Council can never organize. The supplement to the city charter requires "that the duly elected members of the Common Council shall meet in the Council Chamber on the first Monday in January, at the hour of eight o'clock p. m., for the purpose of organizing for the transaction of business." The Corporation Counsel holds that the acts of the Council on a legal holiday are illegal. "Where are we now?"

MISS Lilian Spencer, frequently referred to as "well known to many of our residents," was accidently shot in the face at Rochester, last Tuesday evening. The young lady was performing a part in the play of "The Creole," when the premature discharge of a pistol in the hands of another actor, tore the left cheek of Miss Spencer in a shocking manner. This lady's friends will congratulate her on her fortunate escape from worse damage, and upon the gratuitous advertising she is securing thereby.

SATURDAY and Saturday evening were so pleasant both overhead and under foot, that business among those of our merchants who advertise, boomed accordingly. A large trade in all kinds of Christmas gifts was experienced by those mentioned—in fact, it was almost impossible to traverse the streets after seven o'clock, and inside of many of the stores it was beyond the ability of any to move around with comfort. Such a holiday trade in Plainfield is not remembered by the "oldest inhabitant."

THE ladies of the Relief Association work so quietly that few know of the good constantly done. By thoroughly investigating all cases that [illegible] them, it is exceedingly rare that any unworthy character gets help. So the many generous hearted people of Plainfield who trust a portion of the money they would give the poor to this society, may rest assured that it is most justly distributed. Among the kindly thoughtful acts done recently was the gift of coal at Christmas time, to thirteen widows among our worthy poor.

CHRISTMAS in the churches was universally celebrated, Sunday, by the bedecking of the interiors with evergreens and the holding of special and appropriate services. The display of decorative taste in the draping of the walls and pillars, and the arrangement of blooming plants and flowers, reflected greatly to the credit of those whose labors were expended in such direction. So admirable and praiseworthy were the efforts of all, that any particular mention would justly give offence to those omitted. Therefore as space will not permit of a description due each alike, we make but this general notice.

BEFORE Justice Wadsworth, on Friday morning last, appeared one of our merchants as the complainant against a respectable women of this city on the charge of shop-lifting. The accused was represented by the Corporation Counsel and her defence of the statement that she had stolen a pair of gloves and put them in her pocket where they were found upon search being made, was to the effect that she might have placed them there without a thought of taking that which did not belong to her. The Justice, however, could not of course consider such a plea as being of any weight, and held the accused on her own recognizance to await the action of the Grand Jury.

THE First Day School at the Friend's Society held its usual festival, in the Meeting House on Peace street Christmas afternoon, and its numerous scholars appeared to enjoy themselves thoroughly. The long list of recitations appointed for the occasion were noted for religious and high toned moral sentiment, and the manner of their delivery elicited the approval of a large and attentive audience. An appropriate address was made by Aaron M. Powell, after which came an abundant supply of refreshments, and the bestowal of gifts closed the exercises of the day. Other schools may be more formal and grand, but none seek to confer greater home happiness upon the children than that of the Friends.

Personalia.

Mr. Clark W. Evans of this city has taken up his residence in Baltimore where he intends engaging in business.

Mr. Abraham Hooley has so far recovered from his recent attack of serious illness, that he is out once more looking quite well.

Fire Commissioner Gillies is up and able to be about once more. We hope to see him soon again at his place in the meetings of the Board.

Mr. John Quass, a former resident of this city, suffered from severe loss by fire at his place of business in Newark, on Sunday afternoon last.

The Rev. J. L. Hurlbut has been in great demand during the past week, as a speaker at the Christmas Entertainments of the little folks. His happy faculty of interesting the children was a feature of many a recent celebration.

Mr. Harry B. Kaufman, after a severe and prolonged illness, died at the residence of his father-in-law, Lawrence Meyers, Esq., on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral services will take place from No. 139 East Front street during to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett and daughter of Orchard Place, left this city on Saturday to visit for a few weeks in Baltimore and Washington. Their many friends in Plainfield join in the wish that their anticipations of enjoyment with Southern friends, and under sunny skies, may be more than realized.

Mr. Gabriel Bachman, the successful dry-goods merchant of West Front street, will retire from active business the beginning of the coming year, leaving his large establishment to the care of his two sons. The latter are capable and experienced young men, entirely able to carry on the business in the same successful way as has always characterized it.

Mr. Edward A. Vanderhoof, of Park avenue, was most pleasantly surprised on Christmas Day by the presentation to him of an elegant oil-painting of his wife; the portrait being the gift of Mrs. Vanderhoof's mother, the wife of ex-Councilman Meyer. The artist to whom was entrusted the work, Julian Scott, succeeded most perfectly in the difficult task of "doing justice to the subject," and all parties interested in the matter express their entire satisfaction. The frame, a magnificent piece of work, was constructed by Mr. Waldron of Front street.

An Appeal.

The usual Christmas dinner of the Warren Mission will be given to-day. Those who are desirous of donating anything acceptable upon such occasion, are requested to send it to the Mission after ten o'clock this morning.

I. O. O. F.

At the regular annual meeting of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, I. O. O. F. held recently, the following officers were elected to serve during the coming term: F. M. Sister, N. G.; J. T. Case, V. G.; D. R. Weaver, R. S.; P. Weaver, P. S.; T. J. Young, Treas.

A Relic.

The old hand engine, in use for many years by the "Gazelle" Engine Co. No. 1 of Plainfield, now occupies an honored position in the parlors of the above company. This engine was presented to "Gazelle" by the Board of Fire Commissioners some months since. After weeks of patient toil its steel and brass works have been polished so as to represent partially the pristine glory of years ago. The boys of No. 1 are proud of the old relic, which is zealously guarded and kept polished by "[illegible]" the janitor.

A Postponement.

As it has been found impossible to entirely complete the interior of the Congregationalist Chapel on Seventh street in time for the Dedicatory Ceremonies intended to take place on the second of January, such services have been indefinitely postponed. The Christmas enjoyments of the children, however, will occur in the new building on the evening of Wednesday next, and the pastor, Rev. Wm. Manchee, will preach and conduct communion services the following Sunday morning.

Mistaken Identity.

Mr. Albert F. Randolph of this city, formerly janitor of the Public Schools, was arrested in Jersey City last Saturday by an enterprising police officer, who saw in Mr. Randolph a strong resemblance to a Mr. Rich, who had been missed by his family from his New York residence and for whom a reward had been offered. A brother of Mr. Rich was sent for to identify the prisoner, and of course was much disappointed to find his journey useless. Acting upon the statement of Mr. Randolph as to who he was, the authorities telegraphed those of this city and the unfortunate man was taken from the care of his new acquaintances and received to the Morristown Asylum.

St. Mary's Fair.

The grand fair now in progress at St. Mary's Hall, for the benefit of St. Mary's R. C. Church of this city, is attracting a large patronage. The display of articles of ornament, use, and adornment, is really wonderful, and all the arrangements are unusually praiseworthy. Those in charge are to be sincerely congratulated upon the entire success of the affair, and deserve great credit for such assured result. Besides the articles we mentioned especially last week, are many other beautiful things that are disposed of by chances. Councilman Newhall donated a "Household" sewing machine that the agent for this city, Mr. Esculier, operates himself and sells chances for. Each purchaser of a season ticket, good for every evening of the fair, is accorded a number that represents a chance in three handsome articles to be raffled during the last day. These tickets are sold at seventy-five cents each, while tickets good for only one evening are but ten cents; the latter, however, entitle each holder to a chance in the drawing of some pretty thing raffled during that particular evening. The fair will be continued during next Monday.

Our Anniversary.

With this issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST we close the fifteenth year of its existence. As we look back at the results of those years, we certainly should be forgiven the feeling of just pride that arises, when we contemplate the complete success of our undertaking. The New Year—and our Sixteenth Volume—begins with a circulation larger than any other paper in the county, and an advertising patronage so extensive that even the large sheet we print is at times inadequate to the demands upon its columns. Starting a Democratic paper in so strongly Republican a city as this, was thought a foolish effort to attain an impossible result; but as our aim then and since was to publish the best local newspaper in Plainfield, and so conduct it that no offense to followers of other political faiths would be given, we achieved a recognition from all parties as a journal with an opinion expressed only in a courteous way and a record of news that was unequalled. We would ask for no greater pleasure, next year at this time, than to look back at the accomplished results of 1883 and see such cause for self congratulation.

"Esmeralda."

Those who have been so fortunate as to see the pathetic play of "Esmeralda" as produced at the Madison Square Theatre of New York, will need no inducement—beyond the mere announcement of its rendition in this city—to impel their presence at Van Deventer Hall to-morrow evening; while those who have not been so fortunate, will be glad of the opportunity offered to witness as perfect an interpretation of that intensely interesting and original dramatic work as is given anywhere. Although all the companies on the road under the able Frohman's direction are first class in every respect, still the combination of artists that will be with us to-morrow evening is far superior to those who favor cities of this size. The company is one specially selected to give the "Kirke" and "Esmeralda" in the large cities of the South, and being on its way to New York to rehearse "Young Mrs. Winthrop" before adding it to its repertoire, stops over Sunday in Plainfield. The cast includes Mr. R. F. Mc Clannin and Miss Belle Gilbert, both artists of recognized talent, and claimed by some to be unsurpassed in their respective parts. We forecast a full house and an appreciative audience.

Burglars Again.

Apparently the same gang of burglars whose exploits in the vicinity of Plainfield we recorded last week, visited this city during Friday night and rather impartially appropriated the valuable and movable property of some of our suburban residents. The home of Councilman Robert L. Livingston on Hillside avenue, was entered and robbed of all the silverware. Such of the articles as were plated were afterwards found in an out-house—having been tested by an apparent expert and rejected. Here, also, was found an overcoat that had been thrown away after being replaced by a better one taken from the residence of Mr. Bushnell, of Putnam avenue. From this latter place was also taken a quantity of solid silver, but the thief very thoughtfully took the owner's commutation ticket from the pocket of the overcoat and left it on the hat-stand for that gentleman's use. Through the rooms of this house, the progress of the marauder was marked by the drippings of a red candle that had been taken from the library of Mrs. Burton, just opposite. This lady suffered principally by the loss of a large box of Christmas presents that was carried away. Her grand-son, Burton Ford, was robbed of a valuable watch and chain, and other articles were taken. The home of Mr. Robert Miller, on Park Place, finished the travels of the thieves, and such property as was easily transported, was carried away. Chief of Police Dodd has taken charge of the matter and it is hoped further progress of the gang will be impeded.

Afternoon Concerts.

Arrangements have been completed for a series of popular afternoon concerts, at Steinway Hall, New York, beginning on Thursday, January 4th, at 2 o'clock, and the excellent scheme cannot fail of success if real merit in a performance counts for anything.

Mr. Theodore Thomas with his unrivalled orchestra has been engaged for these Matinees, and it is intended to produce works of light and pleasing character, but of real interest to musicians. There are scores of fascinating orchestral works by Tschaikowski, Rubinstein, Raff, Goetz, Massenet, Saint-Saens, Gade, Volkmann, Delibes and others, which come within the scope of popular concerts.

This is a mine of rich music, which will well repay working, and the large class of persons to whom the great symphonic works are yet as closed books may be graduated through just such concerts as those projected. In connection with the work of the orchestra, solo talent of merit, vocal as well as instrumental, will be heard. The following programme of the first concert (January 4.) will give some notion of the excellent promise of the series:

Overture—Water Carrier, - - - Cherubini
Concerto for piano and orchestra, E flat, Beethoven
Mr. Carl Baermann.
Aria—from "Figaro," - - - Mozart.
Miss Hattie Schell.
Symphony No. 3, in C minor, Scandinavian, Cowen
Piano Solos—a. Ballade in A flat, - Chopin.
b. Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 11, Liszt
Mr. Carl Baermann.
Songs—a. Es blinkt der Thau, - Rubinstein.
b. O sweet birdling, (new.) - Delibes.
Miss Hattie Schell.
Overture—"Tannhauser," - - - Wagner.

The general admission is fifty cents. Seats at fifty cents extra, can be secured in advance until Tuesday evening, Jan. 2d, 1883, and the twenty-five cent seats, on Wednesday, Jan. 3d, and on the day of the Matinee, at Steinway Hall.

Grand Jurors.

The Grand Jurors from Plainfield for the January term of Court are E. P. Thorn, Robert L. Livingston, John W. Laing, J. Frank Hubbard.

The "Royal Arcanum."

At a regular meeting of a Lodge of the new order of the Royal Arcanum, recently held in this city, the following were elected as officers for the coming year:

D. E. Titsworth, R.
Rev. E. M. Rodman, V. R.
Judson A. Brown, O.
Rev. T. Logan Murphy, C.
W. A. Wheeler, Jr., T.
Charles C. Moore, S.
W. J. Leonard, G.
E. W. Conklin, G.
W. L. Titsworth, W.
A. Shotwell, S.

Diphtheria.

The Philadelphia Record says that a gentleman residing in the northern part of that city, whose two little daughters were dying of diphtheria, saw in the Record, a communication, commending the use of sulphur in cases of diphtheria. As a last resort he made a trial of it, using washed flowers of sulphur, and applying it directly to the membraneous growths in the throats of the children by means of a common clay pipe. The effect was almost magical. Within two hours there was a complete relief, and in two days the children, who had been given up by their physicians, had completely recovered.

Bothered Editors.

The Boston Journal says: "Editors are continually bothered by the applications of people who wish 'to have inserted in your valuable paper' notices of the comings-out and goings in, the downsittings and uprisings of persons of whom they never heard, and in whom there is reason to believe the general public take but a languid interest. If he declines to publish the item of personal intelligence that is offered him he is thereafter abused by the individual who tenders it, while if he prints it he knows very well that he is throwing away valuable space. How to avoid such consequence is a problem over which many editors have grown gray without solving it.

Robbed During Their Absence.

The son of Dr. E. W. South and family, were visiting his parents on Front street over Christmas, when his residence in Philadelphia was entered by burglars and a quantity of property stolen. Mr. South returned home Tuesday morning to find that his front door had been bolted on the inside, and entrance could only be attained by means of a step ladder and the second story window. Inside a scene of great disorder met his eye. Every drawer had been ransacked and its contents strewn over the floor. A careful search had been made for valuables, but with the exception of a few small articles of jewelry and plated ware, but little was found. The solid silver had been stored in a safer place, and in addition to a big gas bill for lights left burning all over the house, the loss to the family was but small. It is known that the burglary had taken place after three o'clock of Monday afternoon, as at that time a friend of Mr. South's had been all through the house and found everything in perfect order.

A Third Visit By Fire.

At about 2:45 o'clock of Sunday morning last, the barn of James Brady, who occupies the property of Nathan Randolph on Park avenue, this side of the Fair grounds, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm bell in this city was rung loud and long, calling out the department which, however, turned back before reaching the fire under the mistaken impression that the burning building was outside of the fire limits. No effective assistance being available in the neighborhood so early in the morning, the entire barn was consumed including two horses a lot of hay and some farming utensils. This is the third time that Mr. Brady has suffered from fire. When living on the Randolph road his house was set on fire by tramps and slightly damaged, preceded by the destruction of his barn and its contents. There was a small amount of insurance on the property destroyed Sunday morning, but none on the barn.

The Plainfield Academy.

The regular Christmas distribution of medals at the school took place on Friday the 23d. Notwithstanding the stormy weather, quite a number of parents and others were present. The exercises were opened by Mr. Lyon who commended the boys for their regular punctual attendance, their faithful work and their cheerful and prompt obedience. Prof. Lewinsky followed with an address. The boys then followed with declamations in English and German. Although no special preparation had been made, the declamations were very well rendered. The method of teaching German by the conversational method was then shown. The medals were then awarded to the following boys for highest standing in the several classes: Messrs. Field, Marsh, Sandford, Polak, Cockfair, Fournier, Darby, Mayer, Waring and Moore. Of the younger pupils, Masters Tyler, Darling, Mayer, Jr., Roney, Thompson, Lowe, Shaler, Marsh, Jr., Smalley and Finch, received medals. The school has recently secured the services of Mr. C. A. Bien, an experienced and successful teacher, who with Profs. Lyon and Lewinsky, will no doubt contribute to sustain the highstanding the P. A. has always maintained in the community.

Buckelew-Dunn.

Although the elements out of doors last Thursday evening, raged as disagreeably as was in their power, yet inside the residence of the bride's parents at the corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets, all was pleasantness and peace, happiness and harmony. The occasion was the marriage of the youngest daughter of James M. Dunn, Esq., to Mr. Peter R. Buckelew of West Fifth street. The Rev. D. J. Yerkes officiated in the binding of the bonds that made them "no longer twain but one flesh", while the large number of invited guests present united in the pleasant privilege of wishing the happy pair a long life together of joy and prosperity. Succeeding these customary customs, a bridal supper was served in a style that reflected credit to the caterer whose services had been secured, during and after which able performers discoursed sweet music to the gratification of all. The presents were many and costly; the parents of the bride giving a tea set of silver, and the groom's father starting the pair out in life with a cheque for a generous amount.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckelew left Plainfield on the 11:11 train the same night and passed a brief honeymoon in New York city, returning Saturday to Plainfield. They will leave Tuesday for a trip to the West, extending some months.

An Opinion.

The opinion of the Corporation Counsel with respect to the duty of the mayor, as to the signing of warrants ordered drawn by the Council, is too long to be printed in full; but the salient points seem to be as follows:

The Charter gives the Common Council sole direction and control of disbursements from the City Treasury. The ordinance providing for the issue of warrants, as adopted by the Common Council and approved by the Mayor June 4th, 1873, was a valid exercise of charter powers, and the direction therein that the warrants are to be signed by the Mayor, is mandatory—the signing, like the signing of licenses, being a ministerial act. If the mayor was impowered by implication to withold his signature, he would possess an absolute veto power over the action of the Council in ordering disbursements of the City's moneys, there being no method anywhere provided for further action by the Council. The resolution merely determines the ministerial duty of the Mayor. If the action of the council in ordering the warrant was in violation of the charter or an ordinance, or rule of law, the courts would not compel the Mayor by mandamus to sign the warrant. The objection urged that the claim in question had been "definitely disallowed by the court" on the plea of the statute of limitations, does not render the action of the council illegal. The statute of limitation does not pay a debt, it only bars the remedy by suit; the judgment of the Circuit Court decided no more. If this debt ever existed, it still remains. The Counsel further says: "whatever may be true as to the wisdom or policy of the Council's action, I know of no law which prevents their paying a debt because it is over six years old." The resolution of the Council appropriated so much money in the City Treasury to the claimants, and the ministerial acts of the President of the Council, the Mayor, City Clerk, and Treasurer, should follow as pointed out by the ordinance.

MR. Charles Cook the faithful carrier of the CONSTITUTIONALIST, will on Monday morning next call upon the subscribers of this paper whom he has, for the past year, served with their weekly record of news. His devotion to the service of the papers' patrons, certainly deserves a generous return and we feel assured that such will be his reward. Desiring to be impartial in his attention, he will call the next morning upon those he finds it impossible to see when he makes his first visit.

What to do in Case of Diphtheria.

When a child or young person has a bad odor to its breath, and especially if it has fever, it should be immediately separated and kept secluded from all other persons except the necessary attendants until it is ascertained whether or not the disease is diphtheria or some other communicable disease. Every person known to have diphtheria should be promptly isolated from the public. Children residing in a house where the malady exists should not attend school.

When a case of diphtheria is fully developed the patient must be removed as far as possible from the rest of the family, the room cleared of curtains, carpets, woolen goods and unnecessary furniture, and well ventilated by open windows and fires, if necessary; cleanliness should be maintained, and a basin charged with chloride or carbonate of lime for the use of the patient in expectorating. The clothes of the person should be kept clean by frequent changes, and a tub of water and carbolic acid kept in the room for the reception of bed and body linen. Small pieces of rag should be employed instead of pocket handkerchiefs, and each piece burned after being used. Nurses are advised to wash their hands in a carbolic acid, or permanganate potassa solution when soiled by contact with the patient. Discharges should be received into vessels containing a disinfectant, and a sheet moistened with a strong solution of carbolic acid, and suspended outside the door of the room across the passage way leading to it, is also necessary.

When patients recover or die, the room they have occupied should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected by washing with chloralum or carbolic acid soap, the wall paper removed and the rooms fumigated by burning sulphur in an iron dish, and then kept closed for several hours.

Persons whose throats are tender or sore from any cause should avoid possible exposure to the contagion of diphtheria. It is also urged that sewer connections and other carriers of filth should be well ventilated and disinfected; children not allowed to breathe the air of any water-closet, cess-pool or sewer into which discharges from diphtheria patients have entered, nor to drink water or milk which has been exposed to such air.

The public are cautioned to "beware of any person who has a sore throat; do not kiss such a person or take his or her breath; do not drink from the same cup, blow the same whistle, nor put his pencil or pen in your mouth. Do not wear or handle clothing which has been worn by a person during sickness or convalescence from diphtheria."

The New York Theatres.

So favorable are the arrangements of the Central R. R. for those of our residents who favor New York theatres with their patronage, that Plainfielders are enabled to enjoy witnessing the new plays and light operas of the day as presented at the various theatres of the city. The correct thing, just now, is the forming of parties and attending some one of the varied entertainments offered. We noticed last week at the "Bijou" a select coterie of our citizens intensely enjoying Rowsco's wonderful duplication of the acrobatic Talmage—also drinking in the melodious baritone of Digby Bell. The charming Lucette, that sweet little wife of the unexcelled Ryley, also came in for a share of the appreciation lavishly expressed. and Laura Joyce was plainly admired. All this goes to show that even Jerseyites have the best of taste regarding musical ability and dramatic talent.

Messrs Gilbert & Sullivan's new opera "Iolanthe," has also received a favorable verdict of our public as a most beautifully written musical work. Though a Plainfield lady of the greatest judgment regarding such matters, tells us that the new work falls far below the combined compositions of the same authors in the past, yet its merit is undoubted; and while it may not equal the past successes of the composers it is unequalled by the efforts of others. Our residents will, however, take the first opportunity presented of seeing the opera and witnessing our former neighbor, Miss Sallie Reber, in one of the parts.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

"DID SHE DIE?"—"No; she lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time, for years, the doctors doing her no good; and at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about. Indeed! Indeed! how thankful we should be for that medicine."

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15, 1880.—GENTLEMEN—Having been a sufferer for a long time from nervous prostration and general debility, I was advised to try Hop Bitters. I have taken one bottle, and have been rapidly getting better ever since, and I think it the best medicine I ever used. I am now gaining strength and appetite, which was all gone, and I was in despair until I tried your Bitters. I am now well, able to go about and do my own work. Before taking it I was completely prostrated. MRS. MARY STUART.

"MASHED" BY THE WAX WOMAN.

AND EATING PANCAKES WITH PASTE-BOARD BETWEEN THEM.

"What was the doctor at your house for this morning?" asked the groceryman. "Is your ma sick?"

"No, ma is worth two in the bush. It's pa that ain't well. He's having some trouble with his digestion. You see, he went to the exposition with me as a guide, and that is enough to ruin any man's digestion. Pa is nearsighted, and said he wanted me to go along and show him things. Well, I never had so much fun since pa fell out of the boat. First I made him jump clear across the aisle, there where the stuffed tigers are, by the fur place. I told him the keeper was just coming along with some meat to feed the animals, and when they smelled the meat they just clawed things. He ran against a show case, and then wanted to go away. He said he traveled with a circus when he was young, and no one knew the dangers of wild animals better than he did.

"Well, you would a died to see pa there by the furniture place, where they have got beautiful beds and chairs. There was one blue chair under a glass case, all velvet, and a sign over it telling the people to keep their hands off. Pa asked me what the sign was, and I told him it said ladies and gentlemen are requested to sit in chairs and try them. Pa climbed over the railing and was just going to sit down on the glass show case over the chair, when one of the walk-around fellows with police hats took him by the collar and yanked him back over the railing, and was going to kick pa's pants. Pa was mad to have his coat collar pulled over his head, and have the set of his coat spoiled, and he was going to sass the man, when I told pa that the man was a lunatic from the asylum that was on exhibition, and pa wanted to go away from there. He said he didn't know what they wanted to exhibit lunatics for.

"We went up stairs to the pancake bazar, where they broil pancakes out of self-rising flour, and put butter and sugar on them and give them away. Pa said he could eat more pancakes than any man out of jail, and wanted me to get him some. I took a couple of pancakes and tore out a piece of the lining of my coat and put it between the pancakes and handed them to pa, with a paper around the pancakes. Pa didn't notice the paper nor the cloth, and it would have made you laugh to see him chaw on them. I told him I guessed he didn't have as good teeth as he used to, and he, 'Never you mind the teeth,' and he kept on till he swallowed the whole business, but he said he guessed he didn't want any more. But I thought I would split when pa wanted a drink of water.

"I asked him if he would have a drink of mineral water, and he said he guessed it would take the strongest kind of mineral water to wash down them pancakes, so I took him to where the fire extinguishers are and got him to take the nozzle of the extinguisher in his mouth and I turned on the faucet. I don't think he got more than a quart of the stuff out of the saleratus machine down him, but he reared up and said he'd be condemned if he believed that water was ever intended to drink, and he felt as though he should bust, and just then the man who kicks the big organ struck up, and the building shook, and I guess pa thought he had busted.

"The best fun was when we came along to where the wax woman is. They have got a wax woman dressed up to kill, and she looks just as natural as if she could breathe. She has a handkerchief in her hand, and as we came along I told pa that there was a lady that seemed to know him. Pa is on the mash himself, and he looked at her and smiled, and said good evening and asked me who she was. I told him it looked to me like the girl that sings in the choir at our church, and pa said, 'Of course it is,' and we went straight to where she was.

"Pretty good show, isn't it?" pa said, and put out his hand to shake hands with her; but the woman who tends the stand came along and thinking pa was drunk said:

"'Old gentleman, I guess you had better get out of here; this is for ladies only.'

"Pa excused himself to the wax woman and said he would see her later"—Peck's Sun.

THE BAD BOY AT BREAKFAST.

"Yes," said the boy, with a vacant look, "I take no interest in the pleasure of the chase any more, though I did have a little quiet fun at the breakfast table. You see, pa is the contrariest man ever was. If I complain that anything at the table don't taste good, pa says that it is all right. This morning I took the syrup pitcher and emptied out the white syrup and put in some cod-liver oil that ma is taking for her cough. I put some on my pancakes, and pretended to taste of it, and I told pa the syrup was sour, and not fit to eat. Pa was mad in a second, and he poured out some on his pancakes and said I was getting too confounded particular. He said the syrup was good enough for him, and he sopped his pancakes in it and fired some down his neck. He is a gaul durned hypocrite—that's what he is. I could see by his face that the cod-liver oil was near killing him, but he said the syrup was all right, and if I didn't eat mine he'd break my neck; and by gosh I had to eat it, and pa he guessed he hadn't much appetite and he would just drink a cup of coffee and eat a donut. I like to died, and that I think makes this disappointment in love harder to bear. But I felt sorry for ma. Ma ain't got a very strong stummick, and when she got some of that cod-liver oil in her mouth she went up stairs, sicker'n a horse, and pa had to help her, and she had neuralgia all morning. I eat pickles to take the taste out of my mouth, and then I laid for the hired girls. They eat too much syrup anyway, and when they got on to that cod-liver oil and swallowed a lot of it, one of them, she got up and put her hand on her corset and went out into the kitchen looking as pale as ma does when she has powder on her face, and the other girl, she swallowed a pancake and she went out and leaned on the coal bin. Then they got clubs and started to look for me, and I thought I would come over here. The whole family is sick, but not from love, like my illness, and they will get over it, while I shall fill an early grave; but not till I have made that girl and the telegraph messenger wish they were dead. Pa and I are going to Chicago next week, and I'll bet we'll have some fun. Pa says I need a change of air, and I think he is going to try and lose me. It's a cold day when I get left anywhere that I can't find my way back. Well, good-by, old potatoes.—Peck's Sun.

Illusions!—McStaggers (on his way home, having jumped over the shadows of lamp-posts, etc., brought up by that of the kirk steeple.) 'E-h?' (Pauses) 'Na' maind! 'Mo no help for it.' (Pulls up his pants.) 'Shall have to wade thish!'

Among the crowd watching the seals at a zoological garden were a newly-married couple on a bridal tour. They gave all the rest of the animals the go-by to observe the seals in the stone basin, and it was a full hour before they grew weary. Chilled by the raw air, and impatient over the waiting, the husband said: "Come, darling, let's go and see the hyenas. The feller who said them seals would fly around and sing at four o'clock either lied to us or else this 'ere watch has gone ahead on me ag'in."

BEER TO BE DEARER.

At the final meeting of the Beer Brewers of Westchester, Kings, Queens, and Suffolk counties of New York; Hudson, Essex, Union, Bergen and Passaic counties of New Jersey, held on Friday evening last at the Germania Assembly Rooms for the purpose of forming a permanent organization for mutual protection, Messrs. Scherringhausen, Katzenmayer and Clausen were elected permanent officers for 1883.

The members of the association agree that on and after January 1 the price of beer per barrel will be $9 instead of $8, as heretofore. They also agree that no member of the association shall allow his agent or driver to spend more than 2 per cent. of his collections in any store (heretofore 10 per cent. has been allowed); that no member shall assist a saloon keeper to pay rent, tax of license, or shall help him to fix up his apartments, or shall cancel any part of a debt under penalty of forfeiture of assessment, which assessment shall be $2 upon every barrel of beer sold per month, and that the decision of the Complaint and Arbitration Committee shall be final in all cases. A fine of $100 will be imposed upon any brewer who shall lend a sign worth more than $5 to any saloon or tavern keeper. No beer shall be given to any association or charitable enterprise except by a written permission of the Board of Directors; that the money accumulated from fines or confiscation of funds through the expulsion of any member shall be divided among the remaining members, and that at the end of each month a written statement of actual sales shall be presented to the Board of Directors, and if an excess of sales over previous months, $2 per barrel in addition to previous month's assessment shall be forwarded under a penalty of $25 fine.

The Prang Prize.

The first prize for a Christmas card designed for this year, was awarded by Prang & Co., of Boston—who spent $4,000 in eight prizes—to Miss Dora Wheeler. Her's represents the want and sin of earth in the shape of a homely, haggard, gaunt woman, with two clinging children, leaning against a bare, Winter tree, standing on a globe, looking up for help to the heavenly light, where, in the centre of a golden sun, is the vision of the Mother and the Christ-child. The curve of the mantle of the Holy Mother forms a crescent shape. The sun, in which the figures float, forms a second, whilst the dark group below repeats the same curve. The coloring is delicate, the gold of the sun keeping it from coldness.

"The Best Practical Art Magazine."

The Art Amateur for 1883, judging from the publisher's announcement, will amply maintain its high reputation as the "best practical art magazine" of the day. To an abundance of beautiful, full-size working designs for painting, embroidery, wood-carving, and other art work, with copious practical instructions for all classes for amateur artists, it will continue to add a profusion of charming illustrations of porcelain, furniture, needlework, and bric-a-brac, together with an endless supply of entertaining information on decorative and industrial art. Numerous artists' sketches will be published as usual; the leading exhibitions will be largely illustrated and piquantly criticised, and artists of merit will be biographically noticed. A series of beautiful embroidery designs from the South Kensington Royal School of Art Needlework and a number of articles on china painting by Miss McLaughlin of Cincinnati, will be published during the year. It is not too much to declare, with the London Academy (which places it above any magazine of the kind in England), that The Art Amateur is a "marvel of variety, beauty, and cheapness." This opinion may be readily verified by sending thirty-five cents for a specimen copy to Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York. The subscription price is $4 a year.

A Christmas Gift.

For several years the London Graphic and the London Illustrated News have each sent out a costly Pictorial Christmas Number which has been eagerly bought by the people at large in both hemispheres; and these great pictorials have come to be regarded as a part of Christmas, and are considered very suitable and much-to-be coveted Christmas gifts.

This year Americans have taken up the idea, and Messrs D. Lothrop & Co., of Boston, have sent out a "Christmas" that far excels anything that London publishers have ever attempted. There is a greater refinement and beauty in the illustrations, and the stories, poems and articles, are all high class literature. It is in simple "black and white," but it is said that the letter-press and illustrations of the Lothrops' "Christmas"—the Christmas Wide Awake (Dec. No.)—cost over $20,000 and that authors and artists, here and abroad, have been busy for a year in its preparation. Bound in a new cover in colors, pronounced the finest cover in existence, it contains 144 pages and 150 pictures. Of the letter-press the Boston Traveller says: "No such store of high-class literature was ever gathered into one number of any periodical before;" and the critic of the Boston Times says of the illustrations: "They are genuine works of art, some of them exquisitely ideal."
